Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to discuss with interested bodies the future of objective 1 funding for the Highlands and Islands; and if he will make a statement. [3795]

Mr. Chisholm: The Government have not put forward detailed submissions at this early stage of the reform of the structural funds. We expect to put forward proposals after the results of the inter-governmental conference are known. In the meantime Scottish Office officials are in discussion with those from the local authorities and Highlands and Islands Enterprise about the future options.

Hopetoun House, Linlithgow

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the public funding made available to Hopetoun house, Linlithgow, over the last five years; what use was made of those funds; how they were invested; and what interest has accrued on them. [3655]

Mr. Chisholm: Awards under the Historic Buildings Repair Grant scheme to Hopetoun House Preservation Trust over the past 5 years have amounted to £272,400. In addition, Lothian and Edinburgh Enterprise have provided £72,600 towards refurbishments. These sums, paid from programmes for which I am responsible, have contributed towards work which has been satisfactorily completed.

I am also aware that sums of £190,465 and £4,000,000 have been awarded by the European Regional Development Fund and the National Heritage Memorial Fund respectively.

School Leavers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of (a) female and (b) male children leave school at 16 in Scotland, broken down into local authority areas; and if he will make a statement. [3658]

Mr. Wilson: Percentages for 1995–96, the latest year for which information is available are as follows. Pupils are regarded as having left on achieving the school leaving age in 1995–96 if they:

reached age 16 between 1 March and 30 September 1996 and left school on 31 May 1996; reached age 16 between 1 October 1995 and the end of February 1996 and left school at the end of the winter term in 1995–96.

These arrangements therefore allow some pupils to leave school while they are still 15 years old.

Local Taxation

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce proposals to allow Wales and Scotland to introduce different systems of local taxation from that being operated in England; and if he will make a statement. [2933]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 16 June 1997]: The Government's proposals for devolutions to Scotland and Wales will be announced in White Papers in due course.

Housing (Energy Efficiency)

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average energy efficiency rating for Scotland's housing stock; and if he will provide a breakdown by (a) local authority, (b) private sector and (c) housing association dwellings. [3305]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 17 June 1997]: This information is not yet available but the report of the 1996 Scottish House Condition Survey, which is expected to be published by Scottish Homes in the autumn, will include information on the energy efficiency rating of the housing stock surveyed.

Rough Sleepers Initiative

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to alter the framework for the distribution of funds under the rough sleepers' initiative. [3306]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 17 June 1997]: No decisions about the distribution of funds under the rough sleepers initiative will be taken until local authorities have submitted bids and I have received a report from the advisory group which has been established to advise on the merits of the bids received. The deadline for submission of bids is end-July. We have, of course, increased the amount available under the initiative this financial year by £1 million to £4 million.

Primary School Class Sizes

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are (a) the average and (b) the maximum numbers of children in primary school classes in (i) Inverclyde and (ii) Scotland; how many children are taught in classes with a number in excess of 30 pupils; and if he will make a statement. [3460]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 17 June 1997]: The latest information for 1995 is as follows:

	Inverclyde	Scotland
Average class size	25.1	25.3
Maximum number in class	34	35
Number of pupils in classes of 31 or more	867	76,913

The information excludes the small number of classes which consist of a large group of pupils being taught by more than one teacher. It covers single and two stage classes in publicly funded schools only.

Class sizes are a matter in the first instance for local authorities and the Scottish Joint Negotiating Committee for teachers in school education The Government have made clear the priority it attaches to raising standards in Scottish schools. I expect to work closely with local authorities to help achieve that objective. Last month I made available £13 million for early intervention and raising standards in primary schools.

I will arrange for comparable information for each education authority in Scotland to be placed in the Library of the House.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from institutions conducting research on E. coli relating to lack of funding. [3614]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 17 June 1997]: We have received no such representations.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department has budgeted for research into food-poisoning in 1997–98, broken down to show the funds dedicated to (a) E. coli, (b) campylobacter and (c) salmonella. [3616]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 17 June 1997]: The information requested is set out in the following tables. The majority of research in this area is funded by the Departments of my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Health and the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

The Aberdeen Protein Analysis facility has been awarded £495,000 (£418,000 in 1997–98) for new medical research that will include work on E. coli 0157.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the research grant applications which have been submitted to the Scottish Office for funding into the causes of E.coli, indicating which of these have been (a) accepted and (b) rejected within the last six months; what was the date when each was accepted or rejected; and if he will make a statement on the financial costs relating to each application. [3608]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 17 June 1997]: Eleven applications have been submitted to the Scottish Office since December 1996 of which eight were successful and one was unsuccessful. A further two applications are still under consideration. The applications are listed in the following table.

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 17 June 1997]: The second Scottish House Condition Survey was carried out in 1996 and the results are expected to be published by Scottish Homes in the autumn.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Sub-post Offices

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will lay down minimum standards for proximity of local communities to sub-post offices. [3380]

Mr. Ian McCartney: No. I have instituted a review of options for implementing our election manifesto pledge to grant the Post Office greater commercial freedom, and against this background the Post Office have agreed to suspend their Crown office conversion programme. However, whilst the Government are committed to a nationwide network of post offices, the location of individual post offices must remain an operational matter for the Post Office.

Fireworks

Mr. Burden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she intends to publish the revised draft firework safety regulations. [4831]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I propose to publish my proposals for new firework safety regulations tomorrow. Copies of the consultation document will be sent to a wide range of organisations with an interest in firework safety, including consumer groups, enforcement authorities, industry, firework user groups and other groups who use fireworks during religious and cultural festivals. Copies of both the consultation document and the draft regulations are being placed in the Library of the House.

Energy Council

Mr. Miller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the outcome of the Energy Council meeting held on 27 May. [4832]

Mr. Battle: The Council considered several issues and received reports on matters of interest. I represented the UK.

The Council discussed gas market liberalisation and the renewable energy green paper. First, the gas liberalisation directive: progress was made which I believe puts us on course to achieve a liberalising measure. Discussion centred on three key issues; a framework for market opening, take or pay contracts and emergent markets and regions. I emphasised the Government's commitment to the single market and called for a positive commitment to gas liberalisation through an effective third party access regime as well as market opening so that customers can get the benefits of competition.

On the basis of the views expressed the presidency concluded that on market opening a qualitative approach with quantitative criteria could form the basis for a compromise. This should include power generators and large industrial customers as eligible customers; a minimum percentage opening of gas markets; the possibility of Member States limiting market opening above a certain level; and a progressive market opening. On take or pay contracts discussion focused on the possibility of derogating from the directive if problems arose with future contracts. The presidency concluded that there was support for a system characterised by transparency, well formulated criteria and the involvement of national independent gas authorities and the Commission in any such decisions. On emergent markets the presidency concluded that there was broad support for the proposal to allow Member States only now developing a gas market and those not directly connected to another EU system and having a single external supplier, to derogate from parts of the directive. On emergent regions there was support for further consideration of an approach whereby regions eligible for derogations were listed in an annex.

The presidency's proposals were recognised as a step in the right direction and a good basis for progress in further discussions at a possible second Council on 24 June.

Council also reached agreement on a resolution on the Commission's Green Paper on a renewable strategy. There was some discussion of the Commission's proposal for a Council decision concerning a multiannual programme for the promotion of renewable energy sources in the Community–ALTERNER II. I emphasised that the UK was very positive about renewable and keen to achieve increased targets for renewable energy electricity generation.

There was an exchange of views on the Commission communication on an overall view of energy policy. I welcomed the communication as a first step in the review of Community programmes with an energy component and supported the concept of a framework programme to provide greater transparency for the citizens of Europe and value for money. In order to dovetail with this framework, I suggested ALTERNER II should be limited to a tighter two year programme. The Commission is expected to present a further communication before the end of 1997.

Council conclusions were agreed on climate change and energy policy. They recognised the contribution of actions towards climate change commitments particularly in the development of a renewables strategy, energy efficiency standards, long-term agreements with industry and an electricity industry initiative to address environmental concerns. The conclusions call for further analysis, the preparation of a post-Kyoto action programme and a strategy for the promotion of combined heat and power.

The Commission will submit a revised proposal on energy objectives which will take into account the European Parliament's comments.

The Council noted Commission progress reports on the external dimension of energy networks, the Energy Charter Treaty, the Euro-Mediterranean partnership and information on agreements with industry on energy savings and on co-generation.

The first structured dialogue on energy with the countries of central and eastern Europe (CEECs) focused on energy efficiency and Trans European energy Networks (TENs). CEEC ministers outlined the measures they were taking to increase energy efficiency, develop renewable and meet EU standards. The progress being made with the help of EU programmes, particularly in the areas of TENs, was welcomed and it was agreed that co-operation should continue.

Encryption Services

Mr. Otttaway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to make an announcement on the proposals put forward in the consultation document "Licensing of Trusted Third Parties for the Provision of Encryption Services." [3975]

Mr. Battle: An analysis of the responses to the Consultation Paper is currently underway. As soon as this process has been completed, and following discussion with ministerial colleagues, a statement will be made.

ACAS Report

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to receive the annual report for the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service. [4829]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The ACAS Report for 1996 has been laid before both Houses of Parliament. Copies are available from the Vote Office.

Travel Industry

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to introduce legislation which prohibits discrimination by the travel industry against single people. [3948]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The practice in the travel industry of charging single people supplements is based on commercial considerations and I have made the travel industry aware of this matter.

Caviar and Shark Meat Imports

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what quantity of (a) caviar and (b) shark meat is currently imported into the United Kingdom per annum; and if she will make a statement. [2700]

Mrs. Roche: In 1996 the UK imported 31 metric tonnes of caviar (sturgeon roe) worth £5.6 million. Information on shark meat is not available.

The convention on International trade in Endangered Species (CITES) will be holding its biennial meeting between the 9–20 June, in Zimbabwe. During the Conference proposals on the listing of sturgeon and monitoring of shark species will be discussed. The UK will consider all conference proposals carefully and in consideration with our colleagues from the other EU Member States.

Computer Systems

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to prohibit the sale of non-millennium compliant computer systems; and if she will make a statement. [2537]

Mr. Battle: The century date change is a particularly serious issue, but I do not believe that prohibiting the sale of non-millennium compliant computer systems is necessary.

It is for a well informed, individual purchaser to decide for himself what he needs in his own particular case. As for any other hardware or software supply issue, the details of conformance and performance are best covered in a discussion or specification and agreed by commercial negotiation. The law already provides a remedy for the purchaser of defective goods under The Sale of Goods Act 1979 and for services under the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, and I see no need for fresh legislation.

Radioactive Discharges

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the components of the liquid and gaseous radioactive and chemical discharges which have been released from (a) Sellafield and (b) Dounreay, stating the activity and mass of each chemical, since these plants became operational. [1845]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 2 June 1997]: I refer my hon. Friend to the BNFL publication "The Annual Report on Radioactive Discharges and Monitoring of the Environment" and in the case of Dounreay, the figures for liquid and gaseous discharges are contained in the HMSO publication, "Radioactive Waste Discharges form UKAEA Establishments and Associated Monitoring Results", both of which are available from the Library of the House. The amount and content of material discharged from Sellafield and Dounreay are subject to limits set by the Government's regulatory bodies.

Indonesia (Exports)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the practice of granting export licences for the export of military, security and police equipment or services to Indonesia; if she intends to continue with the practice; and if she will make a statement. [3384]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

We announced on 22 May, Official Report, column 135, an urgent review of the detailed criteria used in considering licence applications for the export of conventional arms worldwide. All countries will be judged against the new criteria.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Class Sizes (Colchester)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the total additional expenditure needed to reduce class sizes to 30 or under for (a) all five, six and seven-year-olds and (b) all eight, nine and 10-year-olds in the Colchester parliamentary constituency. [4177]

Mr. Byers: Our pledge is to phase out classes of over 30 for all five, six and seven year olds during the lifetime of this Parliament. We will be discussing with local education authorities and others the implementation of our policy following the publication of a White Paper this summer.

Class Sizes (Bolton)

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the (a) average and (b) maximum numbers of children in primary school classes in (i) Bolton West, (ii) Bolton North-east and (iii) Bolton South-east; and how many are educated in class sizes of over 30 pupils. [3081]

Mr. Byers: The available information is shown in the following table.

School Exclusions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many (a) primary and (b) secondary-aged children have been permanently excluded from school in each local education authority area in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [4169]

(2) how many children in special schools have been permanently excluded from school in each local education authority area in each of the last five years. [4170]

Ms Estelle Morris: The numbers of primary, secondary and special school pupils permanently excluded from school in the 1994–95 school year in each local education authority area are set out in the following table. Details of exclusions in 1995–96 are currently being collated and will be available later in the year. Secondary Schools (Staffordshire)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many secondary schools in Staffordshire offered the teaching of more than one foreign language to (a) GCSE level and (b) A level in the latest year for which figures are available; what assessment he has made of the advantages of all such schools offering more than one foreign language to these levels; and what plans he has to change the national curriculum requirement in respect of the number of foreign languages to be offered. [4032]

Ms Estelle Morris: The latest figures we have are for the 1995–96 school year and relate to pupils attempting GCSE or GCE A level examinations in two or more foreign languages. We do not have separate information on how many pupils were actually taught the languages. All of the seventy-one secondary schools in Staffordshire had pupils tgaking at least two GCSEs in foreign languages. The most popular languages were French, German and Spanish. Forty-six had pupils taking at least two GCE A levels in foreign languages. French and German were by far the most popular languages at that level.

All secondary schools must now teach pupils at least one modern foreign language, and they are free to offer more than one if they have the resources to do so and the demand is there. Foreign language learning is important in promoting international understanding, and in providing insights into other cultures, and our own. For the United Kingdom as a trading nation, competence in modern foreign languages is of crucial importance in an increasingly competitive world. Nineteen modern foreign languages are eligible to be National Curriculum foundation subjects.

We have promised stability in the National Curriculum at key stages 1 to 3 until the year 2000. The School Curriculum and Assessment Authority are currently monitoring and evaluating the implementation of the revised National Curriculum introduced in schools in 1995, and will provide advice to Ministers in due course on the need for and nature of any future modifications.

Teacher Training

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of people whom it will be necessary to recruit for teacher training in 1997–98 for the proper future staffing of schools. [4031]

Ms Estelle Morris: The targets for recruitment for teacher training in 1997–98, which were published in November 1996, are shown in the following table. Targets for future years will be reviewed in the autumn.

Initial teacher training intake targets in England 1997–98

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people were recruited for teacher training in all main subject areas in each of the last five years; and what are the projected figures for the 1997–98 academic year. [4030]

Ms Morris: The following table shows the number of new entrants to teacher training for the years 1992–93 to 1996–97. The Department does not make projections of future entrants.

Post-16 Education

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to encourage children to remain in the education system after the age of 16 years; and if he will make a statement. [3669]

Dr. Howells: We are currently developing a range of measures to encourage young people to continue their education after the age of 16, which will carry forward the commitments made in our election manifesto within the limitations of current public expenditure plans. This will be our Target 2000 programme. I hope to be able to make an early announcement on the details of a number of initiatives.

School Leavers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of (a) female and (b) male children leave school at 16 years, broken down into local authority areas; and if he will make a statement. [3668]

Dr. Howells: The following table shows the percentage of 16 year olds who had left school by LEA in 1994–95. Many who leave school at 16 will continue with their education and training, for example in further education colleges, sixth form colleges or in the workplace. Figures for males and females separately could only be made available at disproportionate cost.

Dyslexia

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for education and Employment what plans he has to help secondary school children who suffer from dyslexia. [3973]

Ms Estelle Morris: We need first to ensure that dyslexia is picked up before children reach secondary school. The Code of Practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs emphasises the need for the early identification of special educational needs. The proposals for a national curriculum for initial teacher training and baseline assessment will help teachers identify children with dyslexia when they first start school. Beyond that, the Department is currently funding a number of research projects directly related to dyslexia. One in particular at the Manchester Metropolitan University, aims to establish those practices for assessment and intervention which teachers have found effective for use in the ordinary classroom. We will make sure that the findings from these projects are disseminated to teachers.

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on future funding of specialist education for children at secondary school who suffer from dyslexia. [3974]

Ms Morris: Each local education authority is responsible for setting its own budget and deciding its priorities between and within services, including special educational needs. The Government's role is to set the overall framework for the funding of local authority services nationally, and to determine the way in which national "standard spending" totals are distributed between local authorities, through the standard spending assessment system. The way in which we propose to develop policy on provision for special educational needs will be set out in the forthcoming education White Paper.

Education White Paper

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will announce the publication date of the Education White Paper; and if he will make a statement on the timetable for consultation relating to it. [4211]

Mr. Byers: The White Paper setting out the Government's agenda for raising standards in schools will be published in early July. We are planning a period of consultation going well into the Autumn term. We want all those involved in education to join in that process and are seeking the most effective ways of making sure they are aware of and can respond to the proposals. We will be setting out details of the consultation process when the White Paper is published.

Quangos

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what changes he plans to make (a) the role and responsibilities of quangos and (b) the accountability of quangos in the education sector; and if he will make a statement. [4212]

Dr. Howells: We are currently examining the role and responsibilities of each of our Non-Departmental Public Bodies, or quangos, as part of the Department's spending review. Our policy proposals concerning the accountability of quangos, including those in the education sector, will be set out in the White Paper on Better Government announced on 3 June by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Secondary School Performance Tables

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will publish the next secondary school performance tables. [4253]

Ms Estelle Morris: We expect to publish the tables in November.

Technology, Languages, Arts and Sports Colleges

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will announce the next round of technology, language, arts and sports colleges. [4254]

Ms Estelle Morris: I am announcing today the names of the schools that are to be designated as Technology Colleges and Language Colleges as from September 1997. I hope to announce the names of those schools successful in the sports and arts competitions in early July.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the schools which have applied to his Department in the latest bidding round for technology, language, arts and sports school status. [4255]

Ms Morris: The following table are schools that have applied for specialist school designation in each of the current competitions.

Sex Equality Branch

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if officials from the sex equality branch of his Department will be transferred to the Department of Social Security. [4257]

Dr. Howells: The secretariat of the independent Women's National Commission has been transferred to the Department of Social Security along with five other officials from the Sex and Race Equality Division in my Department. The rest of that Division will continue to deal with issues affecting equality of opportunity for men and women (and racial equality) in education, training and employment.

Class Sizes (Buckinghamshire)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each primary school in Buckinghamshire the current numbers in each class at ages (a) five, (b) six and (c) seven years. [4258]

Mr. Byers: The information is not available in the form requested.

School Attendance

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action he plans to take against parents who do not ensure that children under 16 years attend school. [4259]

Ms Estelle Morris: Unauthorised absence blights pupils' educational chances. With our partners in the education service we will be examining the scope for reinforcing parents' understanding of their legal responsibilities for ensuring regular attendance at school, including wider use of home/school agreements. We will also be consulting about new guidance for schools and LEAs drawing on good practice in effective follow-up of unjustified absences and will encourage greater use of existing enforcement powers where appropriate.

Surplus School Places

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by local education authority the number of surplus places at (a) primary and (b) secondary level schools. [4260]

Ms Estelle Morris: I refer the hon. Member to the reply the former Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the then Member for Hornchurch, gave to the former Member for Eltham, now the Member for Worthing, West (Mr. Bottomley) on Monday 27 January 1997, Official Report, columns 99–102.

Travellers' Children

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what resources he will make available to ensure that travellers' children attend school; and what action he will take to ensure their attendance. [4261]

Ms Estelle Morris: In the current financial year 1997–98, the specific grant paid under Section 488 of the Education Act 1996 will be supporting some £10 million of expenditure to meet the additional educational needs of Traveller children. The grant provides in the main for the employment of specialist teachers and education welfare officers to help ensure that Traveller children have full access to school, and that parents know and comply with their responsibilities for their children's attendance.

Nursery Education

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the cost to local education authorities of gathering and documenting the necessary evidence from providers to justify payments for nursery children. [4153]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 17 June 1997]: The costs to local education authorities of administering the new arrangements for early years education should be less than those of administering the nursery education voucher scheme.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Identity Documents (Elections)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will include passports from New Zealand and other commonwealth countries in the list of identity documents required to allow an elector to vote in Northern Ireland elections. [1317]

Dr. Mowlam: There are currently 53 members of the Commonwealth all of which issue passports in differing formats and numerous languages. Adding some or indeed all of these documents to the list of specified documents would place an unreasonable burden on polling station officials who already have to be familiar with the standardised passport issued by member states of the European Union. It would be unrealistic to expect the Chief Electoral Officer's staff to recognise and verify the authenticity of such a range of documents which could increase the opportunities for forgery and abuse of the system.

Job Creation

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many jobs were created by the Industrial Development Board from 1 April 1996 to 31 March 1997; how many were the result of inward investment contracts; and what are the locations of these jobs. [3062]

Mr. Ingram: Information on job creations is not available in the manner requested or by location. However, details of jobs promoted by the Industrial Development Board in 1996–97 are available by district council area and are set out in the table. The Industrial Development Board's own research shows that companies create approximately 70 per cent. of all promoted jobs over a period of three to five years after acceptance of the Industrial Development Board's offer of assistance.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement about job creation and industrial development in Northern Ireland, with particular reference to inward investment in South Down. [3061]

Mr. Ingram: The Government attaches a high priority to strengthening the Northern Ireland economy and a key component of this is the activity of the Department of Economic Development and its Economic Development Agencies to help Northern Ireland companies become internationally competitive and to attract high quality internationally mobile investments leading to growth in durable employment.

The industrial development board's remit of attracting inward investment extends to all parts of Northern Ireland, including the South Down area. Under this remit particular emphasis is placed on encouraging investments to locate in disadvantaged areas and parts of the South Down constituency fall within these designated areas.

Inward Investment

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the inward investment projects where there is a reduction in the number of jobs in 1996–97. [3064]

Mr. Ingram: It is quite normal for company employment to fluctuate in response to market forces and technological developments. This is reflected in the individual employment patterns of nearly 220 externally-owned companies of which 95 per cent. experienced increases or decreases during 1996–97, resulting in a net employment increase of over 400 jobs.

Three externally-owned companies closed during the year, detailed in the following table:

Company	Employment at 31 March 1996
AVM Telecom Ltd.	7
Benelux Manufacturing (NI) Ltd.	231
Blackers Mill Ltd.	54

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many visits were made to each (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) district council area by potential inward investors in each financial year since 1992; and how many of the potential investors were brought by the Industrial Development Board to South Down. [3063]

Mr. Ingram: The information required to answer part (a) is not available and would involve disproportionate costs to extract. Visits arranged by IDB to Northern Ireland District Council Areas for potential investors in the last four years are detailed in the attached table. Comparable figures for 1992–93 are not available and would involve disproportionate costs to extract.

Beef Export Ban

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions she had with (a) ministerial colleagues in the EU Agriculture Council of Ministers and (b) the European Commission concerning the removal of the export ban on beef produced in Northern Ireland; and what was the outcome of the discussions. [3065]

Mr. Murphy: To date I have not had the opportunity to meet either with Ministerial colleagues in the EU Agriculture Council of Ministers or with the European Commission. However, my right hon. Friend, the Minister for Agriculture Fisheries and Food, who represents the UK on agricultural matters in the EU, met with Commissioner Fischler on 12 May, and with Commissioner Bonino prior to his attendance at the Agriculture Council of Ministers on 20–21 May. He also visited the European Parliament. At these meetings, Dr. Cunningham indicated the Government's determination to secure a lifting of the ban for all regions of the UK in accordance with the Florence Agreement. The Minister has also met with the Dutch President of the Council and has further plans to meet individual Council members. Further meetings with Commission officials are taking place in the wake of the Scientific Veterinary Committee's report of 11 June.

School Leavers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of (a) female and (b) male children leave school at 16 in Northern Ireland, broken down into local authority areas; and if he will make a statement. [3659]

Mr. Worthington: The information requested is as follows:

Percentage of 16-year-old pupils leaving school in 1994–95 (expressed as a proportion of all pupils in year 12)

Per cent.

Education and Library Board	Female	Male
Belfast	25	42
Western	50	61
North-eastern	50	69
South-eastern	54	66
Southern	46	62

It should be pointed out that many young people who leave school at 16 enter further education. in 1995–96 the proportion of 16 and 17-year-olds in full-time education (at school or FE college) in Northern Ireland was 71 per cent., and the proportion of young people entering full-time higher education by the age of 21 was 40 per cent.

Performance Targets

Mr. Desmond Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Planning Service in 1997–98. [4568]

Dr. Mowlam: For 1997–98 the following performance targets have been set for the Planning Service.

Volume of Output

1. To adopt the Larne Area Plan by 31 March 1998.

Quality of Service

1. To raise customer satisfaction relative to the determination of planning applications by 5 per cent.

2. To take 75 per cent. of minor planning applications to District Council within eight weeks of receipt.

3. To take 60 per cent. of major planning applications to District Council within eight weeks of receipt.

4. To issue 50 per cent. of all decisions on planning applications within seven working days of final Council consultation.

5. To reduce the proportion of invalid planning applications by 10 per cent.

6. To issue responses to 92 per cent. of property enquiries within 10 working days of receipt.

Efficiency

1. To achieve efficiency gains of 3 per cent. in running costs expenditure.

2. To establish by June 1997 targets for reducing unit costs for determination of planning applications and processing property enquiries.

Financial performance

1. To maintain expenditure within cash limits and to approved budget plans.

2. To maintain full recovery of the costs of determining planning applications.

3. To maintain full recovery of the costs of responding to property enquiries.

Mr. Desmond Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Roads Service in 1997–98. [4569]

Dr. Mowlam: For 1997–98 the following performance targets have been set for Roads Service:

Finance

1. To maintain expenditure within cash limits and to approved budget plans.

2. Within the provision allocated, deliver an overall efficiency saving of 3 per cent. in running costs.

Output/effectiveness

3. To maintain the Motorway network so that the proportion with a residual life[1] of more than five years exceeds 85 per cent.

4. To maintain the Regional Route Network so that the proportion with a residual life of more than five years exceeds 75 per cent.

5. To maintain the condition of other roads so that the overall Road Condition Index[2] does not exceed 85 per cent.

6. To reduce by 40 per cent. the total number of injury accidents occurring at treated sites over the three years following the works.

Quality of customer service

7. To achieve consistently the key standards of service set out in the Road User's Charter Statement.

Efficiency

8. The unit cost of managing the road network to be 2 per cent. lower, in real terms, than the 1996–1997 outturn figure.

[1] The maximum period remaining before the road will require major reconstruction. The higher the residual life figure, the better the condition.

[2] Obtained from analysing the results of inspection surveys covering a sample of the network. The lower the condition index figure, the better the condition.

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Department of the Environment's Environment and Heritage Service in 1997–98. [4570]

Dr. Mowlam: For 1997–98 the following performance targets have been set for EHS:-

Volume of output

1. Further develop effective regulation of discharges from Water Service installations including the preparation of effluent standards for 20 water treatment plans and placing these on the public register.

2. Bring about a 10 per cent. reduction in the number of "high" and "medium" severity pollution incidents by the year 2000 on 1996 figures.

3. Complete independent audit of all 32 municipal waste landfill sites and produce recommendations for compliance with new controls.

4. Submit proposals for the designation of four additional Special Protection Areas under the EC Birds' Directive and declare 25 Areas of Special Interest.

5. Undertake details habitat survey of 1,500 hectares.

6. Schedule 70 historic monuments to bring the total to 1,295.

7. Complete the re-survey of historic buildings in 30 wards.

8. Develop and produce 50 new information/education products (including publications and exhibitions).

Quality of customer service

9. Produce a round the clock response for all water pollution incidents reported and begin investigation of such incidents within 24 hours.

10. Respond to 90 per cent. of written enquiries or requests for information within 15 working days.

11. Issue 82 per cent. of licences, registrations, authorisations and consents within the timescales quoted in customer service guides.

Efficiency

12. Achieve 3 per cent. efficiency gains on running cost expenditure.

Financial performance

13. Monitor and maintain expenditure within cash limits.

14. Develop unit cost measures for appropriate activities.

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for Driver and Vehicle Licensing Northern Ireland in 1997–98. [4571]

Mr. Mowlam: For 1997–98 the following key performance targets have been set for the Agency:

Output

1. To dispatch 96 per cent. of Registration Books for new vehicles in 16 working days from receipt.

2. To dispatch 95 per cent. of Refunds of vehicle excise duty in 10 working days from receipt.

3. To dispatch 94 per cent. of vehicle excise licenses in 5 working days from receipt of postal applications.

4. To dispatch 95 per cent. of Duplicate Vehicle Registration Books in 6 working days from receipt of applications.

5. To dispatch 90 per cent. of ordinary Driving Licenses in 9 working days of receipt of applications.

6. To dispatch 90 per cent. of vocational Driving Licenses in 9 working days from receipt of applications.

7. To dispatch 90 per cent. of provisional Driving Licenses in 9 working days from receipt of applications.

8. To dispatch substantive replies to 96 per cent. of written enquiries for information from the drivers and vehicles registers in 3 working days from receipt.

Efficiency

9. To limit maximum waiting at Local Vehicle Licensing Offices so that 95 per cent. of customers are attended to within 22 minutes during peak periods (the first eight and last two working days of each month) and within 10 minutes at other periods.

10. To meet an overall efficiency gain of 2.5 per cent.

Financial

11. To reduce the unit cost per vehicle excise enforcement case by 0.5 per cent. in real terms compared to 1996–97.

Quality

12. To limit the error rate (errors on any item sent out by the Agency) to a maximum of 0.5 per cent. of total Agency output.

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Construction Service in 1997–98. [4572]

Dr. Mowlam: For 1997–98 the following performance targets have been set for Construction Service:

Quality of service

1. To achieve a 90 per cent. compliance in customer assessments of Agency performance against Service Level Agreements.

2. To place 75 per cent. of orders within 7 days of receipt of customer requests in the maintenance and supplies business areas.

3. To achieve a 90 per cent. positive response in customer assessments in project evaluation reports.

4. To respond to 80 per cent. of customer advisory enquiries within 6 weeks.

Efficiency

5. To achieve 3 per cent. efficiency gains on running cost expenditure.

6. To ensure that overhead costs as a percentage of chargeable time value come within the agreed percentage.

7. To ensure that staff time charged to customers is within the agreed percentage of total staff time.

Financial

8. To maintain expenditure within cash limits and to approved budget plans.

9. To recover the full cost of Agency operations from customers.

10. To ensure that actual costs as a percentage of approved target costs in project work does not exceed the agreed percentage.

11. To ensure that staff costs as a percentage of construction spend in the maintenance and supplies business areas does not exceed the agreed percentage.

Mrs. Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Rivers Agency for the financial year 1997–98. [4719]

Dr. Mowlam: The following Key Targets have been set for the Rivers Agency for 1997–98:

To construct or refurbish 2.0 km of urban flood defences.

To increase the length of designated sea defences having appropriate standards of protection to 29 per cent.

To accommodate increased storm run-off from 350 hectares of development land.

To replace/refurbish 2.1 km of dangerous culverts.

To complete maintenance works on 376 km of urban watercourses and 1,370 km of rural watercourses.

To provide new water recreation facilities at 25 sites throughout Northern Ireland.

To issue substantive replies to 80 per cent. of written enquiries within 15 working days of receipt.

To respond to 100 per cent. of Schedule 6 applications within 3 months.

To aim to have all navigation locks operable for at least 90 per cent. of the period.

To control programmes expenditure to within 0.5 per cent. shortfall of the final control total.

To control DRC expenditure to within 1 per cent. shortfall of the final control total.

To achieve 3 per cent. efficiency savings in the 1997–98 financial year.

To implement Phase II of the development of Management Information Systems and databases to establish unit costs for protecting land from flooding and maintaining drainage benefit to agricultural land.

The Rivers Agency Business Plan for 1997–98 will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament at a later date.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much her Department has spent on research into food poisoning in each of the last five years, broken down to show the funds dedicated to (a) E. coli, (b) campylobacter and (c) salmonella. [3605]

Mr. Worthington [holding answer 17 June 1997]: The amount spent on research into food poisoning in each of the areas listed is as follows:

Year	E. coli	Campylobacter	Salmonella
1992–93	24.9	25.3	6.7
1993–94	37.2	99.4	5.1
1994–95	55.8	110.4	4.0
1995–96	38.5	117.4	8.8
1996–97	45.0	58.0	5.4

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much her Department has budgeted for research into food-poisoning in 1997–98, broken down to show the funds dedicated to (a) E. coli, (b) campylobacter and (c) salmonella. [3606]

Mr. Worthington [holding answer 17 June 1997]: The amount budgeted for research into each of the areas is as follows:

Year	E. coli	Campylobacter	Salmonella
1997–98	80.2	88.0	5.6

SOCIAL SECURITY

War Pensions Agency (Conference)

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations she has received about the cost of the recent conference of War Pensions Agency staff in Windermere; and what assessment she has made of the value for money of that conference. [4150]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is that delivery of service should be simpler and more efficient. Queries on operational matters concerning the War Pensions Agency are for its Chief Executive Mr. Kevin Caldwell. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from K. C. Caldwell to Mr. Hilton Dawson, dated 7 June 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the recent conference of war pensions staff.

The Secretary of State has received no representations regarding the conference.

As Chief Executive of the War Pensions Agency, approval of a conference of this nature falls within my authority. My approval of the conference followed normal Departmental guidelines and I am content that the conference represented good value for money.

The Agency does not maintain on-site facilities that would be appropriate for a conference of this nature.

The conference, involving 26 delegates of all grades within the Agency, was designed to identify how the Agency could improve the levels of service offered to war pensioners. As you may be aware, the Agency has made significant recent improvements in service levels as measured against Secretary of State targets and to continue this improvement it is important that we seek to identify and resolve any significant barriers to service or performance improvement. The action plans and detailed task lists which were created will help the hundreds of staff in the operational group at the Agency to sustain improved performance. Another great advantage of this event was the opportunity to enthuse and motivate the people who attended—as an accredited Investors in People organisation we look for opportunities to do this.

Events of this nature are extremely rare in the Agency (this is the first in my term as Chief Executive) and are strictly limited to circumstances where the benefit clearly outweighs the cost. I have no hesitation in providing my personal assurance that the conference represented good value for money.

I hope you find this information useful.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people (a) in total and (b) under the age of 25 years have lost entitlement to benefit following the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance. [1465]

Mr. Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

Transitional provisions ensured that people who were in receipt of Unemployment Benefit and/or Income Support for the unemployed at the point of change kept entitlement to Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA).

Jobseekers lose entitlement to JSA if they fail to be available for work, to seek work actively, or to have a jobseeker's agreement in place. Just under 7,000 people lost entitlement for these reasons between 7 October and 31 December 1996, the latest date for which information is available. Additionally JSA payments (but not underlying entitlement) cease if jobseekers are sanctioned. There were just over 21,000 sanctions in this same period. Separate figures for under 25 year olds are not available.

Jobseekers who can demonstrate that they would otherwise suffer hardship can receive hardship payments.

Our welfare to work programme will help get young unemployed people, long term unemployed people and lone mothers off benefit and into work.

Notes:

1. Discretionary sanctions of up to 26 weeks may be imposed for voluntarily leaving employment, for misconduct or for refusal of employment.

2. Fixed period sanctions of 2 or 4 weeks may be imposed, for example, for refusing an employment programme or failure to comply with official directions.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to change the regulations covering the formulae used by the CSA to assess liability for payments; and if she will make a statement. [1652]

Mr. Bradley: We are aware of the concerns which have been expressed about the child support formula. We will be looking closely at this area over the coming months as part of our wider consideration of the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what analysis she has made of the proportion of absent parents with a full maintenance assessment who are paying maintenance through the Child Support Agency. [4508]

Mr. Bradley: Recent figures show that only some 32 per cent. of absent parents with a full maintenance assessment and making payment through the Child Support Agency are paying the full amount due.

Children are entitled to the support of both parents wherever they live. Absent parents need to fulfil their responsibilities. It is not acceptable that so many do not pay the maintenance they owe. Over the coming months we will be looking closely at all aspects of the operations of the Child Support Agency to ensure that it provides an efficient and effective service.

Habitual Residence Test

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to issue a national definition of the habitual residence test. [2360]

Mr. Bradley: We are committed to a wide ranging review of Social Security. We aim to restore confidence in the system and reduce levels of poverty. The habitual residence test will form part of this work.

Mortgage Benefit

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to introduce a mortgage benefit to enable people with mortgages, who are on income support, to afford to return to work. [2361]

Mr. Bradley: We have no immediate plans to introduce a mortgage benefit. However, this Government is committed to streamlining and modernising the tax and benefit systems to fulfil the objectives of promoting work incentives, reducing poverty and welfare dependency, and strengthening community and family life.

We recently announced that Martin Taylor (the Chief Executive of Barclays PLC) will lead a Whitehall Task Force to look at the problems caused by the interaction of the tax and benefit systems. The review will consider the difficulties people face on moving from welfare to work.

Pensions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will review the link between the basic pension and prices. [3275]

Mr. Denham: We will shortly be announcing details of a review of the central areas of insecurity for elderly people. We are committed to the Basic State Pension and will retain it as the foundation of pension provision. It will be increased at least in line with prices. All aspects of the basic pension will be included in our review.

Minister for Women

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the responsibilities of the Parliamentary Secretary for Women; and how many officials and at what grades have been appointed with responsibility in this area. [4256]

Ms Harman: As Minister for Women, I have been given the responsibility to co-ordinate and drive forward policies which will make a real difference to women's lives. I will chair the new Cabinet Sub-Committee for Women, which will review and develop the Government's policy and strategy on issues of special concern to women and oversee their implementation, and I will examine economic and social papers going to Cabinet Sub-Committees to monitor their impact on women. My objectives are to create a new bond of trust between women and Government and to ensure that the Government delivers its promises to women, including manifesto commitments on issues such as family-friendly employment, a national childcare strategy and domestic violence.

I will be supported in this role by Joan Ruddock MP, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Women and at official level by a new Women's Unit. The resourcing of the Women's Unit is still under consideration but the current staff profile (full-time equivalents) is as follows:"

1 Grade 5 (Head of the Women's Unit)

1.8 Grade 7s

2.4 SEOs

1 HEO

3 EOs

1 AO

2 AAs

1 Personal Secretary

This includes the six staff that make up the Secretariat of the Women's National Commission.

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State is supported by a Private Office consisting of 1 HEO, 1 EO and an AO.

Single Claimants

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to review the regulations restricting the eligibility of single claimants other than young people to accommodation costs; and if she will make a statement. [4205]

Ms Harman: I gave a commitment before the last election that I would review the regulations which extend the single room rent to people aged 25 or over. These limit housing benefit to the average market rent for a single non-self contained room.

I have considered carefully the view of the Social Security Advisory Committee that without a thorough review of the effect of the existing single room rent rules—which were only introduced in October 1996—the Government should not extend them. I have also taken account of representations from hon. Members, the Local Authority Associations and others.

In order to avoid local authorities incurring unnecessary costs, I can announce today that I propose to revoke the extension of single room rent to those aged 25 or over.

In line with the manifesto commitment, the cost of this change will be met in full by other measures from within the Department's programme. A further announcement will be made at the time of the Budget.

DEFENCE

Water Jets (Sheep's Eyes)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the findings of the Porton Down research programme into the effect of high pressure water jets on sheep's eyes. [2785]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mrs. Ann Clwyd, dated 18 June 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the findings of the Porton Down research programme into the effect of high pressure water jets on sheep's eyes as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency.

Porton Down are not aware of any research programme to investigate the effect of high pressure water jets on sheep's eyes. Some research work of this type involving another animal species was conducted during the 1970's as I said in my letter to you of 5 February. I am, however, unable to give you any additional information or to release the study report, since it remains classified.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Trident

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the cost to his Department of ordering Trident missiles from the United States of America in US Fiscal Years 1998 and 1999. [3339]

Mr. Spellar: Final decisions have yet to be taken on further UK orders for Trident missiles. For an indication of missile costs, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. and learned Member for North-East Fife (Mr. Campbell) on 11 June 1997, Official Report, columns 486–87.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to order Trident missiles from the United States of America in US Fiscal years 1998 and 1999. [3340]

Mr. Spellar: The present planning assumption is that the UK will order 7 missiles in each of US Fiscal years 1998 and 1999. This assumption will be tested during the Strategic Defence Review before final decisions are made.

Caerwent Military Base

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement about contamination at the Caerwent military base; [3574]

(2) what representations he has received about the future use of the Caerwent military base; [3575]

(3) what plans he has for the future of the Caerwent military base. [3573]

Mr. Spellar: No decisions have yet been taken on the future of the RAF Caerwent site. Consideration of the way forward will include an assessment of the contamination of the site and take into account the wishes of the local community. The site contains some residual contamination resulting from its former use as a propellant factory and ammunition depot and some buildings contain asbestos. A land quality assessment is currently being conducted.

My Department has received numerous representations regarding the future use of the RAF Caerwent site; notably from the previous hon. Member for Monmouth and the Monmouthshire county council as well as from local interest groups, land owners and private companies.

COPEX Exhibition, Farnborough

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will identify by name, rank and unit, such Indonesian (a) military, (b) security, (c) police, (d) paramilitary and (e) special forces personnel invited by the British Government or private companies to attend the forthcoming COPEX Exhibition at Farnborough in September 1997. [3590]

Mr. Spellar: The Society of British Aerospace Companies (SBAC) have a licence from the Ministry of Defence to put on exhibitions at Farnborough Airfield. The Ministry of Defence is playing no part in organising the COPEX Exhibition, or in issuing invitations to the Exhibition. The Ministry of Defence has sought and received assurances from the organiser of COPEX that nothing will be allowed at the Exhibition which runs counter to the Government's policy regarding the sale of military or dual-use equipment to countries under a United Nations or European Union embargo or restriction. COPEX has confirmed that it upholds all national, local and international laws and conventions regarding these matters and that any exhibitor that is found to be acting in contravention of these laws would be reported to the relevant authorities.

Portsmouth Naval Base

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to visit Portsmouth dockyard; and if he will invite local hon. Members to accompany him on future visits. [3283]

Dr. John Reid: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State currently has no plans to visit Portsmouth Naval Base.

British Aerospace and Rolls-Royce

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for each of the last five years the sums the Government have paid to (a) British Aerospace and (b) Rolls-Royce for defence products. [2183]

Mr. Spellar: Sums paid to British Aerospace and Rolls-Royce for each of the last 5 years by the Defence Bills Agency on behalf of the Secretary of State for Defence are shown in the following table. These figures do not include any sums which may have been paid locally including by those Defence Agencies for which figures are shown separately.

	British Aerospace £ million	Rolls Royce £ million
1992–93	1,045	321
1993–94	1,006	297
1994–95	820	312
1995–96	683	290
1996–97	801	282

These figures were the amounts paid in the years in question and include VAT, and were obtained from the annual Expenditure With Industry Report produced by Defence Bills Agency.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Savidge: To ask the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures the Government intends to introduce to ensure that United Kingdom-registered fishing vessels comply with the law; and if he will make a statement. [4296]

Dr. John Cunningham: The Government propose to take a range of initiatives designed to ensure that all fishing vessels in the UK abide by the rules.

The Fisheries Departments will continue to give priority to fair and effective enforcement. In 1997–98 some £24 million will be spent on enforcement, including surface and aerial surveillance. We are determined to bear down on those who disregard the law. If fish stocks are to be conserved fisheries regulations must be respected.

We have considered whether the existing conditions of fishing licences need to be strengthened to assist enforcement. A matter of particular concern is the practice of allegedly discarding, after inspection at sea but prior to landing, marketable fish which have been sorted, stowed on board and recorded in EC logbooks. This practice appears to be used to evade the proper operation of quotas and is inconsistent with the conservation of fish stocks. Subject to consultation with the Commission and our fishing industry, we propose to introduce as soon as possible a new licence condition which addresses this problem.

The Registrar General of Shipping and Seamen has powers to terminate a fishing vessel's registration if, taking into account any requirement of merchant shipping legislation relevant to its safety or that of its crew, he considers that it would be inappropriate for the vessel to remain registered. In the interests of safety, it is proposed that the Registrar General will serve notice of the intention to terminate the registration of any fishing vessel which fails to hold a valid safety certificate.

In addition, we shall be making arrangements for British Sea Fishery Officers to assist the Department of Transport by detaining in port fishing vessels which do not have valid fishing vessel safety certificates, as well as checking that fishing vessels are manned by crew holding the appropriate certificates, including UK Certificates of Equivalent Competency (CECs) in the case of foreign qualified crew.

Finally, the Department of Transport and Fisheries Departments have reviewed the requirements for masters and officers of larger fishing vessels to be competent in the use of English. It has been concluded that these provisions are adequate. Certificates of competency, including CECs, already require a sound knowledge of English. The more rigorous checking of officers' certificates will help to ensure that these requirements are properly complied within the interests of safety.

Poultry Meat

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is proposing to take in the interest of consumer safety to ensure that adequate controls are put in place to cover the production of poultry meat in premises processing fewer than 10,000 birds per year; and if he will make a statement. [4778]

Mr. Rooker: I have asked for a review to be conducted of the exemption from Poultry Meat, Farmed Game Bird Meat and Rabbit Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) Regulations 1995 of premises slaughtering fewer than 10,000 birds per year.

As part of that review, I will be seeking urgent advice from the Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food (ACMSF) on the health risks associated with the continued sale of New York Dressed (NYD) and effile poultry from unlicensed premises.

Sustainable Livestock Production

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research the LINK programme on sustainable livestock production has evaluated on the competitiveness of free range (a) egg and (b) pork production relative to intensive production; and if he will make a statement. [3580]

Mr. Rooker: There are no LINK projects on the topics referred to in the question. However, the Government's role within the LINK programme is to respond to research proposals put forward by industry for joint funding. If projects of this kind were to come forward, they would be considered on their merits.

Beef Production

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the application of the early marketing and the calf processing schemes within the United Kingdom beef sector. [3925]

Mr. Rooker: Under EU law, member states must operate either the Calf Processing Scheme (CPAS) or the Early Marketing Scheme for veal, or both. The aim of both schemes is to reduce oversupply on the EU beef market following a decline in consumption. The UK has opted for the CPAS because it more directly tackles the problem of the sudden loss of markets for UK calves following the imposition of the beef export ban. As at 13 June 1997, a total of 636,471 calves had been slaughtered of which 597,044 were dairy and 39,427 non-dairy breeds.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the advantages of giving special compensation for lowland beef farmers. [3924]

Mr. Rooker: All beef producers have been affected in varying degrees by the current low market price for finished cattle. Thus all producers, regardless of their geographical location or farming system, would urge the case for affording them special assistance. In considering any case put to us for such assistance, the Government have to be mindful of the tight constraints which currently apply to public expenditure and the extent to which the provision of such assistance would distort the proper functioning of the market. Such distortion might simply insulate producers from the realities of the market-place and encourage unrealistic expectations of the level of future returns.

Milk

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what tests his Department has authorised to determine the percentage of milk on sale which contains measurable quantities of (a) medicines, (b) illegal antibiotics and (c) hormones; and if he will make a statement. [3413]

Mr. Rooker: The Dairy Products (Hygiene) Regulations 1995, as amended, require manufacturers to carry out checks to ensure that dairy products do not contain residues of substances having pharmacological or hormonal action, antibiotics or other substances, which are harmful to human health, or might be harmful if those residues exceeded permitted tolerance limits laid down in legislation.

Local authority environmental health officers are responsible for ensuring compliance with the Regulations; this may include sampling and analysis. Enforcement action is taken where appropriate.

The Veterinary Medicines Directorate tests whole milk collected at the retail point of sale under their non-statutory surveillance scheme. They look for residues of a number of antibiotics and also substances prohibited under EU legislation. In 1996 they completed 1,434 analyses and, consistent with the experience of previous years, found no detectable residues.

Animal Cloning

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy on the cloning of animals. [3412]

Mr. Rooker: The Ministry's policy on the cloning of farm animals is guided by the recommendations of the report of the Committee to Consider the Ethical Implications of Emerging Technologies in the Breeding of Farm Animals—the Banner Committee—which reported in 1995.

Organophosphates

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to withdraw clearance for the commercial use of organophosphates. [3389]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 16 June 1997]: We have considered this very carefully. The Government act on the scientific advice of the independent advisory committees set up by the Medicines Act 1968 and the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985. Their current advice is that organophosphourus sheep dips and pesticides can be used safely in accordance with the manufacturers' instructions. Further work is in hand to emphasis the importance of using and disposing of these products safely including an updated leaflet "Sheep Dipping" which will be sent to sheep farmers later this year. The Government attach great importance to this work.

WALES

Housing Repair Grants

12. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to increase the resources for local authority housing repair grants. [2605]

Mr. Win Griffiths: £164 million is available from the Welsh Office to Welsh local authorities for private sector renewal this year. Provision for future years will be subject to the outcome of the annual Public Expenditure Survey.

The Bill on Supplementary Credit Approvals, which had its Second Reading on 17 June, will provide local authorities with the capability of applying at least some of their Supplementary Credit Approvals to housing repair programmes.

Community Hospitals and Ambulance Services

13. Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on community hospitals and ambulance service provision in Wales. [2606]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Community hospitals and ambulance services play an important role in the delivery of health services. In Wales these services are provided by NHS Trusts.

Road Improvements (Anglesey)

14. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the starting date of the A55 improvements across Anglesey. [2607]

Mr. Hain: Since the decision to progress the scheme under the Private Finance Initiative was announced in July 1996, the Department has received 43 representations about the start of work to-date.

Welsh Assembly (Monmouthshire)

15. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the representation of Monmouthshire in a devolved Welsh Assembly. [2608]

Mr. Ron Davies: Monmouthshire, like other parts of Wales, will be represented in the Assembly by both directly-elected and additional Members. Details of the proposed Additional Member System will be set out in the White Paper to be published in the summer.

Economic Priorities

16. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his economic priorities for Wales. [2609]

Mr. Ron Davies: I intend to publish an economic development strategy document later this summer. This will set out my general approach and priorities.

Devolution

17. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the annual cost of a Welsh Assembly; and if the cost will be met from the existing Welsh Office Vote. [2610]

Mr. Ron Davies: We will publish this information in the Devolution White Paper next month.

22. Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the White Paper on devolution for Wales is to be published. [2615]

Mr. Davies: We aim to publish the White Paper before the summer recess and certainly well before the Referendum.

Single Currency

18. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the effects of the single currency and the convergence criteria on public services in Wales. [2611]

Mr. Hain: The Government have made it clear that any decision on the single currency will be made in the interest of the UK economy as a whole. This includes our ability to deliver a level of public service which we deem desirable.

Ministerial Visit

19. Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to visit North Wales to discuss health issues. [2612]

Mr. Win Griffiths: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to visit North Wales, but as Minister with responsibility for health issues in the Welsh Office, I will be visiting trusts in the area tomorrow.

Social Chapter

20. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate the has made of the number of jobs that will be lost in Wales as a result of increased employment costs arising from the minimum wage and social chapter. [2613]

Mr. Hain: We will ask the Low Pay Commission, before it reaches a recommendation on the level at which the National Minimum Wage might be set, to take into account all the economic circumstances, including its likely impact. I will not speculate about the possible effects of hypothetical levels before the Commission has had a chance to consider the issues. Current Social Chapter directives do not impose significant burdens on business.

GP Fundholding

21. Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of GP fundholding in Wales. [2614]

Mr. Win Griffiths: We are committed to a comprehensive and equitable health service and to the abolition of the two tier system and internal market. We have deferred approval of the 8th wave of fundholding in Wales until July 1998 to provide a breathing space to allow the development of alternative commissioning models. We have also asked GMSC Wales and the Welsh Association of fundholding Practices to work with us to determine the direction of Health Care in the Principality, building on current best practice. Changes are needed to the existing arrangements but it is important that they are the right changes.

Intergovernmental Conference

23. Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will asses the implications of the outcome of the intergovernmental conference for Welsh agriculture; and if he will make a statement. [2616]

Mr. Ron Davies: An announcement on the outcome of the Intergovernmental Conference will be made in due course.

Ministerial Responsibilities

24. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement as to the allocation of ministerial responsibilities for environmental and rural matters. [2617]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I have been allocated these responsibilities.

Small Businesses

25. Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is taking to encourage more small businesses to set up in Wales. [2618]

Mr. Hain: Our Manifesto for Wales identified a comprehensive package of measures in support of small firms. This includes action to encourage more new good quality enterprises, particularly high technology start ups which could help to revitalise parts of the Valleys and other disadvantaged areas. The TECs in Wales have also been set a target of assisting the unemployed to establish 1,500 new businesses in 1997–98. This total should be boosted by the New Deal package to help tackle youth and long-term unemployment.

Regional Policy

26. Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he proposes to reduce the current economic regional imbalance in Wales. [2619]

Mr. Hain: We intend to publish an economic development strategy document later this summer. This will set out our general approach and priorities.

Angling

27. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the benefits of angling to the Welsh economy. [2620]

Mr. Ron Davies: We fully recognise the popularity of angling in Wales and its benefit to the Welsh rural economy. We have a long-standing commitment to angling and the protection of the aquatic environment. We intend to review legislation on salmon and freshwater fisheries in England and Wales covering all aspects of policy and management governing inland fisheries.

Beef Export Ban

28. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of when the export ban on beef from Wales to the EU and world markets will be lifted. [2621]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The export ban has been in place for over a year now. We have fulfilled the Florence pre-conditions and we now need recognition for the measures taken and the sacrifices made. Lifting the ban will not be easy, but we hope the present Government's constructive and positive approach will pay dividends. We are exploring with the Commission how we can most quickly get the export ban lifted. As well as certified herds proposals we will be considering other options.

Inward Investment

29. Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps the Government are taking to encourage more investment from foreign firms in Wales. [2622]

Mr. Hain: Our commitments to improve the skills level of our people, create a buoyant economy, improve the infrastructure, and take a positive attitude towards the European Union, as well as our proposals to create an economic powerhouse, will make Wales even more attractive to inward investors.

Education

30. Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes he plans to make to education in Wales. [2623]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Office will publish its proposals for education in Wales in a White Paper in July.

NDPBs

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the gross and net budgets of non-departmental public bodies in 1992–93; what are the estimated budgets for 1997–98; and what percentage increase or decrease has taken place. [2707]

Mr. Ron Davies: The information is as follows:

	Budget 1992–93 £	Estimated budget 1997–98 £	Percentage change
Gross	517,693,000	826,268,700	37.3
Net	347,742,000	701,773,700	50.4

1. The figures provides are cash prices.

2. There are 18 Executive non-departmental public bodies in existence. The Arts Council of Wales, the Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales, the Residuary Body for Wales and the Welsh Language Board were not in existence in 1992 and cannot be taken into account for the figures for 1992–93. The Further Education Funding Council for Wales and the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales were established in May 1992 but did not become fully operational until April 1993.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost of remuneration to members appointed by the Secretary of State to non-Departmental public bodies in 1992–93; and what is the estimated cost for 1997–98. [2706]

Mr. Davies: The cost of remuneration to members appointed by the Secretary of State to Executive non-Departmental public bodies is contained in the annual publication "Public Bodies", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

The cost for 1992–93 was £729,914 and the estimated cost for 1997–98 is £948,750.

Referendums

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much public money at current prices was made available for the "Yes" campaign and how much for the "No" campaign in each referendum, since 1979; how much will be available for each in the forthcoming referendum; and if he will make a statement. [3287]

Mr. Ron Davies: There have been no referendums in the United Kingdom since 1979. No public money will be made available for "Yes" or "No" campaigns for the forthcoming referendum.

School Leavers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of (a) female and (b) male children leave school at 16 in Wales, broken down into local authority areas; and if he will make a statement. [3667]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is shown in the following table. The figures include children continuing in full-time education outside the school sector.

It should be noted that the percentage leaving school in a locality will be influenced by the provision for further education in the locality.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) men and (b) women receive the jobseeker's allowance in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [1997]

Mr. Bradley: I have been asked to reply.

The information is in the table.

Reforming the welfare state is one of our key priorities. Our welfare to work programme will get young unemployed people, long term unemployed and lone mothers off benefit and into work.

TREASURY

Interest Rates

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 3 June, Official Report, column 147, if he will state numerically what constitutes high and stable levels of growth and employment for the British economy for the financial years (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000. [3333]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer to the answer I gave to the right hon. Member on June 2, Official Report, column 147.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer under what authority operational responsibility for setting official interest rates has been transferred to the Bank of England. [3602]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 16 June 1997]: The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced on 6 May that operational responsibility for setting interest rates would be transferred to the Bank of England; that legislation placing this responsibility on a statutory footing would be introduced as soon as possible; and that, during the intervening period until the legislation came into force, all aspects of the new arrangements for making and announcing decisions on monetary policy would operate on a de facto basis.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he expects the Bank of England monetary policy committee to give to (a) existing and (b) announced fiscal policy measures in setting interest rates. [4274]

Mrs. Liddell: It is the job of the Bank's Monetary Policy Committee to set interest rates to achieve the Government's inflation target. In doing that the Committee will take into account a wide range of information, including fiscal policy measures.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the increase in interest rates since 1 May on (a) inflation, (b) growth, (c) employment and (d) the exchange rate. [3233]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government have put in place a monetary framework designed to achieve economic stability. Economic stability is a precondition for high and stable levels of growth and employment. The Chancellor's assessment of the impact of the interest rate increase of 6 May was set out in a Treasury press release (40/97) of 6 May. The Bank has been given operational responsibility to set interest rates at a level to achieve the Government's inflation target.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) by what means the interests of (a) manufacturing industry and (b) British regions are taken into account by the Bank of England in determining interest rates; [3263]

(2) how the views and needs of manufacturing industry in (a) Scotland and (b) the English regions in respect of interest and exchange rates are to be assessed by the Bank's Monetary Policy Committee; and if he proposes to incorporate representatives of Scotland and the English regions in the process of considering interest rate changes. [4036]

Mrs. Liddell: In determining interest rates, the Monetary Policy Committee of the Bank of England will be able to draw on the information gained from business surveys, and the Bank's network of regional agents which cover the whole of the United Kingdom. The bank's agents have widespread contacts with companies, both large and small, and other organisations covering all sectors of the economy.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those OECD countries where central banks determine interest rates (a) without regional representation to the Bank and (b) without a contract between bank and Government setting out the bank's targets. [3264]

Mrs. Liddell: All central banks tend to take regional developments into account when setting interest rates. The form of regional representation, however, varies across countries with independent central banks. For example, in Germany and the US regional central bank presidents sit on the Committee determining interest rates. In contrast, there is no such regional representation in other countries, such as New Zealand. With regard to contracts, in some countries, for example Germany, central banks determine interest rates without formal agreement with the respective government. In other countries, more less formal agreements exist, as in the case of Canada.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how he proposes to co-ordinate demand management and fiscal and monetary policy following the transfer of decision-making on interest rates to the Bank of England. [3196]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government aim to achieve lasting economic stability through prudent economic management and sound finance. Co-ordination of fiscal and monetary policy will be assisted by having the Treasury representative on the Bank's Monetary Policy Committee in a non-voting capacity.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what instructions and targets he has given to the Bank of England in respect of levels of (a) growth, (b) unemployment and (c) inflation in its determination of interest rates; [3231]

(2) if he makes representations to the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee about his intentions and aims in respect of (a) growth, (b) unemployment, (c) growth in demand and (d) fiscal policy before its meetings. [3213]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government's central economic objectives are high and stable levels of growth and employment. The Bank of England is responsible for taking the operational decisions necessary to meet the Government's inflation target of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. A copy of the remit for the Bank's Monetary Policy Committee and background notes can be obtained from the House of Commons Library.

Foreign Exchange Reserves

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the reason for the division of responsibility for the management of foreign exchange reserves between the Bank of England and the Treasury. [3713]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 16 June 1997]: The purpose of the bank having its own separate pool of foreign exchange reserves to use at its discretion is to allow it to intervene in support of its monetary policy objective.

Halifax Bank (Disabled Savers)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations his Department has made to the Halifax Bank in relation to its policy on distributing windfall payments to disabled savers. [3229]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 17 June 1997]: None. The broad framework with which distribution schemes must conform is set out in the Building Societies Acts. The detailed nature of any particular scheme is for a society's board and members to determine.

Bank of England Governor

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make the appointment and reappointment of the Governor of the Bank of England subject to approval by this House. [3762]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 16 June 1997]: The Governor of the Bank of England is appointed by Her Majesty the Queen. As the Chancellor said in his letter of 6 May, the Governor will be appointed for a five-year term.

Bank of England Monetary Policy Committee

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if verbatim minutes of the monetary committee of the Bank of England will be published; and if individual members of the committee will be permitted to make dissenting statements prior to their publication. [3764]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 16 June 1997]: The monetary policy committee has agreed that the minutes will not be a verbatim record of the discussion. The committee is considering what guidelines its members should adopt in their public comments.

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if non-voting members will be permitted to take part in the deliberations of the Monetary Policy Committee of the Bank of England. [4242]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury representative on the Monetary Policy Committee can take part in the discussion, but not in the decision on interest rates.

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the minutes of the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee will attribute to individual members of the Committee the comments made by them during the Committee's discussions; and after what interval he proposes that the minutes will be published. [3054]

Mrs. Liddell: The votes of individual members will be recorded, and if there are dissenting votes the reasons for them will be attributed. The minutes will be published within six weeks of each meeting.

Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how he will measure the success of the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee in meeting his inflation target. [3322]

Mrs. Liddell: The Chancellor wrote to the Governor of the Bank of England setting out the remit for the Bank's Monetary Policy Committee on June 12. A copy of the remit can be obtained from the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will invite hon. Members to make representations to the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee. [3195]

Mrs. Liddell: The new arrangements will ensure that the Monetary Policy Committee is fully accountable for its interest rate decisions to the Government, Parliament and the people. It will be accountable to Parliament through the Treasury Select Committee, which will have the opportunity to examine the Bank's performance on monetary policy on a regular basis.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the performance of the Bank of England in managing the Government's cash reserves. [3240]

Mrs. Liddell: Currently, the Government's cash management is handled by the Bank of England as a part of its money market operations by which short-term interest rates are influenced. It is therefore difficult to separate the costs of cash management from the costs of administering monetary policy. However, the total cash needs of Government are automatically managed through coordination of the Exchequer's accounts at the Bank to minimise the amount of gross overnight borrowing required by Government.

EU Budget

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the annual net budgetary contribution by the United Kingdom to the EU; and what plans he has to discuss with his EU counterparts ways in which the size of the United Kingdom's net contribution can be reduced in the future. [3765]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 16 June 1997]: The latest estimates of the United Kingdom's net contribution to the European Community Budget for the financial year 1997–98 to 1999–2000 remain as set out in the Departmental Report published by the then Chancellor of the Exchequer on 20 March 1997 (Cm 3617) and are reproduced below:

1997–98: £2,750 million

1998–99: £3,000 million

1999–2000: £3,400 million

The Government are committed to tight control of public spending in the EU as in the UK. We shall work constructively with other Member States and the European Parliament to achieve this.

VAT (Sanitary Products)

Mr. Ivan Lewis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consider removing value added tax on women's sanitary products. [2259]

Dawn Primarolo: No. In a broadly based tax like VAT many essential goods and services are taxed, and it is not possible to single out sanitary protection for special treatment.

VAT on sanitary protection is included into the category of products which have been taxed at the standard rate since VAT was introduced. The EC 6th Directive, agreed in 1977, prohibits extensions of zero-rates.

Exchange Rates

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the change in (a) the real and (b) the nominal exchange rate against the (i) dollar and (ii) the deutschmark in the year after each change in interest rates over the last four years. [4276]

Mrs. Liddell: The data are available from the following published sources:

Real exchange rate: OECD Main Economic Indicators

DM exchange rate: Table 7.1A, Financial Statistics (code AJFH)

Dollar exchange rate: Table 7.1A, Financial Statistics (code AJFA)

Interest rates: Table 7.1O, Financial Statistics (code AMIH) also Table 7.1J.

Inflation

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors underlie his target of no more than 2.5 per cent. inflation. [3232]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government's inflation target is $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Price stability is an essential precondition for the Government's objectives of high and sustainable levels of growth and employment.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the Government's policy for controlling inflation. [3246]

Mrs. Liddell: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor set out the Government's policy for controlling inflation in his statement to the House of 12 June and in his Mansion House speech of 12 June.

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government have taken to agree a standard definition of inflation for use throughout the European Union; and when he plans to introduce such a definition for use. [3541]

Mrs. Liddell: Eurostat (the statistical office of the European Communities) has been publishing annual inflation rates based on the Harmonised Index of Consumer Prices (HICP) since March 1997. The HICP has been designed expressly for comparisons of consumer price indices across all the European Union member states, although the Retail Prices Index (RPI) remains the best indicator of UK consumer price inflation. The Office for National Statistics has been closely involved in developing the specification of the HICP.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the methodology he will employ to determine his inflation target in future years; and if he will give details of each of the economic indicators he will be monitoring prior to making such a judgment. [3365]

Mrs. Liddell: The Chancellor set out his inflation target in the remit to the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee. A copy of the remit and background notes can be obtained from the House of Commons Library. In the Mansion House speech the Chancellor said that if the Government succeeded in strengthening the ability of the British economy to sustain growth with low inflation, and if international conditions permit, he would hope to lower the inflation target.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer at what intervals he intends to review the inflation target; and if he will make a statement. [3549]

Mrs. Liddell: The inflation target will be confirmed in each Budget. In his Mansion House speech the Chancellor said that if the Government succeeded in strengthening the ability of the UK economy to sustain growth with low inflation, and if international conditions permit, he would hope to lower the inflation target.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the economic benefits derived from a long run inflation rate of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. which a rate of inflation of $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. or less would not deliver. [4184]

Mrs. Liddell: Low inflation is an essential pre-condition for high and stable levels of growth and employment. The evidence suggests that higher inflation rates bring no long-run benefits, and are likely to involve long-term costs.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer further to his instruction to the Bank of England to pursue an inflation target of 2.5 per cent., in which stages of the economic cycle an inflation rate of 2.5 per cent. is compatible with (a) a rise and (b) a fall in unemployment. [4037]

Mrs. Liddell: The remit for the Monetary Policy Committee and background notes can be obtained from the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the rate of inflation at the time of each increase in interest rates in the last three years and the projected figures for inflation on each date for one year ahead. [3230]

Mrs. Liddell: The table lists the latest available inflation figures and latest published Treasury forecast for inflation for retail prices excluding mortgage interest payments (RPIX), at the time of each increase in interest rates over the last three years.

Date	Size of base rate increase (percentage point)	New base rate (percentage)	Latest published inflation rate (RPIX) (percentage)	One year ahead forecast Publication[1]	RPIX	Period

6 June 1997	¼	6.50	2.5 (April 1997)	FSBR 96	2½	98Q2

[1] SEF denotes Summer Economic Forecast and FSBR denotes Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the correlation between the independence of the Central Bank and the rate of inflation in different countries over the last 15 years. [3234]

Mrs. Liddell: There have been numerous academic studies of the correlation between central bank independence and inflation, based on different groups of countries and assessed over different time periods.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what indicators he keeps under scrutiny in forming his estimates as to the future rate of inflation. [3248]

Mrs. Liddell: The Chancellor makes a comprehensive assessment of economic developments, taking account of all relevant indicators, in forming a view of inflation prospects. A full forecast for the economy will be published with the Budget on 2 July.

Debt Management

Mr. Maples: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) for what reasons he plans to transfer responsibility for debt management from the Bank of England to the Treasury; [3262]

(2) if he will list the advantages of having the Treasury manage the Government's debt; [3237]

(3) for what reasons he plans to transfer management of the Government's cash reserves from the Bank of England to the Treasury; [3265]

(4) if he will list the advantages of the Treasury managing the Government's cash reserves. [3241]

Mrs. Liddell: The decision to give the Bank of England operational responsibility for setting interest rates means that it is important to separate the Government's debt and cash management from the conduct of monetary policy to avoid conflicts of interest. The separation is intended to ensure that debt and cash management decisions continue to be taken in such a way as to minimise the cost of financing the Government's borrowing needs subject to risk and are not influenced by short-term monetary policy considerations (and vice versa).

Mr. Maples: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the Bank of England's performance in managing the Government's debt. [3239]

Mrs. Liddell: Ultimate policy responsibility for the Government's debt management has always rested with Treasury Ministers and policy is currently expressed in an annual gilts remit to the Bank. The Bank has offered valuable policy advice with regard to debt management and has conducted operations for the Government in the gilts market in an efficient and professional manner. The Bank has taken the lead in recent reforms to gilts market structure, notably gilt repo and preparations for gilt stripping, that have been widely praised by market participants.

Economic Indicators

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the quarterly level of (a) interest rates, (b) M3 and MO, (c) economic growth and (d) nominal exchange rate against (i) the Deutschmark, (ii) the Dollar and (iii) the real exchange rate for each quarter since 1987 together with the figures for inflation and growth in the quarter one year later. [3284]

Mrs. Liddell: The data are available from the following published sources:

Interest rates: Table 7.1O, Financial Statistics (code AMIH).

M4: Table 3.1D, Financial Statistics (code AUYN). N.B. The M3 broad money aggregate has not been published since 1989.

M0: Table 3.1C, Financial Statistics (code AVAE).

Deutschmark: Table 7.1A, Financial Statistics (code AJFH).

Dollar: Table 7.1A, Financial Statistics (code AJFA).

Real exchange rate: OECD Main Economic Indicators, page 30.

Output: Table 2.2, Economic Trends (code CADP).

Inflation: Table 3.1, Economic Trends (code CZBH).

Single Currency

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the minimum time required by the Royal Mint to mint sufficient coins for the United Kingdom to be ready to introduce a European single currency. [3538]

Mrs. Liddell: The European Council in Madrid in December 1995 agreed that the introduction of euro banknotes and coins in any individual country should take place up to three years after it adopts the single currency, and up to almost four years after the decision on whether it meets the necessary conditions to participate. The Royal Mint has estimated that sufficient coins could be produced within this timescale.

Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from British industry on the desirability of the United Kingdom entering a European single currency. [3326]

Mrs. Liddell: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations from British industry, on a wide range of subjects.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of progress toward meeting the criteria for the single currency on the ability of the Treasury to be millennium compliant; and if he will make a statement. [3139]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury has work in progress to identify and test its computer system to ensure that they will operate correctly at the turn of the century. This work is currently within the model timetable set down by CCTA.

The Government will seek to provide an economic environment built on the solid foundations of prudent economic management, sound finance and active employment measures to enhance job opportunities and employability. These policies are consistent with the Maastricht criteria of low inflation and sound public finances. Pursuing these policies has no impact on the ability of Treasury's computer systems to operate correctly at the turn of the century.

Regulation

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding his proposed changes to City financial regulation from (a) legal organisations and (b) accountancy organisations; and if he will make a statement. [3684]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government are open to representations from everyone with an interest in financial regulation. Decisions have yet to be taken on the details of the arrangements that will be made under the enhanced Securities and Investments Board in relation to the bodies the hon. Gentleman refers to.

Gilt Market

Mr. Maples: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what facilities he has established in the Treasury for managing those Government operations in the gilt market which are being transferred from the Bank of England; [3250]

(2) how many staff will move from the Bank of England to the Treasury in connection with the transfer of responsibilities for managing the Government's operations in the gilt market. [3249]

Mrs. Liddell: Details of the transfer of debt management functions to the Treasury are currently being worked out with the Bank. Once identified, these proposals will be offered for consultation.

Securities and Investment Board

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of establishing the enlarged Securities and Investment Board. [3421]

Mrs. Liddell: In his letter to Sir Andrew Large of 20 May, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor invited the Securities and Investments Board (SIB) to project manage the process of transition to the new arrangements set out in his statement of the same date. The cost of this work is a matter for SIB, and will be disclosed in their annual report in the usual way.

Demand Management

Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy on managing demand in the economy. [3328]

Mrs. Liddell: Monetary and fiscal policies will be set to deliver lasting macroeconomic stability. This is a precondition for high and stable levels of growth and employment.

Public Finances

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 3 June, Official Report, column 147, if he will define numerically what constitutes sound public finances for the financial years (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000. [3334]

Mr. Darling: The Government's fiscal policy will be spelt out in the Budget, along with forecasts and projections for government borrowing.

"European Community Finances"

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to publish the 1997 edition of "European Community Finances". [3336]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 10 June, Official Report, column 394.

National Debt

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the consequences of his recent announcement that Her Majesty's Treasury will be responsible for the management of the national debt will be for the Registrar's Department at the Bank of England. [3536]

Mrs. Liddell: Details of the transfer of debt management functions to the Treasury are currently being worked out with the Bank. Once identified, these proposals will be offered for consultation.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

Mr. Norman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his targets for the PSBR as a percentage of gross domestic product. [3706]

Mr. Darling: Forecasts and projections for the PSBR will be set out in the Budget and accompanying statement on 2 July, which will also spell out the Government's fiscal policy.

Inflation and Growth

Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what instructions he has given the Governor of the Bank of England about the balance between his inflation target and prospects for growth. [3323]

Mrs. Liddell: The Chancellor wrote to the Governor of the Bank of England setting out the remit for the Bank's Monetary Policy Committee on June 12. A copy of the remit can be obtained from the House of Commons Library. The Chancellor set out his approach to monetary policy in more detail in his Mansion House speech on June 12.

Ministerial Advice

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he or any of his ministerial team are receiving advice from persons working in the Treasury or with access to any official papers, but who are not being paid for their services from public funds. [3361]

Mrs. Liddell: Yes. Ministers may receive advice from a variety of people who are not being paid for their services from public funds.

Building Society Assets

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if we will review controls on the distribution of building society assets in circumstances of conversion or merger to protect (a) women who are normally second names in joint accounts and (b) those with learning difficulties who must have an authorised signatory who may be a signatory on behalf of several account holders but may claim only one payment on their behalf. [3740]

Mrs. Liddell: I have no plans to do so. Both areas were addressed by Private Members' Acts in the last Parliament: (a) by the Building Societies (Joint Account Holders) Act 1995 and (b) by the Building Societies (Distributions) Act 1997.

Economic Model

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish details of each of the mathematical, economic and other quantitative assumptions which are being used by his Department in running its economic model of the economy. [3363]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury model and associated documentation is available through the Library of the House.

Special Advisers

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the qualifications of each of the special advisers in the Treasury and on how those qualifications are relevant to their work inside that Department. [3681]

Mrs. Liddell: All Special Advisers are appointed to advise Ministers on the development of Government policy and its effective presentation. My right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, made his appointments against these criteria.

Knight Williams

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the circumstances of the Knight Williams investors; and if he will make a statement. [3422]

Mrs. Liddell: Knight Williams and Co. has been declared in default by the Investors Compensation Scheme and claims by investors are being considered. Regrettably, progress has been slowed by a number of factors but there is no need for a review.

Economic Activity

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the economic indicators which he will use as the lead indicators of changes in economic activity. [3373]

Mrs. Liddell: I will make a comprehensive assessment of the current state of the economy, taking account of all relevant indicators in forming my view of the prospects for economic activity.

EC Budget

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the United Kingdom contribution to, and public sector receipts from, the EC budget for (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 1999 in pound sterling. [3337]

Mrs. Liddell: The latest estimates of the United Kingdom's net contribution to the European Community Budget are those set out in the Departmental Report published by the then Chancellor of the Exchequer in March this year (Cm. 3617). These cover the financial years 1997–98 to 1999–2000 and are as follows:

1997–98: £2,750 million

1998–99: £3,000 million

1999–2000: £3,400 million

These estimates were produced under the revised methodology announced in the 1996 Financial Statement and Budget Report and explained further in the Departmental Report. They estimate the trend in the UK's net contribution over the period in question, incorporating the UK's gross contribution, abatement and public sector receipts, and do not identify the individual elements which the right hon. Member has requested. An estimate of the UK's gross contribution to, and receipts from, the 1997 EC Budget will be included in the annual White paper on the EC Budget which the Government will publish before the recess.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the (a) contributions to, and (b) total public sector receipts from, the EC budget for each member state for each year from 1993 to 1996 in pound sterling. [3338]

Mrs. Liddell: The tables set out the information requested for the years 1993 to 1995. These figures are derived from ecu figures contained in annual reports of the European Court of Auditors and have been converted to sterling using the annual average exchange rates shown. Information on 1996 will not be available until the Court of Auditors publish their report on the 1996 Community Budget later this year.

It should be noted that the European Community Budget is denominated in ECU but that the figures in this table have been converted to sterling using the annual average exchange rate for each of the years. These figures should, therefore, be treated with caution.
Notes:
1. Figures for gross contributions are after account is taken of the UK's abatement and the bringing to account of surpluses and deficits in respect of Member States contributions in earlier years.
2. These figures exclude 10 per cent. collection costs in respect of contributions for sugar and agricultural levies and customs duties—Member States deduct this from their contributions for levies and duties before making their contributions available to the Community.
3. The revenue available to the Community also includes relatively small amounts of miscellaneous revenue derived from such sources as the sale of publications, disposal of property etc.

Due to a change in the basis of the Court of Auditors report figures, administration payments to Member States, including other institutions, are not included in the amounts shown for 1995. This mainly effects Belgium and Luxembourg.

Euro

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the estimated number of euro coins that would need to be minted if the United Kingdom adopted the euro; and what would be the estimated cost. [4048]

Mrs. Liddell: It is estimated that 18 billion euro coins would be needed if the United Kingdom were to adopt the euro. The costs if the UK were to join would depend on the detailed coin specifications.

Unemployment (Greenock and Inverclyde)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list by each year of age, the number of (a) male and (b) female 18 to 24-year-olds currently unemployed in (i) the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Inverclyde and (ii) the Greenock travel-to-work area; [3461]

(2) how many (a) males and (b) females have been unemployed in (i) the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Inverclyde and (ii) the Greenock travel-to-work area for more than (1) six months, (2) 12 months, (3) 18 months and (4) 24 months. [3463]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 17 June 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 18 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent questions (3461, and 3463) on unemployment in the Greenock and Inverclyde parliamentary constituency and the Greenock travel-to-work area.

The measure of unemployment, derived from the quarterly Labour Force Survey, is defined on a consistent and internationally recognised basis set out by the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and counts as unemployed people who are: a) without a paid job; b) available to start work within the next two weeks and c) have either looked for work in the last four weeks or are waiting to start a job already obtained. However, the LFS cannot provide estimates of unemployment for local areas.

ONS also publishes the monthly claimant count, which is based on the administrative system and includes all people claiming unemployment-related benefits (i.e. Jobseekers Allowance, Income Support or National Insurance credits) at Employment Service offices on the day of the monthly count, who on that day had signed on as unemployed and available to do any suitable work. Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign are counted, irrespective of whether they are actually receiving benefit.

The information requested can only be derived from the claimant count, accessible from the Nomis database at the House of Commons Library.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) males and (b) females aged 18 to 24 years are currently unemployed in (i) the parliamentary constituency of Greenock and Inverclyde and (ii) the

Greenock travel-to-work area; and what percentages of the national total for those of this age group in each case these figures represent. [3464]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 17 June 1997]: The Information falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Low Pay

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in Lancaster and Wyre constituency were paid at rates below: (a) £4, (b) £3.50 and (c) £3 per hour, at the latest date for which figures are available. [4054]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 17 June 1997]: The Information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Hilton Dawson, dated 18 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on earnings in Lancaster and Wyre parliamentary constituency.

The latest information, from the New Earnings Survey April 1996, which preceded the creation of the Lancaster and Wyre parliamentary constituency, is given in the table below. Data for the area prior to the last General Election are given instead.

Unemployment

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the relative rates of unemployment in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France, (c) Germany, (d) Italy and (e) Spain. [3426]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Andrew Lansley, dated 18 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the relative rates of unemployment in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France, (c) Germany, (d) Italy and (e) Spain.

The latest available ILO unemployment rates published by the Statistical Office of the European Community (SOEC), for March 1997, were 7.3% for the UK, 12.5% for France, 9.7% for Germany, 12.2% for Italy (for January 1997) and 21.4% for Spain.

Earnings (Burnley)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the number of people in Burnley earning less than (a) £3.50 per hour and (b) £4.50 per hour. [2889]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Peter Pike, dated 18 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on earnings in Burnley.

The latest information, from the New Earnings Survey (NES) April 1996, is given in the table below:

Balance of Payments

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the balance of payments statistics for the United Kingdom will continue to be collected via a survey. [3535]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mrs. Theresa May, dated 18 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on whether the balance of payments for the United Kingdom will continue to be collected via a survey.

The United Kingdom balance of payments are compiled from a number of different sources including administrative sources and a variety of surveys conducted by the Office for National Statistics and the Bank of England. There are no plans to move away from the use of surveys as a source of data for the United Kingdom balance of payments.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Government have to review the timetable for setting levels of standard spending assessment and revenue support grant for local authorities. [3537]

Mr. Raynsford: I have been asked to reply.

The Government currently have no plans to review the timetable for setting levels of standard spending assessment and revenue support grant for local authorities.

PRIME MINISTER

Security Clearance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Prime Minister what are the arrangements for hearing appeals from those who need to have access to protectively marked Government assets and have been refused security clearance or have had that clearance withdrawn. [4979]

The Prime Minister: An independent Security Vetting Appeals Panel, chaired by Sir Anthony May, will be established on 1 July to hear appeals against refusal or withdrawal of clearance at Security Check (SC) or Developed Vetting (DV) levels and to advise the head of the organisation concerned. The Panel will be available to all those, other than recruits, in the public and private sectors and in the Armed Forces who are subject to security vetting at these levels, have exhausted existing appeals mechanisms within their own organisations and remain dissatisfied with the result. Separate arrangements are available to staff of the security and intelligence agencies. The establishment of the Panel therefore brings to an end the role of the Three Advisers who, since 1948, have been available to consider cases where security clearance was refused or withdrawn on the grounds of subversion.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration Detention Centres

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people were detained in purpose-built immigration detention centres in each month in the last year; [3985]

(2) how many places in purpose-built immigration detention centres are currently occupied; [3983]

(3) what is the total current capacity of purpose-built immigration detention centres. [3984]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested is given in the table.

Asylum Seekers

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers currently in detention have alleged that they are under 18 years of age; and where they are being held. [3940]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that the information requested is not available. The available information on detained asylum seekers shows that none is recorded as being under the age of 18.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are currently detained in (a) prisons and (b) detention centres solely under the powers of the Immigration Act 1971. [3938]

Mr. O'Brien: As at 31 May 1997, the most recent date for which information is available, 279 persons in Prison Service establishments and 374 persons in detention centres, who had sought asylum at some stage, were recorded as being solely detained under Immigration Act powers.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of state for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are currently being detained in Category B Her Majesty's prisons without being charged with a criminal offence. [3986]

Mr. O'Brien: As at 31 May 1997, a total of 279 persons, who had sought asylum at some stage, were recorded as detained solely under Immigration Act powers in Her Majesty's prisons. Of these, 204 were held in establishments capable of holding Category B prisoners.

Road Accidents

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to bring forward primary legislation to make failure to stop after a road accident involving personal injury an arrestable offence. [4001]

Mr. Michael: The Government's intention is to legislate as soon as practicable, when a suitable opportunity arises in the legislative programme.

Illegal Entrants

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are currently being detained in Her Majesty's Prisons under the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1986, having entered the United Kingdom with false documents; how many of those have entered the United Kingdom as transit passengers on their way to a third country; and how many have applied for asylum in the United Kingdom. [3982]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that the information requested is not held centrally.

Alcopops

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what regulations he plans to introduce governing the production and sale of alcopops drinks. [3952]

Mr. George Howarth: The Government are very concerned about the promotion and sale of certain alcoholic drinks to children, and I am holding urgent talks with the drinks industry. I am also chairing a Ministerial Group to examine options for Government action. We shall not hesitate to act if the industry response is unsatisfactory.

Prisoners (Education)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the Prison Service budget is allocated to educational activities for prisoners in the current financial year; and what were the equivalent figures for (a) 1982, (b) 1987 and (c) 1992. [4176]

Ms Joyce Quin: There is no central education budget: decisions on the size of education budgets are taken by individual prison governors. The table below shows the proportion of the Prison Service's current expenditure spent on contracted-in education, library services and educational materials at directly run prisons for the years 1982–83, 1987–88, 1992–93 and (provisionally) 1996–97. The figures for 1996–97 may not be on precisely the same basis as those for earlier years due to changes in accounting arrangements.

1987–88: 2.54 per cent.

1992–93: 2.74 per cent.

1996–97: 2.48 per cent.

Public Houses

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the enforcement of the law in respect of absentee landlords of public houses. [4079]

Mr. George Howarth: I am not aware of any particular problems in this area of the law. If the hon. Member has specific concerns, I should be happy to look into them.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will establish a national database of (a) pub licensees and (b) persons who are barred from becoming pub licensees. [4077]

Mr. Howarth: I see no need to do so. Liquor licence applicants have to make a statutory declaration that they are not ineligible, and the licensing courts and police make appropriate enquiries about every applicant.

Psychologists (Prisons)

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the complement of psychologists at (a) Camphill, (b) Albany and (c) Parkhurst prisons; how many vacancies there are for these posts; how long the posts concerned have been vacant; and what plans he has to change the complements. [4081]

Ms Joyce Quin: Details of the complements of psychologists at Camp Hill, Albany and Parkhurst prisons and any vacancies are shown in the attached table.

There are no plans to change the complements at Albany and Camp Hill. It is planned to change the Parkhurst complement on 1 July by removing the psychologist post and adding another psychological assistant. The other posts will remain unchanged.

Hare Coursing

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the advantages of outlawing hare coursing. [4021]

Mr. George Howarth: The Government are committed to allowing a free vote on whether there should be a ban on hunting with hounds. A Private Member's Bill to ban hunting with dogs is now before the House.

Closed Circuit Television

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to fund CCTV in 1997–98; [4277]

(2) when new bids for CCTV will be considered. [4279]

Mr. Michael: Round three of the closed circuit television (CCTV) Challenge Competition provided £15 million for CCTV in the current financial year (1997–98). This money has already been allocated. A decision on 1998–99 will be made later in the summer.

Special Advisers

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will indicate the number of salaries of his Department's special advisers falling within the range of (a) £24,349–£29,999, (b) £30,000–34,999, (c) £35,000–£39,999, (d) £40,000–£44,999, (e) £45,000–£49,999, (f) £50,000–£54,999, (g) £55,000–£59,999, (h) £60,000–£64,999, (i) £65,000–69,999 and (j) £70,000–£73,484. [4555]

Mr. Straw: Consistent with the practice of previous administrations and to protect the privacy of individuals, only aggregate information on the salaries of special advisers will be published.

Once all salaries have been agreed, the number of advisers paid in each of the appropriate £10,000 bands will be published.

Prison Service (Private Sector Involvement)

Mr. Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what conclusions he has reached about future private sector involvement in the Prison Service. [5060]

Mr. Straw: The Government have expressed reservations about the principle of contracting out the management of prisons. It is generally accepted that responsibility for the incarceration of offenders must remain with the state. The issue is whether that responsibility should, as a matter of principle, be discharged through direct management in the public sector or whether it can properly and effectively be discharged under a regulatory framework. This was addressed in the recent report on prison management by the Home Affairs Select Committee; and the Government now wish to give further and careful consideration to the arguments deployed in that report before settling their overall approach to this issue.

Existing management contracts will be honoured, as I have already made clear. But we are considering ways in which the current regulatory framework might be strengthened. At present, all disciplinary hearings in contractually managed prisons are conducted by a state official—the Controller, a Prison Service governor, who also monitors the performance of the contractor on behalf of the responsible Prison Service Area Manager. This is an important principle from which we will not depart; and we are currently reviewing the scope for extending the Controller's powers in respect of prisoners' requests and complaints, sentence calculation, scrutiny of security classifications and frequency of security audits.

On the letting of new contracts and the renewal of existing contracts, our immediate approach is necessarily determined by current expenditure plans, to which we are committed, and by operational requirements.

We have inherited a prison population rising sharply, (well above projections) with expenditure provision for new prisons limited to establishments to be designed, constructed, managed and financed by the private sector. Even with the new prison ship, Her Majesty's Prison Weare, there is huge pressure on capacity. We have therefore decided to proceed with existing procurement plans to provide additional new places on this basis by 1999–2000. This is an urgent operational requirement to overcome projected shortfalls in accommodation and to avoid dangerous levels of overcrowding and the use of police cells. We will shortly be launching competitions to provide an 800 place Category B local prison at Agecroft, Salford, and a 400 place Young Offender Institution at Pucklechurch, near Bristol.

I have also authorised the renewal of the contract for the operation of Her Majesty's Prison Blakenhurst with the private sector operator, United Kingdom Detention Services. The existing contract expires on 25 May 1998; and we are required to give the operator one year's notice of a decision to renew the contract. The prison has been performing well against the current contract requirements and in comparison with comparable prisons in the public sector; and I am satisfied that the terms that have been negotiated for renewal of the contract offer value for money. The establishment could not be returned to public sector control without incurring additional expenditure, which would require offsetting savings elsewhere; and in the light of the current budgetary pressures on the Prison Service and pending our consideration of the Select Committee report, I am persuaded that no other course of action could be justified in current circumstances. However, in order to ensure that future options are kept as open as possible while our overall policy is under review, I have decided to renew the contract for 3 years only, the minimum practical—and contractually permissible—period.

Moreover, before further decisions are made on prison procurement beyond the extra places within existing plans or on the renewal of any other existing contracts, I have asked the Prison Service to:

(a) explore all possible methods of using private finance on terms which offer value for money including design, build and maintain new prisons with the public sector providing custodial services; and

(b) seek to demonstrate that the public sector Prison Service has the capacity to match the performance of the private sector in comparable prisons, and that realistic plans can be developed to establish a case for returning contractually managed prisons to the public sector on value for money grounds when consideration is given to the issue on the expiry of contracts. I have asked senior Prison Service managers to engage in consultations with the Prison Service unions to this end.

Proposals for private sector area involvement in other areas of the Prison Service, which do not raise the same issues of principle, will be treated on their merits. I have authorised the extension of the contract with Group 4 to operate the court escort and custody service in Area 7. This is essentially a specialist service, distinguishable from the management of prisons; and I am satisfied both with the quality of the service being provided and with the terms negotiated for extension of the contract.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Cricket Test Matches

Ms Gisela Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is his policy on the televising of cricket test matches on terrestrial television channels. [3980]

Mr. Fisher: Test matches involving England are among the events listed under the Broadcasting Act 1996. Rights for live television coverage of these events must be made available to broadcasters offering a generally available free to air service: currently the BBC and Channels 3 and 4. The provisions do not apply retrospectively, and consequently only contracts agreed after the Act came into force are affected. I announced in the House on 19 May that the Government was initiating a review of this list of events and the work is under way in my Department. The review will include a consultation with all interested parties.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time persons employed by his Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (iii) less than £3 an hour. [4200]

Mr. Tom Clarke: No full-time or part-time member of staff in the Department of National Heritage is paid less than £4 an hour.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Child Deaths

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate she has made of the number of (a) people and (b) children under five dying each day in the developing world from (i) inadequate sanitation, (ii) lack of clean water, (iii) starvation and (iv) war. [3806]

Clare Short: DFID makes no such global estimates. However, I have approached the United Nations, who collect some of this data on a country by country basis, and will write to my hon. Friend when I have their response.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Minimum Wage

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the precise criteria which the Low Pay Commission will apply in making their recommendation on the optimum level of statutory minimum pay. [4053]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The independent Low Pay Commission will recommend to Government the level at which the National Minimum Wage might be introduced having undertaken a wide-ranging consultation with employers, including small businesses, employees, the general public and other interested parties and taking into account relevant economic circumstances prevailing at the time.

Small Businesses

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to reduce the regulatory burden on small businesses. [3956]

Mrs. Roche: As we made clear in our manifesto, we are committed to relieving the regulatory burdens on small businesses. To achieve this, we plan to work in partnership with small firms to ensure that new regulations are simple and fair. We also want to ensure that regulations are enforced fairly. As part of this process we will maintain close links with small firms and their representative bodies to identify their key concerns. We will also reconstitute the Deregulation Task Force to increase its focus on small firms by increasing small business representation.

Newsagents

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she last met representatives from the Multiple Newsagents Association; what subjects were discussed; and if he will make a statement. [4175]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Neither my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade nor I have yet met the Multiple Newsagents Association since arriving at the Department.

Astra Holdings

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will review the legal action against some of the former directors of Astra Holdings commenced under the previous administration. [2923]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: No information has been drawn to my attention which suggests that I should review the disqualification proceedings instituted against some of the former directors of Astra Holdings plc. A trial has now been fixed and it must be for the Court to determine the issues.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Government Car Service

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what targets he has set for fuel consumption by the Government Car Service; if meeting such targets will involve the use of diesel vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [4056]

Mr. Kilfoyle: For 1997–98, the Government Car and Despatch Agency has been set the target of achieving an annual average of 25.5 miles per gallon for the Government Car Service and Inter Despatch Service fleets. Responsibility for meeting this target has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to the Agency, and I have asked its Chief Executive, Mr. Nick Matheson, to write to the hon. Member about Agency's use of diesel fuelled vehicles.

Letter from Nick Matheson to Mr. Tim Boswell, dated 17 June 1997:

I have been asked by Mr Peter Kilfoyle MP, Parliamentary Secretary to the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (who has ministerial responsibility for the Government Car Service (GCS)), to provide a response to that part of your Parliamentary Question on fuel consumption targets for the GCS that relates to the use of diesel engined vehicles. I am the Chief Executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency with operational responsibility for the GCS.

The Agency fleet comprises 179 cars operated by the Government Car Service, all of which are petrol driven, and 63 diesel powered vans operated by the Interdespatch Service (IDS). The overall Agency fuel consumption target of 25.5 mpg includes both types of vehicle.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Burma

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Goverment's trade promotion policy towards Burma. [4898]

Mr. Fatchett: We will not provide any financial support to companies for trade missions to Burma or for trade promotion activities within Burma until there is progress towards democratic reform and respect for human rights in Burma. Officials in the UK and at the British Embassy in Rangoon will continue to provide British companies with routine advice about doing business in Burma. Wherever possible such advice will make clear the present realities in Burma, including the political and human rights situation and the state of the economy. It will also draw to businessmen's attention statements by Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and other pro-democracy leaders discouraging trade and investment in Burma. We shall encourage our EU partners to take similar action.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on international efforts to restore democracy in Sierra Leone; [4159]

(2) if he will make a statement on the implications of his Department's mission statement for relations with Sierra Leone following the recent coup d'état; [4158]

(3) if he will make a statement on the actions of the Nigerian military in Sierra Leone; [4229]

(4) how Her Majesty's Government are assisting efforts to find a negotiated and peaceful settlement to the crisis in Sierra Leone; [4154]

(5) if he will make a statement on his recent discussions on Sierra Leone with the United Nations Secretary General; [4155]

(6) if he will make a statement about Nigeria's military intervention in Sierra Leone; [4156]

(7) what assessment his Department has made of the regional implications of the crisis in Sierra Leone. [4157]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 17 June 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 12 June, Official Report, column 545. We deplore this coup and shall continue to work for the restoration of the legitimate government in Sierra Leone without further bloodshed. Those who led the coup have no support from their own people or from the international community. International stability and respect for human rights are core parts of the FCO mission statement. They have an evident relevance to the situation in Sierra Leone.

Several West African states, including Ghana, Nigeria and Guinea, are working together to find a peaceful settlement to the current crisis in Sierra Leone. We strongly support their efforts, which are likely to include an early high-level regional meeting to identify a way forward. I discussed the situation in Sierra Leone with the Ghanaian Deputy Foreign Minister on 18 June. I am also in touch with the Sierra Leone High Commissioner in London. We are active within both the UN and the Commonwealth about their respective roles in the search for a negotiated settlement in Sierra Leone. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met Mr. Annan, United Nations Secretary General, on 4 June. They discussed Sierra Leone and expressed the strong hope that a negotiated settlement would be found. With partners in the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group (CMAG) we will consider Sierra Leone at the next CMAG meeting on 10–11 July. I discussed the prospects for this meeting with the Commonwealth Secretary on 19 June. CMAG will report to the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Edinburgh in October.

Nigeria has long maintained a military presence of around 1,000 troops in Sierra Leone under bilateral and multilateral agreements. Twenty-four Nigerians died defending President Kabbah. Extra deployments after the coup followed appeals to regional states by President Kabbah and by the Organisation of African Unity (OAU) to assist in restoring constitutional order. We encourage Nigeria now to play a constructive role in the regional efforts to secure a negotiated settlement.

We are concerned that the coup in Sierra Leone should not have a destabilising influence elsewhere in the region. In particular we are watching events in neighbouring Liberia where democratic elections are due on 19 July. The universal condemnation of the coup by African states offers some reassurance that the region itself is determined not to allow the instability in Sierra Leone to spread.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Early Years Development Plans

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in what circumstances he will be willing to approve interim local authority early years development plans which specify that there should be only one point of entry for four-year-olds each year at the beginning of the Autumn Term. [3564]

Mr. Byers: Interim early years development plans will be approved only if they demonstrate how a good quality early education place can be secured for each eligible four-year-old for the three terms before compulsory school age.

Engineering (Students)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will take steps to encourage more young people to study engineering. [3567]

Dr. Howells: The National Curriculum makes the study of science, mathematics and technology compulsory for all pupils between the ages of 5 and 16, and this provides a suitable grounding for young people to move on to the study of engineering.

More specifically, the Government is working in partnership with the industry itself to promote career prospects in engineering. We are currently involved with a wide range of engineering bodies, institutions, and major UK companies in the Year of Engineering Success campaign. This is intended to demonstrate the vital role played by engineering in the economy and in daily life and to encourage young people to consider engineering as a career.

University for Industry

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the Government's proposals for a university for industry. [3566]

Dr. Howells: The Government will establish the University for Industry which will open up new opportunities for adults to improve their skills and realise their potential. By harnessing new technology the University for Industry will help improve the quality and accessibility of learning opportunities and will aim in particular to be of help to small businesses. It will enable greater participation in, and demand for, learning and modernise its supply. It will bring learning to the workplace, the home and the community.

We are taking urgent steps to bring together a range of interests from across and outside Government to agree the way ahead on the University for Industry's development. An announcement is expected soon.

Welfare to Work

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will take into account when framing the welfare to work proposals the position of people who are not in their preferred employment but do not qualify as being unemployed for six months because they take on a series of temporary agency jobs. [3950]

Mr. Alan Howarth: We are currently considering the detailed design of our New Deal programmes for young people out of work for six months or more. Our key priority is to help people who have experienced a continuous period out of work. We will however take other disadvantaged groups into account in designing the initiative, as far as resources and practicalities allow.

Further Education

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will create a standard unit of resource for all 16 to 19-year-old students financed from the public purse irrespective of whether they attend local education authority or grant-maintained schools, sixth form colleges or further education colleges. [4163]

Dr. Howells: I currently have no plans to create such a unit of resource. In March this year the Department published a report comparing the costs of education and training for 16 to 19-year-olds. I will be looking further at these findings and consulting with our partners in the education service before making any proposals about future funding mechanisms for 16 to 19 education.

Mrs. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will readjust the cash base-line for further education to take account of the increased number of students in the further education sector. [4162]

Dr. Howells: I refer the right hon. Member to my answer to her of 10 June, Official Report, column 369.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will introduce measures to stop the loss of teaching staff in post-16 further education. [4202]

Dr. Howells: From incorporation on 1 April 1993, further education colleges assumed responsibility for their own finance and organisation, including the appointment, dismissal, redundancy and conditions of service generally of their staff. Decisions on recruitment and retention are, therefore, for individual colleges to make.

Schools Capital Spending (Kent)

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had with Kent county council following the council's decision to freeze capital spending on schools. [4136]

Mr. Byers: My right hon. Friend has had no such discussions. We understand that Kent County Council has placed a temporary moratorium on all capital expenditure. We are concerned at this development and will be asking Kent County Council for a full explanation for its decision.

Admission and Transfer Ages

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the applications received in each of the last five years from local education authorities or from grant-maintained schools for changes in the ages of admission or transfer, indicating in each case the changes proposed; and if he will make a statement. [4164]

Ms Estelle Morris: The applications received in each of the last five years from local education authorities and grant-maintained schools for changes in the ages of admissions or transfer are listed below. All proposals will be considered on their individual merits.

Local education authorities	Proposal

Departmental Wages

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time persons employed by his Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (iii) less than £3 an hour. [4188]

Dr. Howells: At April 1997, of the people employed by DfEE (including DfEE staff in Government Offices) and the Employment Service:

Full-time staff

1,003 earned less than £4 an hour; including 788 who earned less than £3.50 an hour.

No full-time staff earned less than £3 an hour

Part-time staff

131 earned less than £4 an hour; including 40 who earned less than £3.50 an hour

No part-time staff earned less than £3 an hour

Assisted Places

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils benefit from an assisted place in the South-West Surrey constituency. [4278]

Mr. Byers: In the current academic year 1996–97, 93 children hold assisted places in three participating schools in the South-West Surrey constituency.

Teacher Training

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) for each year of operation of school-centred initial teacher training courses, what has been the average cost per annum for a Post-Graduate Certificate in Education student (a) at an initial teacher training institution and (b) on a SCITT course; [4481]

(2) how many school-centred initial teacher training courses have sought validation for the award of the Post-Graduate Certificate in Education for students on such courses; what proportion failed on (a) an initial validation visit and (b) a subsequent validation visit; and if he will make a statement; [4482]

(3) if he will list for each year of operation of school-centred initial teacher training courses (i) the total number of students in teacher training, (ii) the total number of students training on SCITT courses and (iii) the number of SCITT course trainees as a percentage of total trainees; and what estimate he has made of the number of students entering SCITT courses in the 1998–99 academic year; [4484]

(4) if he will list for each year of operation of school-centred initial teacher training courses the number of schools involved; what is his estimate of the number of schools likely to be involved in the 1998–99 academic year; and if he will make a statement. [4485]

Ms Estelle Morris: These are matters for the Teacher Training Agency. I will ask the Chairman of the Agency, Geoffrey Parker, to write to the hon. Member direct.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many school-centred initial teacher training courses have been inspected by the Office for Standards in Education; what proportion have been judged unsatisfactory; and if he will make a statement. [4483]

Ms Morris: This is a matter for the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked the Chief Inspector to write to the hon. Member.

Building Projects

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance his Department currently offers to universities, colleges of higher education and further education corporations to ensure that they take into full account the environmental impact of new building projects. [4513]

Dr. Howells: Universities and colleges of further and higher education are autonomous, private sector bodies, responsible for the maintenance and development of their own estates. The Department does not issue any guidance to them about the environmental impact of new buildings. Of course, all buildings work must conform to the relevant planning and environmental health legislation.

Mr. Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance his Department currently offers to local education authorities to ensure that they take into full account the environmental impact of new building projects. [4514]

Mr. Byers: The Schools Environmental Assessment Methodology (SEAM) was published in 1996. It is intended to help designers of new schools—and major building projects at existing schools—to minimise the environmental impact of their designs and the materials they specify, and create school buildings which are in harmony with their surroundings.

SEAM also enables schools to monitor their own energy use and provides opportunities for pupils to learn about the environment.

Ethnic Minority Funding

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment by what date staff employed on current section 11 funded projects will need to be given notice of redundancy; what estimate he has made of the length of time needed by schools and local education authorities to prepare bids for new projects funded under section 11 or similar provisions; whom he has consulted on future arrangements for section 11 funding; and if he will make a statement. [4486]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have been asked to reply.

We are well aware of the need to reach conclusions about future arrangements for section 11 funding in good time for any necessary arrangements to be made.

If questions of redundancy arise, they will depend on arrangements between the individuals concerned and their employers.

Special Advisers

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 10 June, Official Report, column 369, on the number of special advisers in his Department, if an additional special adviser has not been appointed. [4238]

Mr. Blunkett: No additional advisers have been appointed since my previous reply. However, I am in the process of seeking approval from the Prime Minister to appoint an additional part-time adviser to share a full-time post with Sophie Linden, my existing part-time adviser.

This will bring my complement of special advisers to 1 full-time and 2 part-time advisers occupying 2 full time posts.

DEFENCE

Training

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide details of joint training exercises that British Special Forces have undertaken with (a)

Australian, (b) Malaysian, (c) New Zealand and (d) other Association of South-East Asian Nations special forces. [2779]

Dr. Reid: For reasons which are widely understood, it has been my Department's normal practice not to comment on the activities of the UK Special Forces. This practice will continue but will be kept under review in the light of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide details of the countries and military, security, paramilitary, police or special forces units which have received training in the United Kingdom MOD close quarter battle and internal security training facilities. [2777]

Dr. Reid: It has been the practice in the past not to release details of military assistance provided to other countries on the grounds that this information is confidential between governments and disclosure would risk damaging our international relations. This practice is now being reviewed against the background of the government's commitment to openness. I will write to my hon. Friend once the review is complete.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the training provided by Britain's SAS to Indonesian military, police, paramilitary and special forces. [2778]

Dr. Reid: For reasons which are widely understood, it has been the Department's normal practice not to comment on the activities of the UK Special Forces. This practice will continue but will be kept under review in the light of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which countries and specific military, paramilitary, security, police or special forces units have received training at MOD facilities through formal or informal arrangements with private companies. [2781]

Dr. Reid: It has been the practice in the past not to release details of military assistance provided to other countries on the grounds that this information is confidential between governments and disclosure would risk damaging our international relations. This practice is now being reviewed against the background of the government's commitment to openness. I will write to my hon. Friend once the review is complete.

US–UK Classification Guide

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Her Majesty's Government received from the United States Government a copy of the document "A Joint Classification Guide for Exchange and Safeguards of Material between the United States and United Kingdom, CG–UK–1", completed in May 1996, and forwarded for approval for release by the Office of Declassification of the United States Department of Energy. [2679]

Dr. Reid: A copy of the document referred to, the reference of which is CG–UK–1, was received by British Defence Staff in Washington in draft form on 20 June, 1996. Approval for release was not requested.

MOD Police (Colchester Garrison)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will restore the number of Ministry of Defence police constables operating within the Colchester Garrison to that obtaining on 1 January 1997. [3522]

Dr. Reid: Having examined the position, I am content that the complement of 21 Ministry of Defence police constables at the Colchester Garrison is satisfactory to meet the MOD police responsibilities there.

Trident

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take steps to reduce the yield of Trident warheads in the light of the opinion of the International Court of Justice on the use of nuclear weapons. [3951]

Dr. Reid: Pending the achievement of the Government's goal of the global elimination of nuclear weapons, the International Court of Justice's Advisory Opinion does not require a change in the United Kingdom's nuclear policy.

Departmental Wages

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time persons employed by his Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (iii) less than £3 an hour. [4190]

Dr. Reid: The information requested is shown in the table below for MoD civilian staff. The number of staff shown as earning less than a given figure includes those also shown in any lower pay category.

	Number of civilian staff
Number of staff earning less than £X per hour	Full-time	Part-time
£4.00	4,432	685
£3.50	3,050	416
£3.00	246	1

It is not possible to provide meaningful comparable figures for Service personnel in the form sought by the right hon. Member. Members of the Armed Forces are not paid by the hour. Nor do the long hours worked by many Service personnel equate to the average civilian working week; a factor which the Armed Forces Pay Review Body takes into account when making its annual recommendations to the Prime Minister.

MOD Homes (Colchester)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the number and proportion of Ministry of Defence homes currently vacant in Colchester; how many homes the Ministry of Defence has sold in the past year, and to whom. [4034]

Mr. Spellar: There are 1,361 properties on the Colchester family quarters estate of which 138 (10.1 per cent.) are currently vacant. Of the 138 properties, 75 have been allocated to incoming families; nine have been set aside for major refurbishment and 36 have been identified for possible short-term leasing. The future of the remaining 18 remains under review.

Within the past year, nine family quarters have been sold on the open market by the Defence Estates Organisation. I am withholding information on the companies and individuals involved in this sale for reasons of commercial confidentiality under exemption 7 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government information.

A further 46 houses were sold freehold to Annington Homes Ltd. as part of the asset sale in November 1996.

Married Quarters

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the review being undertaken of the terms of disposal of the Ministry of Defence married quarters estates to the Nomura Investment Bank. [4043]

Mr. Spellar: The sale was completed on 5 November 1996. The Government is monitoring carefully the operation of the new arrangements.

Accommodation Units (Uxbridge)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many accommodation units are currently empty on the RAF Uxbridge site. [4045]

Mr. Spellar: Of the 609 families quarters at RAF Uxbridge, 79 are currently vacant. Of these vacant quarters, 17 are allocated to incoming families and 44 are currently undergoing major works. The remaining 18 empty quarters fall within a total of 24 properties which are under review for possible release to Annington Homes.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons no announcement was made in April that faulty plastic baton rounds that had been in use for three years were being withdrawn. [4542]

Dr. Reid: My hon. Friend will be aware that these events relate to a previous Administration. I am advised by officials that issues concerning the performance of plastic baton rounds were under consideration between the departments concerned and no decision had then been reached on the form or timing of a public announcement.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the highest muzzle velocity of the plastic baton rounds recently found to exceed the upper limit in the equipment specification; and what is that upper limit; [4541]

(2) how often stocks of plastic baton rounds in operational use before April 1997 were tested to ensure that muzzle velocities were in line with the equipment specification; [4538]

(3) what tests were carried out by his Department on the faulty batch of plastic baton rounds supplied in 1994 and recently withdrawn from service; [4543]

(4) what action is being taken against the manufacturers of the plastic baton rounds issued from early 1994 which have been found to have a muzzle velocity in excess of the upper limit in the equipment specification; [4540]

(5) how many plastic baton rounds were withdrawn from operational use in April; how they are to be disposed of; who manufactured them; and what is the estimated cost of each round. [4544]

Dr. Reid: The highest muzzle velocity of plastic baton rounds recently tested was 76 metres per second; the upper limit specified in the contract is 70 m/s.

All batches of rounds were tested by the Contractor at the time of manufacture to enable the Department to accept them against the proof specification.

In addition to initial Contractor proofing, the following tests were carried out. In 1995 trials were carried out on a number of rounds manufactured in 1994 as a part of the ongoing baton round development programme. Assessment of these initial tests in early 1996 indicated that some of the rounds were going marginally faster than the specified velocity, but the tests were not considered conclusive. Reproofing trials of the 1994 rounds started in April 1997 and the results have yet to be established. Further tests were carried out in 1996 on rounds manufactured in 1996 which indicated that those rounds did not exceed the maximum specified velocity.

The issue of possible action against the manufacturer will be considered when all of the facts have been established.

Approximately 45,000 rounds were withdrawn from service in April 1997; they will be disposed of either by reworking or incineration. I am withholding information about the name of the manufacturer under exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. The cost of each round is approximately £6.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what are the rules for the use of plastic baton rounds by members of the armed forces in Northern Ireland; on how many occasions they have been used by members of the armed forces in Northern Ireland since the batch with and excessive muzzle velocity was supplied in 1994; and if he will list the dates on which and the places where they were used; [4546]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of plastic baton rounds used by the armed forces in Northern Ireland since the batch with an excessive muzzle velocity was supplied in 1994. [4545]

Dr. Reid: The use of force in Northern Ireland is governed by the Criminal Law Act (Northern Ireland) 1967 which provides that "A person may use such force as is reasonable in the circumstances in the prevention of crime, or in effecting or assisting the lawful arrest of offenders or suspected offenders or of persons unlawfully at large". Plastic baton rounds are used by the armed forces in situations of violent disorder where life or property is at risk and their use is judged to be minimum and reasonable force in the circumstances. They must be fired at selected persons and not indiscriminately and should be aimed so they strike the lower part of the body. Soldiers are fully trained in their use.

As at 17 June 1997, a total of 1,424 plastic baton rounds had been used by the armed forces in Northern Ireland since the batch with an excessive muzzle velocity was supplied in May 1994, not all of which were from that batch.

I will write to my hon. Friend with a schedule of the dates and places where these baton rounds have been used, once this has been prepared.

Special Advisers

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will indicate the number of salaries of his Department's special advisers falling within the range of (a) £24,349–£29,999, (b) £30,000–£34,999, (c) £35,000–£39,999, (d) £40,000–£44,999, (e) £45,000–£49,999,

(f) £50,000–£54,999, (g) £55,000–£59,999, (h) 60,000–£64,999, (i) £65,000–£69,999 and (j) £70,000–£73,484. [4557]

Mr. George Robertson: Consistent with the practice of previous administrations, and to protect the privacy of individuals, only aggregate information on the salaries of Special Advisers will be published.

Once all salaries have been agreed, the number of advisers paid in each of the appropriate £10,000 bands will be published.

Building Projects

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidance his Department currently applies in ensuring that full account is taken of the environmental impact of its new building projects in Britain. [4516]

Mr. Spellar: My Department carries out an environmental assessment on all new buildings likely to generate environmental effects. The environmental assessment is included in the formal consultations with the local planning authority as part of the planning process.

Strategic Defence Review

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the scope of the proposed Strategic Defence Review; by whom it will be undertaken; and when the results are expected. [3632]

Mr. George Robertson: I have today written to all right hon. and hon. Members setting out the scope of the Strategic Defence Review and how we propose it will be undertaken. I have placed a copy of my letter in the Library of the House. I expect the Review to be completed around the turn of the year.

Market Testing

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decision he has reached on the future of the market testing programme within his Department. [4978]

Mr. Spellar: The Government support market testing as one of several means at their disposal to secure better value for money in the provision of public services. There is, however, no dogmatic preference for private over public provision or vice versa, or for market testing where it is not appropriate. On this basis we have reviewed the Department's market testing programme and have set out our conclusions in a policy statement on getting the best value from defence resources. This is being widely distributed within the Department, to the Trade Unions and other staff representatives and to industry associations. I am placing a copy of the statement in the Library of the House.

The statement emphasises the imperative for continuous improvements in efficiency; pays tribute to the huge contribution made by the Department's Service and Civil Service personnel working together; welcomes private sector involvement where this is cost-effective; and enjoins managers throughout the Department to pursue best value from defence resources in a manner which is rigorous, undoctrinaire, open minded and scrupulously fair.

Future projects will be judged against the policy statement at their key stages. We expect to announce the outcome in relation to several ongoing projects shortly.

Meteorological Office

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Meteorological Office for 1997–98. [5062]

Mr. Spellar: The Chief Executive of the Meteorological Office is responsible for providing quality meteorological and related services for the government, the armed forces, the public, aviation and commercial customers. During 1997–98, the Meteorological Office will be set the following challenging targets:

(a) to improve the Global Numerical Prediction (NWP) Index by eight index points from a baseline of 100, over a rolling three year period ending March 1998;

(b) to improve the UK NWP Index by four index points from a baseline of 100 in 1996–97;

(c) to achieve an index point improvement in the Service Quality Index from a baseline of 100 for 1996–97;

(d) to improve efficiency in year by four index points as measured by the agreed Efficiency Index;

(e) to achieve an overall Return on Capital Employed of at least 11.6 per cent. averaged over the two years 1997–98 and 1998–99 (not less than seven per cent. in year); and,

(f) to achieve a total contribution to core and central services from commercial activity of £3 million.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

33. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Attorney-General what proposals he has for relieving the Crown Prosecution Service of unnecessary bureaucracy. [2925]

35. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Attorney-General what measures he proposes to increase the efficiency of the prosecution service. [2927]

The Attorney-General: The independent review which I announced to the House on 12 June 1997 will examine the organisation and structure of the Crown Prosecution Service, its policies and procedures and consider whether and, if so, what changes are necessary in order to provide for the more effective and efficient prosecution of crime through local public prosecutors.

34. Mr. Greenway: To ask the Attorney-General when he expects to review guidance to Crown prosecutors. [2926]

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend, the Member for Clwyd, West (Mr. Thomas). That Review will examine internal guidance including the Code for Crown Prosecutors.

Racial Hatred

36. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Attorney-General how many prosecutions there have been for incitement to racial hatred in each of the last five years. [2929]

The Attorney-General: In the last five years, the Law Officers have consented to the prosecution of 31 defendants for offences of incitement to racial hatred under Part III of the Public Order Act 1986.

Cigarettes (Sales to Children)

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Attorney-General how many successful prosecutions there have been (a) nationally and (b) in Nottinghamshire in each of the last five years of retailers for selling cigarettes to children under 16 years of age. [3450]

The Attorney-General: Offences of selling tobacco to children are generally prosecuted by local Trading Standards offices, and proceedings are handled by the Crown Prosecution Service only on those occasions when they are initiated by the police.

No figures are available for the cases handled by the Crown Prosecution Service since the CPS does not maintain central records by reference to particular offences. The Home Office have, however, provided the following statistics for the number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates' courts and convicted at all courts for the offence of selling cigarettes to persons under 16[1] in Nottinghamshire Police Force Area and England and Wales 1991–95.

Nottinghamshire police force area:
Prosecutions	4	4	—	3	1
Convictions	4	4	—	3	1
England and Wales:
Prosecutions	101	74	143	98	155
Convictions	85	57	108	80	128

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Departmental Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 June, Official Report, column 450, what percentage of archival units produced by Government departments in 1965 have been (a) retained by Government departments with a specific future date identified for release into the public domain and (b) retained by Government departments with no specific future date identified for release into the public domain. [4311]

Mr. Hoon: The Question concerns a specific operational matter on which the Chief Executive of the Public Record Office is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the Chief Executive to reply direct.

Letter from Nicholas Cox to Mr. Norman Baker, dated 18 June 1997:

In the absence of the Chief Executive on business I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about the above.

The great majority of records produced by Government departments in 1965 will by now have been destroyed under the normal arrangements for handling public records. Neither the Public Record Office nor Government departments kept statistics at that date of quantities of records created or destroyed, so that it is not now possible to give percentage figures for those records retained by their department.

Approvals given by the Lord Chancellor for retention of records all give a date by which the approval is to be reconsidered. As stated in the White Paper Open Government (Cm 2290 July 1993), paragraph 9.24, records retained by departments for other than administrative reasons are subject to regular review, ie at least every 10 years.

The Chief Executive, Mrs Tyacke, or I would be very pleased to discuss any of these matters with you further, if you wished.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 June, Official Report, column 450, what percentage of the archival units passed to the Public Record Office from all Government departments in 1965 and what actual number have been subsequently (a) released into the public domain in their entirety and (b) released into the public domain in part. [4312]

Mr. Hoon: The Question concerns a specific operational matter on which the Chief Executive of the Public Record Office is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the Chief Executive to reply direct.

Letter from Nicholas Cox to Mr. Norman Baker, dated 18 June 1997:

In the absence of the Chief Executive on business, I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about the above.

During 1965 47,865 archival units were transferred to the Public Record Office.

To produce actual and percentage figures for those archival units which have been subsequently released either in whole or in part could only be done by checking against each individual item its expected and actual release date, and to do so would incur disproportionate cost.

The Public Record Office estimates that around 1 per cent. of its holdings are unavailable because they are closed for longer than 30 years.

The Chief Executive, Mrs Tyacke, or I would be very pleased to discuss any of these matter with you further, if you wished.

Legal Services Ombudsman

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Legal Services Ombudsman intends to publish his sixth Annual report. [4873]

Mr. Hoon: The Legal Services Ombudsman has today published his sixth Annual Report, and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

TREASURY

Devolution

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to limit the powers of the Chancellor to itemise funds voted for Wales following devolution; and if he will make a statement. [2934]

Mr. Darling: Treasury Ministers are discussing financial arrangements for devolution with the Secretary of State for Wales and other Ministers. The outcome of these discussions will be set out in the White Papers which we intend to publish shortly.

Public Expenditure Surveys

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had regarding the dates of future public expenditure surveys and their publication; and if he will make a statement. [3678]

Mr. Darling: We promised in our Election Manifesto to conduct a comprehensive spending review, the details of which I announced in the House on 11 June.

Public Borrowing

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his golden rule on public borrowing. [3423]

Mr. Darling: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Sevenoaks (Mr. Fallon) on 12 June 1997 Official Report, column 568.

UK Trade

Dr. Fox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what studies the Treasury has commissioned to identify the currencies in which the United Kingdom's trade is denominated. [3315]

Mrs. Liddell: The most recent official data on the currency of invoice of UK trade can be found in the Central Statistical Office's Business Bulletin, Issue 12/89 "Currency of Invoicing", published on the 15 December 1989. The currency of invoice of UK trade is one of many factors the Treasury considers in assessing the short-run impact of exchange rate changes on the economy.

Bank of England (Monetary Policy)

Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what parliamentary scrutiny there will be of the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee. [3321]

Mrs. Liddell: The new arrangements will provide for the Bank to make regular reports and give evidence to the Treasury Select Committee. The Committee will have the opportunity to examine the Bank's performance on monetary policy on a regular basis, and the House will be able to debate the Bank's Annual Report.

Departmental Correspondence

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what targets he has set for ministers in his Department to respond to correspondence from hon. Members; and if he will make a statement. [3543]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: Ministers aim to reply in 15 working days to letters relating to Treasury business, in 18 days to correspondence concerning the Chancellor's other departments and in 23 days where a report is required from a local office.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the arrangements for the autumn 1997 Public Expenditure Round. [3519]

Mr. Darling: We do not intend to hold a Public Expenditure Survey in 1997 but intend to conduct a Comprehensive Spending Review, the details of which I announced in the House on 11 June.

Budget

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which organisations have so far made representations to him about the Budget on 2 July; and, of those, which have been invited to the Treasury to make personal representations to (a) Treasury ministers and (b) Treasury officials. [3367]

Dawn Primarolo: We have received written representations from many organisations, some of which have met Treasury ministers and officials.

Drugs

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the street value of drugs smuggled into the United Kingdom in 1996–97. [3557]

Dawn Primarolo: Information available on a wholly illicit market is insufficient for making any reliable assessments of the street value of drugs illegally imported into the United Kingdom.

Fuel Duty

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to paragraph 6.62 of the Financial Statement and Budget report 1997–98, if he remains committed to increasing fuel duty on average by at least 5 per cent. a year in real terms. [3381]

Dawn Primarolo: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend the Chancellor's Budget Statement.

Oil Taxation

Mr. Maples: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what review of oil taxation is being conducted inside his Department. [3247]

Dawn Primarolo: All aspects of the tax system are kept under continual review.

Scottish Environment Protection Agency

Dr. Godman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to enable the Scottish Environment Protection Agency to obtain VAT refunds; and if he will make a statement. [4208]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 17 June 1997]: I have no plans to allow SEPA to claim VAT refunds in respect of its non-business expenditure. Tax liabilities of publicly funded bodies are taken into account when setting levels of public expenditure in Scotland.

Knight Williams & Co. Ltd.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what recent steps he has taken to ensure that former clients of Knight Williams & Co. Ltd. receive adequate compensation; [4525]

(2) if he will make a statement on the use of the locked box agreement to satisfy investors' claims against Knight Williams & Co. Ltd. [4524]

Mrs. Liddell: I welcome the fact that the Investors Compensation Scheme has now started to make offers of compensation to investors. I hope that progress will not be unnecessarily delayed. The Securities and Investments Board have made it clear to investors that their actions in relation to the "locked box" will not affect investors' rights to claim either on the ICS or in the Knight Williams & Co. liquidation.

Inland Revenue Officers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) VAT and (b) Inland Revenue officers were in post on 6 May. [4009]

Dawn Primarolo: Staff in post numbers for the beginning of May 1997 are (a) 23,315 in Customs and Excise as a whole, of which some 6,850 are operational VAT officers, and (b) 53,500 Inland Revenue officers.

BP Shares

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government sold its BP shares. [3772]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The last of the Government's shareholding in BP was sold in December 1995.

Tax Levy

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what statements have been made by Ministers on the eligibility of (a) companies never nationally owned and never privatised and (b) BP for a special tax levy. [3773]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: Ministers have made it clear that the windfall tax will be levied on the excess profits of the privatised utilities. Details will be announced in the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement on 2 July.

General Government Expenditure

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to change the definition of general government expenditure. [4050]

Mr. Darling: General government expenditure (GGE) is defined by the Office for National Statistics on the basis of national accounts concepts. The introduction of the new European System of Accounts (ESA95) in 1998 will lead to some changes in national accounts which will affect GGE.

PSBR

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will revise the definitions of capital spending by local authorities to exclude investment in, and purchase of, long-term assets from the public sector borrowing requirement; and if he will make a statement. [4204]

Mr. Darling: We have no plans to change the definition of capital spending by local authorities included in the calculation of the public sector borrowing requirement.

Tourism

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from (a) the English Tourist Board, (b) the Welsh Tourist Board and (c) the British Resorts' Association regarding the impact on tourism of a national minimum wage. [4023]

Mrs. Liddell: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has not received any representations from these organisations on this matter. The UK tourist industry must compete on the quality of its product and service. The introduction of a national minimum wage, by helping to create a better rewarded and better motivated workforce, will drive up standards and promote business.

Interest Rates

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effects of a 0.5 per cent. increase in interest and mortgage rates on (a) inflation and (b) economic growth over one year. [4275]

Mrs. Liddell: The effects of changes in interest rates cannot be precisely estimated. In general, increased interest rates can be expected to result in lower underlying inflation and economic growth in the following year than would have occurred otherwise.

Budget Projections

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to publish the report by the Comptroller and Auditor General on the assumptions for the 1997 Budget projections. [5077]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The report is being published today as a Command Paper. Copies are available in the Vote Office.

WALES

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what studies his Department has undertaken of the effect on jobs and investment in Wales of the creation of a Welsh Assembly. [2936]

Mr. Ron Davies: None, but my Department is keeping these issues under review.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which of the non-departmental public bodies in Wales exercise powers previously exercised by local authorities. [3737]

Mr. Ron Davies: Both the Higher and Further Education Funding Councils exercise powers to fund education institutions that were previously exercised by local authorities.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which of the non-departmental public bodies in Wales are (a) specialist and advisory and (b) executive; and what is the annual grant-in-aid to each. [3738]

Mr. Davies: The information requested is as follows:

Speech Therapy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to recruit more speech therapists in Wales. [4459]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The recruitment of NHS staff is a matter for individual Trusts. Additional funding is being provided from 1997–98 onwards to increase the numbers of students being trained and to enhance the number of clinical placements across Wales. This will encourage recruitment in areas where qualified Speech and Language Therapists are required. I will be keeping a close watch on progress in recruiting qualified Speech and Language Therapists.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Drugs Research Unit

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the terms of reference of, and funding provisions for, the drug utilisation research unit at Queen's University, Belfast. [4012]

Mr. Worthington [holding answer 16 June 1997]: A contractual agreement between the Department of Health and Social Services for Northern Ireland and the Queen's University of Belfast sets out detailed terms of reference for DURU, listed below.

The Unit (DURU) shall:

- continue the work of the Department's (DHSS) Prescribing Information Unit of visiting general medical practitioners to encourage safer and more cost-effective prescribing and to collect further data on prescribing habits, consultation profiles, locum and home visit arrangements and other information necessary to understand present behaviour and to develop better prescribing practice;
- develop the work of the Prescribing Information Unit by advising, supporting and assisting the officers of the Health and Social Services Boards in making general medical practitioners aware of their prescribing patterns;
- collect and collate all available data on drug utilisation and construct a comprehensive prescribing data-base;
- support the work of the Royal College of General Practitioners in updating and disseminating the use of the practice formulary and other guides to rational prescribing, and to analyse the reluctant benefits;
- seek the optimal format for conveying new essential drug information to general medical practitioners;
- compile statistics on self-poisoning;
- identify inappropriate prescribing;

relate utilisation to indices of morbidity and analyse the reasons for intra and inter-regional variations;

encourage and assist all hospital medical staff in improving the rationality and cost-effectiveness of their prescribing by the development and application of agreed hospital formularies and to assess the success of self-regulation.

Running costs of DURU are met by an annual grant provided by the Department of Health and Social Services, as stated in the agreement with the Queen's University of Belfast. Funding for the year ending March 1997 amounted to £312,667.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the terms of reference and membership of the review committee on the work of the drug utilisation research unit, Queen's University, Belfast; what representations she has received concerning the outcome of the review committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [4013]

Mr. Worthington [holding answer 16 June 1997]: The terms of reference for the review of DURU were to assess four dimensions of the unit's work, comprising: scientific quality; policy, service relevance and value; management and accountability; and options for future management and funding.

The Review Team comprised the following three members: Professor Mike Rawlins, Department of Pharmacological Science, University of Newcastle; Professor Peter Noyce, Department of Pharmacy, University of Manchester; and Dr. Colin Bradley, Department of General Practice, University of Birmingham.

The Department has received written correspondence regarding the outcome of the review of DURU from Martin Caton (MP), David Morris (MEP) and Dr. McGavock, Director of DURU. The decision not to renew the contract for DURU was based on the Review Team's recommendations and peer review of those recommendations. Nothing subsequently raised in correspondence to the Department gives cause to change the original decision.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate she has made of the number of plastic baton rounds used by the Royal Ulster Constabulary since the batch with an excessive muzzle velocity was supplied in 1994. [4550]

Mr. Ingram: A total of 7,437 plastic baton rounds have been used by the RUC since ammunition manufactured in 1994 was issued on 18 May 1994.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate she has made of the (a) number of people injured by plastic baton rounds since 1994 and (b) rate of injury per round used; and what are the figures for the previous three year period. [4549]

Mr. Ingram: There have been 94 alleged injuries associated with incidents involving use of plastic baton rounds between 1 January 1994 and 24 April 1997. This is a rate of one alleged injury for each 94 rounds fired (compared with a rate of one injury for each 95 rounds fired for the period 18 May 1994 to 25 April 1997).

The figures for the previous three years are as follows:

Year	Alleged injuries	Rounds fired	Injuries/rounds fired
1993	14	523	1/37.3
1992	8	77	1/11
1991	10	323	1/32.3

These statistics are based on total security force firings.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when plastic baton rounds were first used in Northern Ireland; how many rounds have been used to the latest available date; and how many deaths and injuries have been caused to (a) adults and (b) children over that period. [4553]

Mr. Ingram: Plastic baton rounds were first used in Northern Ireland in 1973, and a total of 65,204 rounds have been used. There have been 14 fatalities associated with their use. There have been 565 alleged injuries associated with incidents involving plastic baton rounds since 1981 when records of these were first kept.

Of the 14 people killed, seven were under 16 years of age. The last fatality was in August 1989.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what date the Royal Ulster Constabulary discovered that plastic baton rounds in use since 1994 had excessive muzzle velocities; on what date they were withdrawn; and how many of the faulty rounds were used by the RUC between those two dates. [4547]

Mr. Ingram: Rounds manufactured in 1994 entered service with the RUC on 18 May 1994. The RUC received notification from the MOD on 24 March 1997 that some 1994 rounds were outside the agreed specification.

All 1994 rounds were withdrawn by 25 April 1997.

The number of rounds with muzzle velocities in excess of the upper limit which were supplied to the RUC or actually used is not known.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the rules for the use of plastic baton rounds by the Royal Ulster Constabulary; on how many occasions they have been used by the RUC since the batch with an excessive muzzle velocity was issued in 1994; and if she will list the dates on which and places where they were used. [4551]

Mr. Ingram: The use of plastic baton rounds is governed by section 3 of the Criminal Law Act 1967 which provides that "A person may use such force as is reasonable in the circumstances in the prevention of crime, or in effecting or assisting the lawful arrest of offenders or suspected offenders or of persons unlawfully at large."

The RUC's operational guidelines specify that baton guns will be used only "in accordance with the principle of the minimum and reasonable amount of force necessary in the protection of life and property, the preservation of the peace and the prevention and detection of crime." They also place limitations on the firing of baton rounds at a range of less than 20 metres to situations where the safety of police officers or others is seriously threatened, direct that firing should be at selected persons and not indiscriminately at the crowd, and aimed so that they strike the lower part of the target's body direct. A higher point of aim is permitted only if the safety of police officers or others is seriously threatened and the attacker's body is shielded from the firer.

In his 1996 Inspection of the RUC Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary reported that "The RUC conditions/restrictions in use are clearly defined and accord with those issued by the Home Secretary to Forces in England and Wales, save that the authority levels for use of baton rounds and their subsequent operational controls are lower."

The RUC, in conjunction with ACPO colleagues, in England and Wales is currently revising guidelines on the use of baton rounds with a view to recommending common guidelines for use by police throughout the United Kingdom.

I will write to the hon. Member with the further information he requests once it has been prepared.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the RUC discovered that plastic baton rounds in use since 1994 had an excessive muzzle velocity; and if she will make a statement. [4548]

Mr. Ingram: The RUC received notification from the MOD on 24 March 1997 that some rounds manufactured in 1994 were outside the agreed specification.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the numbers of each type of injury caused by plastic baton rounds since 1994. [4552]

Mr. Ingram: It is not possible to provide the information in the form requested. There have been 94 alleged injuries from incidents involving the use of plastic baton rounds from 1 January 1994 to 24 April 1997.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Dartford River Crossing

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was his Department's evaluation of the net present value of (a) each of the privately financed options and (b) the conventionally financed alternatives for the Dartford river crossing. [49]

Ms Glenda Jackson: When compared on the same basis the net present values of the various private and public options were:

NPV of costs	Dartford river crossing plc	Dartford river crossing plc	Dartford tunnel group	Thames tunnel company
Structure	Bridge	Immersed tube tunnels	Tunnel	Tunnel
Privately financed options	234	240	278	271
Publicly financed options	180	191	199	201
Difference between options	54	49	79	70

Departmental Publications

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what literature for bereaved relatives and friends of those killed on the roads his Department provides; and what plans he has to fund additional publications. [3690]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand that booklets are produced by several police forces and by the voluntary organisations with whom the police work closely. Since staff from my Department do not have regular contact with bereaved relatives of those killed on the roads, nor expertise in counselling, it would not seem helpful for the Department to provide such literature.

National Air Traffic Services Computer System

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what actions he is taking to ensure that the computer system operating National Air Traffic Services is not affected by the millennium problem. [4448]

Ms Glenda Jackson: National Air Traffic Services (NATS) commenced a review of the threat to its business from the millennium problem in May 1996. It has included some 700 items of operational equipment in the review process and has already commenced remedial work in areas where there are known problems. NATS is planning to conduct further remedial work during 1997–98 prior to running extensive integration tests for assurance during the winter of 1998–99. In addition to work on internal systems and with its suppliers, NATS has also initiated discussions on the Year 2000 problem with its customers and related air traffic control organisations.

Train Operating Companies (Punctuality)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library the quarterly punctuality figures recorded by OPRAF by train operating company. [4509]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz), Official Report, 10 June 1997, column 413.

Bus Route Tenders (London)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what basis London Transport's tendered bus routes are allocated; and for what reason tenders are not published. [4235]

Ms Glenda Jackson: London Transport awards contracts for bus routes on the basis of best value for money. The content of tender documents is commercially confidential.

Car Clocking

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he intends to take in respect of advertisements for car clocking doctors; and if he will make a statement. [3837]

Ms Glenda Jackson: It is illegal under the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 knowingly to sell a vehicle with a falsified mileage, but there is no offence of "clocking" and it is not presently illegal to advertise a mileage correction service. Equally, it is not illegal to tamper with an odometer and there may be legitimate reasons for wanting to do so. Tampering might be an offence if, on evidence, it is found that such an action assisted in the commissioning of an offence.

Salisbury Bypass

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what representations were made by English Heritage to the inspector during the public inquiry into the proposed Salisbury bypass; [4314]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter from English Heritage to the Transport Minister objecting to his proposed Salisbury bypass. [4315]

Ms Glenda Jackson: English Heritage did not appear at the public inquiry to object to the proposed bypass. The Inspector had before him a folio of correspondence between the Department of Transport and English Heritage. I will place a copy of that folio in the Library together with copies of the more recent exchange in which English Heritage now indicates opposition to the proposed bypass.

Roads Programme

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how he proposes to discharge the manifesto commitment to carry out a strategic review of the roads programme. [5061]

Dr. Strang: I am today launching the Roads Review. The objective of the Review will be to determine the role which roads should play in an integrated transport policy and to establish a forward investment programme for the trunk road network in England.

The Review will be broadly based. Unlike reviews carried out by the previous Government, it will not merely consider what road schemes should be added to or deleted from the trunk roads programme. It will look afresh at the environmental impact of roads and take into account parallel work on developing an integrated transport policy for the UK which my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced recently, including, in particular, work on issues such as whether steps should be taken to manage demand for travel by road, and if so, what means should be used; and, the extent to which we should encourage the use of other modes of transport. It will also consider the role which new technology and improved information systems can play; and the impact which investment in roads could have on regional development. The Roads Review, work on an integrated transport policy and the comprehensive spending review will be very closely co-ordinated.

We intend to consult widely during the Review. During the next few weeks my Department will be consulting key representative bodies both about the range of issues which need to be covered and how we might involve them effectively in the Review. We then intend to launch a public consultation in July, inviting responses by the end of October. We would particularly value contributions from the Regional Planning Conferences, local authorities and other regional bodies. We shall consider in due course what arrangements will be appropriate for continuing regional consultations on trunk road planning beyond the Review, taking account of the comments received in response to the previous Government's proposal to bring trunk roads within the Regional Planning Guidance system.

We hope to announce the conclusions of the Review next Spring. In the interim the Highways Agency will continue to take forward maintenance work, small safety schemes, and two re-signing projects in line with existing plans. Schemes on which construction is already well advanced will continue, but preparatory work on new major schemes will be put on hold at the end of the current stage, except in the relatively few cases in which some procedural step needs to be taken to ensure that work done to date is not lost should we ultimately decide that the scheme should be taken forward. Work on developer funded schemes will also continue as these schemes either have been or will be scrutinised thoroughly in the appropriate planning processes and they are generally small improvements which do not have any wider strategic significance.

There are also 12 cases on which urgent decisions are pending. We therefore propose to carry out an accelerated review of these cases against the criteria of accessibility, safety, economy and environmental impact and announce our decisions on them in July. It may be that in some of these cases we decide in July that a decision cannot be taken in advance of the main Review. In the majority of cases we will take a decision either to take the scheme forward or to abandon it. The cases in question are:

Birmingham Northern Relief Road (BNRR)
M25 Junctions 12–15
M66 Denton–Middleton Contract 3
A2/M2 Cobham J4 widening
Salisbury Bypass/Wessex Link DBFO
A564 Derby Southern Bypass Contract B
Weald and Downland DBFO
Cumbria Bradford DBFO
South Midlands Network DBFO
A40 West London Approach DBFO
A13 Thames Gateway DBFO
M62E/M606 Link Roads.

English Partnerships

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the names and salaries of the board members of English Partnerships. [4004]

Angela Eagle: The names and salaries of the board members of English Partnerships are:

	Salary from 1 April 1997 £	Salary from 1 December 1997 £	Days per week
Lord Walker of Worcester MBE (Chairman)	Does not accept salary	Does not accept salary	—
Sir Idris Pearce (Deputy Chairman)	28,730	28,940	2
Bill Jordan, CBE	6,980	7,035	0.5

	Salary from 1 April 1997 £	Salary from 1 December 1997 £	Days per week
Councillor Michael Carr	6,980	7,035	0.5
Dennis Stevenson	6,980	7,035	0.5
Stephen Massey	6,980	7,035	0.5

Anthony Dunnett (Chief Executive) and Paula Hay-Plumb (Managing Director—Operations) also sit on the board as executive members.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received concerning the future of English Partnerships. [4003]

Angela Eagle: My Department receives frequent correspondence about English Partnerships' programmes and projects.

Wild Animals and Plants (Illegal Trade)

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what further steps the Government plans to take to stop the illegal trade in wild animals and plants. [3800]

Angela Eagle: The Police and HM Customs are Excise are primarily responsible for enforcing the controls on the trade in wildlife. The Government is committed to supporting their work and recognises that controls on trade will contribute to wildlife conservation only if they are fully and effectively enforced.

The Government will continue to contribute to efforts to crack down on the illegal wildlife trade both at home and abroad, through its participation in the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES). Police and Customs officers are part of the UK delegation to the CITES Conference currently taking place in Zimbabwe. The UK signed a Memorandum of Understanding on enforcement with the CITES Secretariat on 12 June. This will secure more rapid and effective exchange of information between the Secretariat and UK enforcement agencies during investigations into the illegal wildlife trade.

A new EC Regulation on the wildlife trade came into force on 1 June. The UK fully supports the new Regulation, and will continue to make a full contribution to the new EC Enforcement Working Group which was established last year.

A new Statutory Instrument, The Control of Trade in Endangered Species (Enforcement) Regulations 1997, also came into force on 1 June. It strengthens enforcement officers' powers, and increases penalties for breaches of the EC Regulation.

The Government also attaches importance to the Partnership for Action Against Wildlife Crime. This has already shown that the Department of the Environment, the Crown Prosecution Service, the statutory enforcement agencies and responsible voluntary bodies can work together effectively in this field.

Environmental Protection Legislation

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce legislation on environmental protection. [3854]

Angela Eagle: We are considering all the mechanisms, including legislation, available for delivering our Manifesto commitment to put the environment at the heart of decision-making across Government. Much can be done administratively, such as through the initiatives which we will introduce to green government and to strengthen co-operation in the European Union on environmental issues. Where we conclude that legislation is required, we will seek appropriate opportunities to introduce it.

Water Charges

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to allow water companies to base their charges on the council tax banding of a dwelling; and if he will make a statement. [3417]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 18 June 1997]: As the Deputy Prime Minister announced at the recent Water Summit, the Government is to review the system of charging for water. Among other issues this review will consider alternative bases of charging, including the use of council tax bands.

Environment Agency

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the responsibilities of the Environment Agency. [4226]

Angela Eagle: The Agency's main statutory responsibilities are to:

- regulate industrial processes with the greatest pollution potential;
- regulate the disposal of radioactive waste and (except on nuclear licensed sites) the keeping and use of radioactive material and accumulation of radioactive waste:
- regulate the treating, keeping, movement and disposal of controlled waste;
- preserve or improve the quality of rivers, estuaries and coastal waters;
- take any necessary action to conserve, redistribute, augment and secure proper use of water resources;
- exercise a general supervision over all matters relating to flood defence;
- maintain, improve and develop salmon, trout, freshwater and eel fisheries;
- promote the conservation and enhancement of inland and coastal waters, and their use for recreation;
- maintain or improve non-marine navigation;
- regulate the remediation of contaminated land designated as special sites; and
- administer, in accordance with regulations on producer responsibility, registration of businesses and exemption schemes.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what responsibilities the Environment Agency has in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [4228]

Angela Eagle: The Secretary of State is the competent authority of transit for the whole of the United Kingdom for transfrontier shipments of waste under Council Regulation (EEC) No. 259/93. He has delegated the day-to-day administration of this function to the Environment Agency. Also, section 84(2)(b) of the Water Resources Act 1991 places a statutory duty on the Environment Agency to consult, in such cases as it may consider appropriate, with the Scottish Environmental Protection Agency over water quality objectives. This relates to parts of the rivers Esk, Sark and Tweed.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for The Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the organisations replaced by the Environment Agency in 1996, indicating in each case whether they had been operating under an exemption in terms of the Value Added Tax Act 1994, section 33. [4225]

Angela Eagle: The Environment Agency was formed from:

(a) National Rivers Authority: Exempt from VAT

(b) Waste Regulation Authorities: Exempt from VAT

(c) Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Pollution and other sections of the Department of the Environment: Not exempt from VAT

Scotland

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what responsibilities he has in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [4227]

Mr. Prescott: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on 3 June 1997, Official Report, column 158.

Wyre Borough Council

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the factors underlying the non-receipt by Wyre borough council of the outstanding payments of ERDF non quota section: grant payments under reference number EPNW5299-72912, EPN-W529972916, EPNW52997291, EPNW52997291, EPNW-529972917, EPNW529972914, EPNW529972913 and EPNW5299-2917; and when he expects payments of the outstanding moneys to be made. [4059]

Angela Eagle: Regrettably, payment by the European Commission of the balance of ERDF due under the Non-Quota Fisheries Programme is still outstanding. This is because the European Commission have yet to approve the final annual report on the programme. The Commission have not yet formally responded, although I understand they will be seeking further clarification on a small number of details.

Officials in the Department of Trade and Industry are in touch with officials at the Commission and hope to reach a conclusion shortly, which will enable the Commission to pay the final balance. Once this ERDF is received, we will ensure that all outstanding payments to Wyre Borough Council are made promptly.

Housing

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will extend Part M of the Building Regulations to encompass new housing; and if he will make a statement. [4309]

Mr. Raynsford: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave on 11 June 1997, Official Report, column 472, to a similar question asked by the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow).

Capital Receipts Initiative

Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how he intends to take forward his proposals under the capital receipts initiative. [4842]

Ms Armstrong: We have today issued a consultation paper to all local authorities in England. That paper sets out our proposals for the distribution of any additional spending between local authorities.

We wish to ensure that spending generated under the receipts initiative will be directed towards priority housing needs. Capital receipts themselves, however, have not always been generated in the areas of greatest need. Some authorities have generated significant volumes of receipts but have relatively low needs. Others have had little or no scope to generate significant receipts, yet have particularly high needs. We are, therefore, proposing that resources should be allocated on the basis of one third according to the proportion of eligible set-aside receipts and the remaining two thirds in accordance with assessed need.

The paper also sets out our objectives for spending. Our intention is that the resources will be targeted on housing and housing-related regeneration schemes. We, therefore, wish to ensure that local authorities integrate the additional spending into their housing strategies, plan for badly needed repairs to dilapidated stock and support new provision where it is needed.

It is also our intention that this initiative should contribute to and complement this Government's wider policy of increasing training opportunities and leading the young unemployed into work and financial independence.

My Right hon. Friend, the Chancellor, will announce the amount of additional resources that will be available for 1997–98 and 1998–99 in the Summer budget.

Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Library of the House.

Garden Extensions

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce a new permitted development right for householders to extend their gardens. [4977]

Mr. Raynsford: A consultation paper was issued last November on a proposal that householders should in future be able to extend their gardens onto adjacent land, without needing to submit a planning application. The Department received 425 replies, copies of which have now been placed in the Department's library. Three hundred and sixty-one expressed opposition and only 34 offered support. Many objections concentrated on the damage impact that such a proposal could have on the open countryside with the creeping suburbanisation of specially protected areas such as the National Parks and the Green Belt. Concern was also expressed about the resulting lack of control over the erection of ancillary buildings and the absence of any size limit on the land which could be added to a garden.

The Government's view is that the impact of a proposed garden extension is best considered, as at present, through the normal planning process and my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of Wales and I have therefore decided to withdraw this proposal.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Housing Benefit

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the impact of the £27.50 limit on the amount of rent which can be covered by housing benefit for single under-25 people; and if she will make a statement. [2237]

Mr. Bradley: There is no national limit on the amount of rent which can be covered by Housing Benefit for single people under 25. The single room rent is determined by independent Rent Officers for the locality in which the claimant lives. The single room rent restriction was introduced by the previous administration in October 1996. They initiated a monitoring exercise and we will look at the results carefully. The Government has also commissioned research to gauge the impact of this, and other measures. The results are expected next year.

Conferences (Disabled Access)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps his Department takes to make the conferences and public meetings which it sponsors accessible to disabled people, with particular reference to (a) the availability of hearing induction loops, (b) the availability of sign language facilities and (c) the use of accessible buildings for wheelchairs. [3976]

Mr. Field: An increasing number of the Department of Social Security buildings are accessible to disabled people, including those in wheelchairs, and have induction loop facilities for those with a hearing disability. Where accommodation outside the DSS estate is being used, organisers of events make every effort to take into account the needs of the people attending. Sign language interpreters are provided where a need is identified.

The Department has also provided training for its staff on the Disability Discrimination Act which includes reference to the provision of services to disabled people. We will continue to make progress on this important issue.

Child Support Agency

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 3 June, Official Report, columns 143–44, on the level of compliance with CSA maintenance assessments, what plans she has to review the operational effectiveness of the Child Support Agency; if she will undertake an investigation into (a) the types of case which are most likely to result in zero compliance and (b) the methods employed by the CSA to enforce compliance against those absent parents who have only ever made limited or zero contributions to their children's maintenance; what assessment she has made into the proportion of full compliance cases in which there was an existing maintenance agreement between the parents; and if she will make a statement on the effectiveness of the system of interim maintenance assessments adopted by the CSA. [4231]

Mr. Bradley: We intend to look closely at all aspects of the Child Support Agency to ensure that it provides an efficient and effective service. Children are entitled to the support of both parents wherever they live.

We expect the Agency to provide an efficient and effective service to all its clients.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cattle Slaughter Scheme

14. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle have been slaughtered in (a) the over-30-months scheme and (b) the accelerated slaughter programme. [2904]

Mr. Rooker: As at 13 June 1997, 1,494,040 cattle had been slaughtered under the over-30-months scheme, and 6,478 cattle under the Selective Cull Scheme.

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy that relevant hon. Members and local authorities will be consulted over future proposals to store carcases or rendered material from the over-30-months scheme in their constituencies or areas. [2830]

Mr. Rooker: Commission Regulation 716/96, under which the over-30-months scheme (OTMS) operates, expressly prohibits the purchase of animals showing any clinical signs of BSE. BSE suspects are being sent for direct incineration under entirely separate arrangements. Nevertheless, it is now the practice of the Intervention Board, which has executive responsibility for the day to day operation of the OTMS, to consult the Environment Agency and the local authority about the suitability of any dry or tallow storage facilities offered to it for OTMS material. The local Member of Parliament is also informed that these consultations are taking place. Contracts would be let only for stores which comply with the waste management provisions of Part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and related Regulations and which have, or where appropriate, are likely to be granted, local authority planning approval which would allow for the storage of meat and bone meal or tallow. No new cold storage facilities for OTMS carcases are under consideration.

Fruit Farming Industry

15. Mr. Rowe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to assist the fruit farming industry in the aftermath of the frosts in May. [2905]

Mr. Rooker: The European Commission has the matter under review but I have no plans to provide any further specific assistance to the fruit farming industry. It is, in any event, too early to assess the economic consequences of the recent frosts.

Fisheries Management

16. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress there has been on developing regional fisheries management at the intergovernmental conference. [2906]

Mr. Morley: In the context of negotiations on the Common Fisheries Policy the European Commission has committed itself to exploring ways of developing greater involvement of local fishing interests in the decision making process. This is a welcome step forward.

Slaughterhouse Hygiene

17. Mr. Tipping: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking against slaughterhouse owners who fail to implement adequate standards of hygiene. [2907]

Dr. John Cunningham: My hon. Friend the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has instructed the Meat Hygiene Service to enforce the Regulations vigorously. Ministers will not hesitate to revoke the licences of slaughterhouses which fail to maintain adequate hygiene standards.

Cattle Traceability

18. Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress he is making with the implementation of a cattle traceability system. [2908]

Dr. John Cunningham: I am considering responses to proposals for a computerised cattle traceability system. I intend to bring this system into effect in Great Britain as soon as possible.

Quota-hopping

19. Mr. Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his discussions with the European Commission on quota-hopping. [2909]

Mr. Morley: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement that my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food made on 18 June 1997, Official Report, columns 331–44.

Food Standards Agency

20. Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what criteria will be used to determine the location of the Food Standards Agency. [2910]

Mr. Rooker: The Food Standards Agency will need to be located where it can carry out its tasks most effectively, having regard to the costs involved. We shall consider this issue further in the light of the responses to Professor James's Report.

Scrapie

21. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to prevent risk material from sheep affected by scrapie entering the food chain. [2911]

Mr. Rooker: Sheep with scrapie and the heads of all sheep are prohibited from being used for food. On 5 June my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced that he intends to extend the controls to cover the spleen and for older sheep the spinal cord and to require compulsory slaughter with compensation for sheep with scrapie.

Imported Beef

22. Mr. John Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he will take to ensure that imported beef complies with the same standards of traceability, quality and hygiene in relation to the removal of specified bovine offals on domestic beef. [2913]

23. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures are being taken to restrict imports of beef that do not conform to United Kingdom regulations introduced to guard against BSE-infected meat entering the human food chain. [2914]

Mr. Rooker: I refer the hon. Members to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 5 June, Official Report, columns 227–28.

Beef Ban

24. Mr. Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to announce progress on negotiations on the lifting of the EU ban on British beef. [2915]

Mr. Rooker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to the hon. Member for North Shropshire (Mr. Paterson) earlier today.

BSE

25. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the extent of BSE on the continent of Europe. [2916]

Mr. Rooker: The following table gives the total number of confirmed BSE cases in cattle in European countries other than the UK as at 27 May 1997:

Country	Number of cases[1]	Number born in UK
Denmark	1	1
France	27	0
Germany	5	5
Republic of Ireland	222	12
Italy	2	2
Netherlands	2	0
Switzerland	250	0

[1] For Member States the numbers are those reported to the Commission under Council Directive 82/894/EEC (as amended). Figures for Switzerland were taken from notifiable disease statistics issued by the Swiss Federal Office of Veterinary Affairs.

Woodlands

26. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the management of Forestry Commission woodlands in England following Scottish devolution. [2917]

Mr. Morley: We are currently considering the possible effects of Scottish devolution on the Forestry Commission. However, the responsibility for forestry in England, including the Forestry Commission's woodlands, rests with the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and Scottish devolution would not affect this.

Quarantine Regulations

27. Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when and in what form he will consult on changes to quarantine regulations for pet dogs and cats. [2918]

Dr. John Cunningham: Because of the wide and legitimate interest in this subject, we would expect to consult at some point on this matter. Decisions on when and how to do so have yet to be taken.

Health and the Environment

28. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures his Department is considering undertaking for the long-term health of consumers and the safety of the environment. [2919]

Mr. Morley: The Department is committed to placing protection of the public first. To that end, my officials are working in close consultation with colleagues in the Department of Health and other Departments to prepare for the establishment of a Food Standards Agency. The Agency will be responsible for assuring public health in all matters of food safety policy.

At the same time we are also taking a number of initiatives to drive up meat hygiene standards in abattoirs. Poor hygiene practices will not be tolerated and the Regulations will be enforced vigorously.

The Department has a number of measures in place to protect the environment and is considering whether further measures are necessary. Existing measures include strict approval arrangements for pesticides, Codes of Practice on protecting air, water and soil, and voluntary incentive schemes to promote environmentally friendly farming.

The Government also aims to secure reform of the CAP to reduce food prices, save money and provide more targeted support for the rural economy and enhancing the rural environment.

Badger Setts

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the damage caused to farm machinery by holes associated with badger setts; and if he will make a statement on his Department's plans to limit such damage. [3923]

Mr. Morley: The Department is aware that where badger setts undermine farm tracks or fields they can pose a serious risk to farm machinery. In such cases, farmers should apply to the relevant Regional Service Centre for a licence under the provisions of the Protection of Badgers Act 1992 to close down those holes of the sett which pose a risk.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ban the live export of animals from British ports by sea and air; and if he will make a statement. [4179]

Mr. Morley: The Government accepts that in general the export of live animals is a legal trade. However we have made clear our strong preference for meat to be exported on the hook rather than on the hoof; that we will seriously consider banning the export of calves for rearing in narrow veal crates if the European Court of Justice in its forthcoming judgment finds this to be legal; and that we wish the new EU rules on welfare in transit, as now implemented through the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997, to be strictly and scrupulously enforced. We are also reviewing current procedure relating to the inspection and certification of live animals for export.

Genetically Engineered Soya

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 9 June, Official Report, column 356, what steps he is taking to ensure that tryptophan is not present in genetically engineered soya imported into the United Kingdom. [3465]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 June 1997]: The amino acid tryptophan occurs naturally in a wide range of crops, including soya. In assessing the safety of the genetically modified soya, the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes compared the levels of tryptophan present with those found in non-GM varieties of soya and concluded that they were equivalent. The committee also considered the results of a range of animal feeding studies, none of which showed any adverse effects. As a further safeguard, the company which applied for the authorisation has agreed to monitor the genetic stability of the crop by providing periodic updates on the levels of nutrients in both the genetically modified and related non-genetically modified forms.

Special Advisers

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will indicate the number of salaries of his Department's special advisers falling within the range of (a) £24,349–£29,999, (b) £30,000–£34,999, (c) £35,000–£39,999, (d) £40,000–£44,999, (e) £45,000–£49,999, (f) £50,000–£54,999, (g) £55,000–£59,999, (h) £60,000–£64,999, (i) £65,000–£69,999 and (j) £70,000–£73,484. [4554]

Mr. Morley: Consistent with the practice of previous administrations and in order to protect the privacy of individuals, only aggregate information on the salaries of special advisers will be published.

Once all salaries have been agreed the number of advisers paid in each of the appropriate £10,000 bands will be published.

HEALTH

General Practitioners

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many qualified general practitioners of working age are (a) resident in the United Kingdom and (b) in practice. [3803]

Mr. Milburn: The available information was published in "General Medical Services Statistics, England and Wales", on 1 October 1996, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy on NHS prescription charges for pensioners. [3834]

Mr. Milburn: We will be examining the question of prescription charges as part of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review. The Government remains committed to the historic principle of the National Health Service that health services will be available to all and access will be based on need, not on ability to pay.

Doctors and Nurses

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) doctors and (b) nurses are employed in the NHS currently; and in each case how many were employed in (i) 1992 and (ii) 1987. [3439]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is given in the tables.

Table A: National Health Service Hospital and Community Health Services (HCHS) doctors and General Medical Services (GMS) doctors (headcounts) in England in 1987, 1992 and 1995[1]

	1987	1992	1995
HCHS medical staff and GMS General Medical Practitioners[2] (Headcount)	69,570	75,740	[1]81,000

[1] 1995 is the latest year for which figures are available.
[2] Figures exclude hospital practitioners and clinical assistants to avoid double counting as most hospital practitioners and clinical assistants also work as general practitioners.

Table B: NHS HCHS nursing and midwifery staff and GMS practice nurses in England in 1987, 1992 and 1996[1]

	1987	1992	1996
HCHS nursing and midwifery staff and GMS practice nurses[2] (Whole–time equivalents)	336,110	353,170	[3]342,480
Not included in the above:
HCHS Learners[4]	64,560	34,740	2,670
Project 2000 students[4]	Not applicable	18,300	34,000

Notes:
[1] 1996 is the latest year for which figures are available.
[2] Excludes agency staff.
[3] The figure for 1996 is not directly comparable with figures for earlier years because of the introduction of a new system of classifying staff in 1995.
[4] Learners are nurses on traditional nurse training courses, and are directly employed by the NHS HCHS. Project 2000 training was introduced in 1989 and has gradually replaced traditional pre-registration nurse training. Project 2000 students are funded by bursaries, they are supernumary not employees, and are thus excluded from the count of NHS HCHS nursing staff. Figures for project 2000 students are headcounts and should not be added to other nursing figures in the table which are whole-time equivalents.
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest ten.
2. HCHS figures are as at 30 September each year.
3. GMS figures are as at 1 October each year.

Hepatitis C

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will require health authorities to provide counselling before and after blood tests for hepatitis C. [3379]

Mr. Boateng: No. In general, patients should be given sufficient information to enable them to make an informed decision before any diagnostic test. For hepatitis C, this would include discussion of the treatment options, the consequences of a positive test and advice about lifestyle. However, when the Chief Medical Officer wrote to all doctors on 3 April 1995 about the "Look Back" exercise to identify those infected with hepatitis C through blood transfusion, the letter specified that counselling should be made available before and after testing for those found to be infected in this way.

Malaria

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many notified malaria cases there have been in each year since the abolition of NHS prescriptions for malaria chemoprophylaxis. [3802]

Ms Jowell: An amendment to the regulations covering the provision of malarial prophylaxis came into force on February 1995 and since then travellers have to pay for their anti-malarial drugs. The number of cases of malaria reported in the United Kingdom for the last 10 years is given in the table. There have been 325 cases of malaria reported to the Malaria Reference Laboratory for the period January to March 1997; this compares to 397 cases reported for the same period in 1996 and 314 in 1995. The number of cases of malaria varies each year and reflects the variations in transmission in the endemic areas as well as the number of people travelling to malarious areas. We will continue to monitor the situation.

Number of cases of malaria reported in the UK to the Malaria Reference Laboratory, 1987–1996:

Year	Cases of malaria
1987	1,816
1988	1,674
1989	1,987
1990	2,096
1991	2,332
1992	1,629
1993	1,922
1994	1,887
1995	2,055
1996	2,500

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has evaluated on the change in incidence of the new variant form of CJD. [3835]

Ms Jowell: New variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease (nvCJD) came to light in early 1996. Mathematical modelling indicates that it is likely to be three or four years before we can make soundly based predictions of the likely course of the disease.

NHS Staff Contracts

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to abolish confidentiality clauses within NHS staff contracts. [4203]

Mr. Milburn: The matter is currently being considered.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to ensure that hospital trusts send out ethnic monitoring questionnaires with application forms. [4041]

Mr. Milburn: The Department of Health recommends ethnic monitoring of job applicants as good personnel practice in "Ethnic minority staff in the NHS: a programme of action" and in guidance to the NHS on medical appointments. Chairs and Chief Executives of NHS trusts and health authorities are accountable for meeting equal opportunities objectives locally. Postgraduate deans conduct ethnic monitoring of specialist registrar appointments.

The NHS Executive is working with NHS employers, professional bodies and Royal Colleges, education consortia, trade unions, Deans and others to tackle discrimination and encourage adoption of best practice.

Wythenshaw Hospital

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been transferred out of Wythenshawe hospital in each month since January 1996 because of a lack of available beds; and what estimate he has made of the cost of (a) transferring patients and (b) their treatment. [4181]

Mr. Milburn: A patient cannot be admitted to hospital unless a bed is available. The number of Accident and Emergency patients who were transferred to other hospitals as a result of Wythenshawe Hospital being full is set out in the table. Both Withington and Wythenshawe Hospitals are part of South Manchester University Hospitals NHS Trust.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time persons employed by his Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (iii) less than £3 an hour; and what estimate he has made in each case for the national health service generally. [4187]

Ms Jowell: No staff in my Department or its agencies earn less than £3 an hour. Sixty-one full time staff earn up to £3.50 an hour; 47 full time staff and two part time staff, earn between £3.50 and £4 an hour.

For the NHS generally, I refer the right hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department of Trade and Industry gave the hon. Member for Romsey (Mr. Colvin) on 2 June 1997 at columns 20–21.

Corticosteroids

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people who (a) have been prescribed and (b) took corticosteroids in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [4173]

Mr. Milburn: It is not possible to estimate the number of people prescribed and taking corticosteroids. Thirty-one million prescriptions items for corticosteroids were dispensed in England in 1996.

Racial Discrimination

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he proposes to take to tackle racial discrimination in the health service. [4044]

Mr. Milburn: We are determined to take action to ensure that the Health Service is free from racial discrimination. The NHS Executive has signed up to the Commission for Racial Equality's "Leadership Challenge" as a signal of our commitment in the European Year Against Racism.

The NHS Equal Opportunities Unit is working with NHS employers, professional bodies, the Commission for Racial Equality, trade unions and others to enhance the capacity of the Service to tackle discrimination and encourage adoption of good practice. This work includes supporting NHS trusts and health authorities, whose Chairs and Chief Executives are accountable for meeting the goals of "Ethnic minority staff in the NHS: a programme for action", by promoting and disseminating best practice. Progress towards these goals forms part of the "NHS as a good employer" benchmark set out in the annual Priorities and Planning guidance.

Gyms and Health Centres

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to extend the provisions of access to gyms and health centres on prescription; and if he will make a statement. [4129]

Mr. Milburn: General Practitioner exercise on prescription schemes are being adopted at local level. For the price of a prescription, patients can make use of local health and leisure facilities for a planned programme of appropriate exercise. Some prescription schemes already make use of gyms. Individual local health care teams are best placed to decide which facility would deliver the greatest benefit to the patient. Detailed guidance for primary health care teams is contained in the Health Education Authority's document "Promoting Physical Activity in Primary Care".

NHS Prescriptions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people receiving NHS prescriptions who do not follow the full course of treatment. [4284]

Mr. Milburn: In 1996 the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys survey of prescribed medicines in a random sample of 2,082 households found that 8 per cent. could be described as residual or wasted. Within this, 0.7 per cent. were completely unused, 4 per cent. were approximately half used and 3 per cent. were almost gone.

Ophthalmic Service

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the cost of the ophthalmic service in England and Wales is borne by the users. [4379]

Mr. Milburn: There are no charges for the general ophthalmic services provided under the National Health Service, but only selected groups are eligible for NHS sight tests and spectacle vouchers. We do not have information on the cost of similar services provided privately.

Electricity Transmission Lines

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has commissioned into the health effects of electricity transmission lines on those living in their vicinity. [4281]

Ms Jowell: The Department obtains advice on the health implications of exposure to electromagnetic fields from the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) and other sources including its own funded research. The primary focus of concern has been on power lines and childhood cancer where the results have not shown a proven link: the NRPB's Advisory Group on Non-ionising Radiation conducted an extensive review of the subject in 1992 and concluded that there was no firm evidence of a carcinogenic hazard from exposure that might be associated with residence near major sources of electricity supply, the use of electrical appliances or work in the electrical, electronic and telecommunication industries. The Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment has endorsed the Advisory Group's report. A supplementary report in 1994 was published by the NRPB to take into account the results of epidemiological studies from Scandinavia, France and Canada. Copies of the Advisory Group's report and the supplementary documents are available in the Library.

Several epidemiological studies are currently under way to investigate childhood cancer in relation to various possible causes including electromagnetic fields. The largest study of this type in this country is the United Kingdom Childhood Cancer Study which is funded in part by the Department of Health with technical support provided by the NRPB. The Department is also funding two pilot studies, one of adults and one of children, looking at cancer incidence near power lines.

Prescription Fraud

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish the report of the Efficiency Scrutiny into Prescription Fraud. [4843]

Mr. Milburn: I have now received the report of the "Efficiency Scrutiny into Prescription Fraud". I will be publishing it today, and placing a copy in the Library.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria will be used to determine the health service's strategic need for hospitals to be financed under the private finance initiative. [4060]

Mr. Milburn: The Department of Health will develop its capital investment system so that it will prioritise all major acute sector hospital schemes in accordance with health service needs. This system will apply to both Private Finance Initiative (PFI) and publicly funded procurement options. Proposals for dealing with small-scale acute schemes and non-acute schemes under the PFI will be put forward in the near future.

HIV/AIDS

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the numbers of HIV/AIDS sufferers receiving treatment (i) by health board area, (ii) in Wales and (iii) in England; what was the spending per head on treatment and care of HIV/AIDS sufferers in England; if he will give the spending in England and Wales on prevention of HIV/AIDS, in the most recent year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [4214]

Ms Jowell: The total number of HIV positive individuals (including those with AIDS) receiving treatment in 1995 in England was 13,146. In Wales the corresponding total was 197. These data are derived from the National Survey of Prevalent Diagnosed HIV Infections, and record all identified HIV infected patients treated by statutory services during 1995. This is the latest year for which figures are available. The data cover all areas in England but there may be a small element of under reporting. The breakdown of numbers treated in each Regional Office area in England is as follows:

	Number
Northern and Yorkshire	532
Trent	407
Anglia and Oxford	509
North Thames	7,014

	Number
South Thames	2,693
South and West	686
West Midlands	410
North Western	895

The total number for Wales is as follows:

Wales: 197

The total allocation for AIDS treatment and care in England in 1995–96 was £195.1 million. The funds are allocated to health authorities on the basis of the number of AIDS cases reported by the authority to the Public Health Laboratory Service. The funds are directed by health authorities mainly to the statutory health care services, but may also be used to fund a range of other service providers as determined by local needs assessment.

The funds are no longer ringfenced and it is up to health authorities, taking account of local needs assessment and priorities, to determine their local priorities for expenditure. The allocations for AIDS treatment and care in England for 1996–97 totalled £185.7 million, the reduction was because the latest AIDS projections report indicated that the number of people alive with AIDS and severe HIV disease in 1996–97 would be around 10 per cent. lower than previously projected. The allocations for 1997–98 are £199.6 million. This increase represents a contribution towards the costs of new combination therapies. In 1995–96 £49.6 million was allocated to health authorities in England for HIV prevention. These funds continue to be ringfenced, and the corresponding totals for 1996–97 and 1997–98 are £51.3 and £52.3 million respectively. In Wales the majority of expenditure on HIV/AIDS is targeted at preventative measures. The expenditure in 1995–96 totals £2.2 million.

Dental Services

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 10 June, Official Report, column 423, on dental services, if he will list equivalent figures for lapsed dental registration in the three years before the introduction of dental check-up charges, and in each year subsequent to it. [4219]

Mr. Milburn: The adult patient charge for dental examinations was introduced in January 1989. Adults were first registered under the new dental contract in October 1990; the first registration lapses occurred two years later. The number of adult registration lapses for each of the full years 1993–94 to 1996–97 is given in the table.

General dental service: Number of adult registration lapses

England

Year	Million
1993–94	4.2
1994–95	4.7
1995–96	4.6
1996–97	4.1

1. The first adult registration lapses occurred in the autumn of 1992, mid-way during the financial year 1992–93. During that part year there were 2.8 million lapses.

2. These figures relate to the number of adult registrations lapsed after a period of two years during which the patient had not attended the dentist. These figures are affected by improvements in the Dental Practice Board procedures for eliminating duplicate registrations.

Proposed NHS Trusts Merger

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to oppose the proposed merger of the Ashford (Middlesex) Hospital and St. Peter's Hospital NHS trusts. [4310]

Mr. Milburn: Any merger proposal will be considered carefully according to its merits and the benefit to patient care.

Norfolk and Norwich Hospital

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations his Department and the NHS Executive have had about future possible uses of the west Norwich and Stephens sites of the Norfolk and Norwich Healthcare NHS Trust after the new Norfolk and Norwich Hospital has been opened. [4521]

Mr. Milburn: The Department and the Anglia and Oxford Regional Office of the NHS Executive have not had any consultations about future use of the sites of the present Norfolk and Norwich and West Norwich Hospitals and no decisions have yet been taken.

Mr. Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates his Department has made of the number of car journeys per day by (a) staff, (b) patients and (c) visitors that the new Norfolk and Norwich Hospital is likely to generate. [4522]

Mr. Milburn: A traffic impact assessment (TIA) commissioned by the Norfolk and Norwich Healthcare NHS Trust has identified likely daily flows of traffic to the new hospital as follows:

Staff: 2,666

Patients: 1,486

Service vehicles: 180

Visitors: 1,212.

The TIA made proposals to provide public transport, cycleways and footpaths to the new site which were accepted by the Planning Authorities.

Accident and Emergency Facilities

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria his Department currently lays down for health authorities on accessibility to 24-hour accident and emergency facilities in urban areas. [4523]

Mr. Milburn: It is the responsibility of health authorities to decide what facilities are needed in their area, taking account of varying local conditions.

In addition, on 29 October 1996 the NHS Chief Executive wrote to the Chief Executives of all health authorities and NHS trusts reminding them that their first priority was to meet pressures on emergency services. He went on to say that it is a fundamental expectation that accident and emergency departments must not close to emergency admissions. He stressed this point again last week in a speech to the Conference of the Institute of Health Service Managers.

Mr. Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the towns and cities in Britain, with a population greater than 50,000, which currently have no NHS 24-hour accident and emergency service within their boundaries. [4512]

Mr. Milburn: In 1995–96 there were 211 National Health Service trusts, special health authorities and directly managed units with large accident and emergency departments. We do not hold information on which towns and cities have accident and emergency departments within their boundaries.

Special Advisers

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will indicate the number of salaries of his Department's special advisers falling within the range of (a) £24,349–£29,999, (b) £30,000–£34,999, (c) £35,000–£39,999, (d) £40,000–£44,999, (e) £45,000–£49,999, (f) £50,000–£54,999, (g) £55,000–£59,999, (h) £60,000–£64,999, (i) £65,000–£69,999 and (j) £70,000–£73,484. [4558]

Ms Jowell: Consistently with the practice of the previous administrations and in order to protect the privacy of individuals, only aggregate information on the salaries of special advisers will be published.

Once all salaries have been agreed aggregate information will be published giving the number of advisers paid in £10,000 bands.

Hospital Access

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department issues to ensure that new hospitals are accessible to patients, visitors and staff by public transport (a) with regular frequency, (b) for 24-hours a day and (c) at a reasonable price. [4520]

Mr. Milburn: The policy on access by public transport is the responsibility of the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions which produces guidance for local authorities. It is for the local authorities to interpret the guidance when considering planning applications by National Health Service trusts for new hospital sites.

Guidance issued by NHS Estates, an Agency of the Department of Health, advises NHS bodies to provide facilities in a way which allows them to be accessible to patients and draws to their attention the need to consider access, circulation and vehicle parking, highlighting the need for a good public transport service to meet the needs of staff, patients and visitors, with the aim of reducing demand upon, and the expense of, car parking facilities.

SCOTLAND

Diabetics

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to allow pen needles to be made available on prescription for people with diabetes who require insulin; and if he will make a statement. [4139]

Mr. Galbraith: The Department of Health, on behalf of all the UK Health Departments, evaluates appliances for safety, efficacy and value for money.

The Department of Health is currently considering whether needles for pen injection systems should be prescribable by general practitioners on the National Health Service.

Council of Ministers

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many European Council of Ministers meetings Scottish Environment Ministers have attended since 1992; and if he will make a statement. [4224]

Mr. Chisholm: Scottish Environment Ministers have attended three Environment Councils since 1992. In line with our Manifesto commitment that a Labour Government would mean Scotland's concerns being heard at the heart of Europe, Scottish Ministers work closely with their colleagues to ensure Scotland's interests in European matters are taken fully into account. Their attendance at Council meetings, where matters of interest to Scotland are to be discussed, clearly contributes to the delivery of our commitment.

Control of Pollution Act 1974

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) persons and (b) organisations have been convicted under sections 31 and 32 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 in each of the past 10 years; what was the range of fines imposed and the average financial penalty; and if he will make a statement. [4058]

Mr. Chisholm: The information requested is not held centrally and the data could be collated only at a disproportionate cost.

Up to 1995–96 the information requested is within the annual reports of individual river purification boards, which are available in the House Library. However, information on convictions in the former island council areas is not held centrally. The Scottish Environment Protection Agency is presently considering the information which should be contained within its 1996–97 annual report and we will bring this issue to its attention.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to modify the Control of Pollution Act 1974; and if he will make a statement. [4057]

Mr. Chisholm: There are no present plans to modify the Control of Pollution Act 1974. The Act may however need to be amended in the light of developments in relation to the EC water framework directive currently under negotiation.

Cattle (Computerised Traceability)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the computerised traceability scheme proposed by Mr. Brian Pack of Aberdeen and Northern Marts; and if he will make a statement on the estimated time scale for the introduction of a fully computerised traceability scheme for beef herds in Scotland. [4217]

Mr. Chisholm: Aberdeen and Northern Marts carried out a feasibility study on a computerised tracing system for Scottish cattle in 1994. This voluntary system was considered by the Department, as were contributions from other sources. Circumstances have changed considerably since then. Both the Government and the industry ascribe great importance to the introduction of a mandatory national system. We are proceeding urgently on this basis.

Special Advisers

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will indicate the number of salaries of his Department's special advisers falling within the range of (a) £24,349–£29,999, (b) £30,000–£34,999, (c) £35,000–£39,999, (d) £40,000–£44,999, (e) £45,000–£49,999, (f) £50,000–£54,999, (g) £55,000–£59,999, (h) £60,000–£64,999, (i) £65,000–£69,999 and (j) £70,000–£73,484. [4556]

Mr. Dewar: Consistent with the practice of previous administrations and in order to protect the privacy of individuals, only aggregate information on the salaries of special advisers will be published. Once all salaries have been agreed the number of advisers paid in each of the appropriate £10,000 bands will be published.

Written Answers to Questions

HOME DEPARTMENT

Thomas G. Moringiello

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date Mr. Thomas G. Moringiello (TH 2658) was convicted and of what offence; what sentence he received and on what date he completed his sentence; for what reason he is still being detained; what is the total cost to the taxpayer of his imprisonment; what was the sum of money involved in the offences for which he was convicted; and if he will make a statement. [3516]

Ms Joyce Quin: Mr. Thomas G. Moringiello, who is a citizen of the United States, was convicted at Liverpool Crown Court on 27 June 1996 of 10 charges of fraud and deception involving sums totalling £815.69. He was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment and recommended for deportation. Mr. Moringiello lodged an appeal against conviction and sentence, and this is due to be heard by the Court of Appeal on 26 June. Taking into account remand time, the conditional release date from his sentence was 21 August 1996, but he is now held under the Immigration Act 1971 pending the decision as to whether he should be deported. From the time of his first remand into custody on 1 December 1995 up to the present time, the cost of Mr. Moringiello's imprisonment has been approximately £35,384.

Alcohol (Young People)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will strengthen the law to prevent the drinking of alcohol by persons under the age of 18 years in public streets. [4182]

Mr. Michael: The Government is determined to tackle the problem of young people and alcohol. We will implement the Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997 which will provide the police with the power to confiscate alcohol from those under 18 years of age drinking in a public place.

We have also set up a Ministerial Group to look at the promotion and sale of certain alcoholic drinks to children. We are holding urgent talks with the drinks industry to demand swift action. If we are not satisfied with the response we are prepared to take action ourselves.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by (1) each police force and (2) each London borough the number of persons shot with illegal firearms in each of the last three years and the current year, indicating (a) how many persons were (i) killed and (ii) injured, (b) the type of firearm used, (c) the calibre of firearm used, (d) the number of persons made answerable to the courts in respect of such crimes and (e) the number of occasions the police have sent an armed response team to an incident. [4051]

Mr. Michael: In the past, information on whether firearms used in crime are legally held or not or on the calibre of firearms used has not been collected centrally in England and Wales as a matter of routine. However, a special exercise was conducted last year to find out further information on homicides involving firearms. This covered the three years from 1992 to 1994, and out of a total of 196 homicides involving the use of a firearm, information was available in 129 cases to show the weapon was held illegally.

Information on individual London Boroughs is not available centrally, nor is information on incidents where only non-fatal injuries were caused or the use of armed response teams in these incidents. The number of persons prosecuted for the offences is available only at disproportionate cost.

Public Houses

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his proposed anti-social neighbours legislation will apply to public houses. [4076]

Mr. Michael: We are working on the details of the Community Safety Order for inclusion in the Crime and Disorder Bill, but I would expect it to be capable of applying to anti-social behaviour arising from an individual's presence in a public house.

Prison Statistics

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the maximum number of prisoners that can be accommodated at (a) Camp Hill, (b) Albany and (c) Parkhurst prisons on the Isle of Wight; and on what occasions those limits have been exceeded during the past 10 years. [4084]

Ms Joyce Quin: The maximum number of prisoners that can be accommodated at a prison is known as the "operational capacity". This is defined as the certified total number of prisoners that can be held without serious risk to good order, security and the proper running of the planned regime. This number fluctuates, for example as accommodation is brought in and out of use and as assessments are revised by the Area Manager.

As at 18 June, the operational capacity at (a) Camp Hill was 531, (b) Albany was 436 and (c) Parkhurst was 349.

Centrally recorded information on whether operational capacity has been exceeded is available only from 1 January 1996, based on population figures for the last Friday of each month. This indicates that the figure was exceeded at Albany in March 1997 and from November 1996 to January 1997 at Parkhurst.

Electric Shock Devices

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many British companies have been licensed under section 5 of the Firearms Act 1982 to handle, distribute, store and manufacture electric shock devices in each year since 1992; and if he will name them; [3815]

(2) What assessment he has made of procedures which regulate the manufacture, sales, storage and distribution of electric shock devices by United Kingdom companies. [3942]

Mr. Michael: The unauthorised acquisition, purchase, possession, manufacture, sale and transfer of weapons discharging electric shocks are considered to be prohibited under section 5(1)(b) of the Firearms Act 1968.

Applications for authority under section 5 of the 1968 Act are considered by the Home Office, for companies in England and Wales, and by the Scottish Office. Because of the specially dangerous nature of prohibited weapons, applications are subject to rigorous scrutiny. None will be granted unless (a) the person or company making it is in all respects fit and proper; (b) they will comply with stringent security standards commensurate with the prohibited weapons to be held; and (c) there is demonstrable evidence of a genuine and legitimate business or other need for the prohibited weapons in question.

Barcrest Limited were issued with authority under section 5(1)(b) of the 1968 Act on 22 April 1997 to purchase and possess four electric shock weapons to assist their research into preventing these from being used in attacks on gaming machines. This authority is valid for one year only.

No other company has been granted authority under the Firearms Acts in respect of prohibited electric shock weapons since 1992. I consider that these arrangements are effective in restricting trade in electric shock weapons in this country.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Air Taser Incorporated, Scottsdale, Arizona is or has been licensed under section 5 of the Firearms Act 1982 to handle, distribute, store or manufacture electric shock devices in the UK. [3945]

Mr. Michael: No authority has been given to this company by the Secretary of State under section 5(1)(b) of the Firearms Act 1968 to possess, purchase, acquire, manufacture, sell or transfer such devices.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if (a) Racing Lines of Darwen, Lancashire, and (b) Mark Hilliard of Darwen, Lancashire, are or have been licensed to handle, distribute, store or manufacture electric shock devices in the United Kingdom. [3937]

Mr. Michael: Neither company has been given authority by the Secretary of State under section 5(1)(b) of the Firearms Act 1968 to possess, purchase, acquire, manufacture, sell or transfer such devices.

Prisoners (Illiteracy)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the illiteracy rate among the current prison population. [3790]

Ms Joyce Quin: Prison Service knowledge about literacy rates among prisoners is derived from the results of the basic skills screen test for literacy and numeracy which prisoners may be invited, but are not required, to take. These suggest that, while very few prisoners are actually illiterate, between 40 per cent. and 50 per cent. of those undertaking the test need help to improve their basic literacy and numeracy skills.

Metropolitan Police

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of police officers at each Metropolitan police station who have served with the Metropolitan police force for (a) up to five years, (b) five to 10 years, (c) 10 to 20 years and (d) 20 years and above; and in each case what is the amount spent on their pay. [3971]

The information requested on the amount spent on officers pay is not readily available and could be only obtained at disproportionate costs.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the (a) training and (b) cost implications of retraining officers moved to new posts as a consequence of the tenure policy to be implemented by the Metropolitan police service. [3969]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner informs me that there will be no increase in the Metropolitan Police's training budget as a result of the introduction of the new tenure policy. Any additional demands for training will be met within existing budgets. The majority of officers who transfer under the policy will do so to another police station and carry out the same function in a different environment. Those officers will therefore not require additional training.

Prison Service

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the siting of a new prison is an operational matter for the chief executive of the Prison Service. [3787]

Ms Joyce Quin: Yes. A preliminary decision on where to build a new prison is taken following strategic research to determine the geographic area of greatest need. A decision to proceed with a site identified for prison development is then dependent upon widespread public consultation and appropriate planning approval.

Prisoners (Education)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the Prison Service budget is taken up with educational activities for prisoners; and if he will make a statement. [3789]

Ms Joyce Quin: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Colchester (Mr. Russell) on 19 June, Official Report, column 245.

Young Offenders Institution, Colchester

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the full cost of establishing the young offenders institution at Colchester Military Corrective Training Centre, (b) the maximum number of offenders who can be accommodated at any one time, (c) the number held there each week since it opened, (d) the number of staff employed, how many are Prison Service and how many military, (e) the date when the first offenders were admitted, and (f) the estimated annual running cost; and what are the comparative costs for an offender at Colchester and in a more traditional youth offenders institute. [3918]

Ms Joyce Quin: The cost of establishing Colchester young offender institution was approximately £460,000.

There is accommodation available for up to 38 young offenders, although the planned population is 32.

From 20 February the population was 11. It increased to 21 on 4 April and to 29 on 15 May.

Colchester young offender institution has 23 staff. Of these, 13 were appointed from the Military Corrective Training Centre and the others from the Prison Service.

The first young offenders were admitted to Colchester young offender institution on 20 February.

The current estimated running costs for the financial year 1 April 1997 to 31 March 1998 are £1,006,000. These exclude an estimated charge of £114,292 made by the Ministry of Defence for rental of the accommodation and a contribution in lieu of rates.

Based on the figure for running costs given above and a population of 32, the annual cost per place at Colchester will be about £31,500, compared with about £17,500 in a typical young offender institution.

Ethnic Minority Achievement Programme

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the future of the Ethnic Minority Achievement Programme. [4614]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Payment of grant under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 to Lancashire County Council in respect of its three Ethnic Minority Achievement Projects to support pupils in schools is due to continue until August 1998. We shall announce as soon as possible our general intentions with regard to such funding for the period after that. We shall shortly be in touch with the relevant authorities about the implications of local government reorganisation which takes effect next April.

Handguns (Olympic Games)

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances a United Kingdom competitor will be able to train and take part in an Olympic Games event held in the United Kingdom which involves the use of a .22 weapon. [4869]

Mr. Michael: If the Firearms (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill is passed, then all small-calibre pistols will become prohibited. It would then no longer be possible to use these weapons for target shooting in Great Britain and training here will cease.

Three of the fifteen shooting events in the Olympic Games, if held in this country, would be affected by the prohibition. Competitors from any participating country could be allowed to take part in those three events by means of special authority being granted by the Secretary of State under the terms of section 5 of the Firearms Act 1968. Such authority would however be limited to the duration of the Games themselves. Unless the British competitors trained for these particular events outside Great Britain, they might be unable to qualify. The remaining twelve shooting events would be unaffected by the change and British competitors can continue to train for them in Great Britain.

Visitors' Visas

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to revise the rules and procedures on visitors' visas. [4805]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 19 May, Official Report, column 7.

Custody (Time Limits)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Government will introduce the 110 day rule applicable in Scots law to England, Wales and Northern Ireland. [2928]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 19 June 1997]: The 110 day rule under the Scottish system sets custody time limits for indictable cases. Statutory custody time limits have applied also throughout England and Wales since 1991. For cases to be tried on indictment, they are 70 days from first appearance to committal and 110 days from committal to start of trial, although in many cases these limits are not being met. The Government have made a commitment to reduce delays in the criminal justice system and are currently developing a comprehensive strategy, including bringing down remand time to national targets, to achieve that aim. Time limits in Northern Ireland are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Quota Hopping

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the implications of the OECD Multilateral Agreement on Investment for the Government's policy on quota hopping under the common fisheries policy. [3963]

Mr. Morley: The OECD Multilateral Agreement on Investment, which is currently being negotiated, should not impact upon the Government's policy on quota hopping. We are not intending to limit foreign investment in the UK fishing industry but will be focusing on ensuring that the activities of UK registered fishing vessels contribute substantial economic benefits to those communities in the UK dependent on fishing and related industries.

Beef

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what volume of beef or beef products consumed in the United Kingdom in 1996 was (a) home produced, (b) imported from other European Union countries and (c) imported from non-European Union countries; and if he will list the volumes from each country. [4651]

Mr. Rooker: Figures for the volume of beef and beef products consumed are not available in the form requested. However, the net supply[1] of beef to the UK market in 1996 was 742 thousand tonnes (dressed carcase weight equivalent) of which 15 per cent. was imported from EU countries and 10 per cent. from non-EU countries. Imports of beef and beef products, as recorded in the Overseas Trade Statistics, are shown in the following tables. Some imports may be destined for re-export rather than for consumption.

Beef and beef product imports from EU countries in 1996[2]

	Consignment weight in tonnes
	Beef	Beef products
Austria	0	9
Belgium—Luxembourg	843	292

Italy	179	117
Netherlands	11,007	1,614
Spain	701	179
Sweden	42	0
Total	62,164	24,251

[1] Net supply is UK beef production plus imports less exports of beef and net of stock change of beef. A proportion of this supply will have been processed into beef products, some of which may have been exported rather than consumed in the UK. This supply also excludes the beef component of imported beef products.
[2] All data are provisional and subject to amendment.

A proportion of this supply will have been processed into beef products, some of which may have been exported rather than consumed in the UK. This supply also excludes the beef component of imported beef products.
[2] All data are provisional and subject to amendment.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what controls exist for the import of beef and beef products from non-European Union countries; and if he will make a statement. [4650]

Mr. Rooker: All fresh meat imported into the UK, whether from other Member States or third countries, must have been produced in accordance with harmonised Community rules laid down in Council Directive 64/433/EEC. In the case of meat products the harmonised rules are laid down in Council Directive 77/99 (as amended).

In addition, the Fresh Meat (Beef Controls) (No. 2) Regulations 1996 prohibit the sale for human consumption all bovine meat derived from bovines which, at the time of slaughter, were more than 30 months old. This measure applies to all bovines slaughtered on or after 29 March 1996, whether in the UK or overseas, other than those registered under the Beef Assurance Scheme and those born, reared and slaughtered in those third countries specifically excluded by the Regulations (listed in the Schedule to the Regulations). This list of countries is confined to those where the Government is satisfied that we can import beef without risk.

Farm Waste

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidance he offers to farmers wishing to dispose of (a) farm plastics and (b) silage wrap. [4653]

Mr. Morley: General guidance is provided to farmers on the disposal of plastics in the MAFF/WOAD "Codes of Good Agricultural Practice for the Protection of Air and Soil". More detailed guidance on the disposal of pesticide containers, packaging and other contaminated materials is provided in the MAFF/HSC statutory "Code of Practice for the Safe Use of Pesticides on Farms and Holdings". Copies of these documents have been placed in the Library of the House.

MAFF has recently invited bids for a project to develop and test a manual to help farmers minimise waste, including waste plastics arising on-farm.

Radioactive Contamination (English Channel)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the potential contamination of the English Channel and the fish and mammals therein from the discharge of radioactive material into the sea from the Cap de la Hague nuclear power station. [4643]

Mr. Rooker: The Department carries out regular monitoring and assessment of the radioactive contamination of marine foodstuffs and environmental indicator materials within the English Channel.

The results are published annually in the Department's report "Radioactivity in Food and the Environment". The latest report, for 1995, shows that the contamination attributable to the discharges of radioactivity from the Cap de la Hague reprocessing plant are of negligible radiological significance.

Fallen Stock (Disposal)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what guidance he has issued to farmers faced with costs arising from the disposal of fallen stock; [4655]

(2) what assessment he has made of the level of incentives available to encourage farmers to dispose of fallen stock according to best practice; and if he will make a statement. [4656]

Mr. Rooker: Farmers should dispose of all fallen stock in line with applicable legislation and codes of good practice. It is in their own interests to do so.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is his policy in respect of the disposal of fallen stock by use of ditches and similar locations in the countryside; [4657]

(2) what steps he is taking to discourage the disposal by farmers of fallen stock around the countryside. [4658]

Mr. Rooker: Fallen stock should be disposed of in a way that prevents the spread of disease and does not pollute water. It is an offence under the Animal By-Products Order 1992 (as amended) to leave carcases in ditches or similar locations around the countryside. It is also an offence under the Dogs Act 1906 knowingly to leave carcases unburied at places where dogs can gain access. However, burial is a permitted method of disposal of fallen stock provided that the carcase is buried at sufficient depth to place it beyond the reach of carnivorous animals. Guidance is provided to farmers in the MAFF Code of Good Agricultural Practice for the Protection of Water and burial must be in ground where contamination of water cannot occur.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she plans to lay before the House the annual report for 1996 of the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. [5133]

Marjorie Mowlam: Copies of the Chief Constable's Annual Report 1996 have today been placed in the library. It is a general report on the carrying out by the RUC of their functions during 1996 which is submitted to the Police Authority for Northern Ireland and transmitted to me for laying before Parliament in accordance with Section 15 of the Police Act (Northern Ireland) 1970.

Local Authority Services (Tendering)

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has in relation to compulsory competitive tendering for District Council services in Northern Ireland. [5132]

Marjorie Mowlam: The existing legislation in Northern Ireland provides for the introduction of Compulsory Competitive Tendering (CCT) to certain specified District Council services over a period of time. All but two of these services have already been subjected to CCT; the two remaining services are the Management of Sports and Leisure Facilities and Construction and Maintenance. These were due to be exposed to competition by 1 April 1998. However, in view of the Government's manifesto commitment on CCT, and plans to introduce a "best value" regime, I have decided to extend the existing timetable to 1 November 1998.

This will allow time to take on board any proposals to modify the current CCT regime and to see how the proposals for a best value regime shape up in Great Britain. I am closely monitoring developments in this area in Great Britain with a view to extending the "best value" regime to District Council services in Northern Ireland as soon as practicable.

In the meantime, the existing CCT legislation will continue to govern District Council services. Consequently, in the case of those services which have already been the subject of CCT, Councils will be required to continue to produce annual reports and to meet the financial objectives specified under the legislation and the DOE(NI) will also continue to monitor Councils' performance until the existing contracts end.

Rate Collection Agency

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Rate Collection Agency in 1997–98. [5243]

Marjorie Mowlam: For 1997–98 the following performance targets have been set for RCA:

Collection and recovery of rates

1. To collect 97 per cent. of the gross domestic collectable rate, (excluding late assessments) by 31 March 1998.

2. To collect 98.55 per cent. of the gross non-domestic collectable rate (excluding late assessments) by 31 March 1998.

3. To achieve a reduction of 5 per cent. in the real value of the unit costs of collecting rates per hereditament over the two year period to 31 March 1998.

4. To generate refunds to 97 per cent. of ratepayers so entitled within 14 days of credits being identified.

Housing benefit administration

5. To process by 31 March 1998, 95 per cent. of applications for the incoming year received from housing benefit recipients before 15 March 1998.

6. To achieve a reduction of 5 per cent. in real value of unit costs of processing housing benefit cases over the two year period to 31 March 1998.

7. To assess 97 per cent. of housing benefit claims free of error.

Prison Service

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to change the manner of response to parliamentary questions concerning the Northern Ireland Prison Service. [5244]

Marjorie Mowlam: In view of the special sensitivity of prisons matters, I have decided that all questions about the Northern Ireland Prison Service will be answered by a Northern Ireland Minister and not by the Chief Executive of the Service. This is no reflection on the Chief Executive nor does it have any implication for the Northern Ireland Prison Service as an agency. However, it recognises particular concerns that Ministers should answer personally on matters relating to imprisonment.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Project Work

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will announce the commencement date for Project Work work placement providers. [4803]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I am today refocusing Project Work to include proper training and effective subsidies to employers to take on the long-term unemployed. This will enable Project Work providers to agree the detail of their contracts, including start dates, with the Employment Service.

All Project Work pilots will in future include, as a standard feature, intensive help with basic skills for those who need it. I am also pleased to announce an increase in the amount of Workstart subsidy available in the Project Work pilot areas. This means that employers in these areas who take on someone out of work for over two years may receive £60 for a recruit aged 18 to 24 and £75 if aged between 25 and 50.

Enhancing the help given by Project Work pilots is an integral part of the Government's drive to tackle long term unemployment. It extends a helping hand to the jobless by introducing intensive literacy and numeracy support within Project Work to those who need it. The strengthened basic skills element will help equip long term unemployed people more effectively for jobs.

Project Work as inherited from the previous Government is far from perfect and is scheduled to last until the end of the financial year. We want to move to the New Deal as soon as possible, with the most effective package to help the young and long term unemployed off welfare and into work or training. The refocusing of Project Work with skills enhancement offers the long term unemployed support in getting a job, while the New Deal is still in the design and planning stages.

We cannot allow the talents and energy of our citizens to go to waste, untapped and untrained in unemployment. It makes both moral and economic sense to offer a chance of a future to those who have almost given up hope.

HEALTH

Royal Bolton Hospital

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients resident at Royal Bolton hospital on 1 June had been forced to remain in hospital for longer than their treatment required because suitable residential or day care support was not available; how many such patients had been resident at the hospital for (a) up to one week, (b) up to two weeks, (c) up to one month, (d) up to two months and (e) three months or more; and what estimate he has made of the additional financial costs to the NHS of these extended periods of care. [4252]

Mr. Boateng: Effective communication between health and social services staff is crucial for people who need continuing care after a spell in hospital. Wigan and Bolton Health Authority and Bolton Social Services department work closely together to ensure that no patient is subject to unnecessary delay.

Bolton Hospitals NHS Trust do not have an information system which collects data on blocked beds, but a periodic census is completed manually, covering patients aged over 75 years. We understand from the trust that an additional census of these patients was undertaken on 17 June 1997 and the following position was recorded:

Reason	Number of patients
Awaiting completion of assessment	9
Awaiting nursing/residential home package	7
Awaiting domiciliary care package	1
Decision on continuing care under review	2
Other reason	1
Total	20

Time delayed	Number of patients
Less than one week	13
One–Two weeks	6
Two–Three weeks	1
Total	20

A further six patients aged under 75 years were awaiting a community care package.

The average cost per day for an elderly medical patient in the Bolton Hospitals NHS Trust is £120.

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for the most recent date for which figures are available the number of people in the Bolton Hospitals NHS Trust area awaiting non-emergency treatment (a) up to 12 months, (b) up to 18 months, (c) up to 24 months and (d) over 24 months. [4246]

Mr. Milburn: The latest available information gives the position on 31 March 1997. On that date 5,938 patients were waiting for admission to Bolton Hospitals NHS Trust, on either an inpatient or day case basis, of whom 5,918 had been waiting less than 12 months and all of whom had been waiting less than 18 months.

Portsmouth and South-East Hampshire Health Authority

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the £40,000 given in grants to the Portsmouth and South-East Hampshire health authority has been allocated; and to what extent this funding has satisfied the criteria set out in the bid. [4374]

Mr. Milburn: Portsmouth and South East Hampshire Health Authority was awarded £40,000 as extra funding under the NHS dentistry access fund 1996–97. The bid from that health authority met the criteria which were set out in the directions sent to all health authorities.

Dental Services

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the cost of the dental service in England and Wales is borne by the users. [4380]

Mr. Milburn: The proportion of gross expenditure on general dental services recovered through charges in England and Wales was 29 per cent. in 1996–97.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sum has been made available from the Department's Access Fund for NHS dentistry services in Cornwall; how this has been allocated; and which of his Department's criteria were met in the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority bid. [4615]

Mr. Milburn: Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority was awarded £40,000 as extra funding under the NHS Dentistry Access Fund 1996–97. The bid from that health authority met the criteria which were set out in the directions sent to all health authorities.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Compensation Recovery Unit

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was recovered by the Compensation Recovery Unit from personal injury damages in each year since 1989; and how much he estimates will be recovered in the current year. [2557]

Mr. Bradley: Reform of the Compensation Recovery scheme will take place in October 1997. It will make the compensator liable for the repayment of benefits paid as a consequence of accident, injury or disease. Reform will also mean that compensation for pain and suffering will be paid to the victim in full. The administration of the Compensation Recovery Unit is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Andrew Dismore, dated 19 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how much was recovered by the Compensation Recovery Unit from personal injury damages in each year since 1989 and how much is estimated to be recovered this financial year.

As the Compensation Recovery scheme applies to compensation payments made on or after 3 September 1990, there were no monies recovered during the 1989–90 financial year. Details of the amounts recovered in each financial year since 1990 are given in the table below:

Financial year	Amount recovered £ million
1991–92	25.3
1992–93	51.3
1993–94	81.9
1994–95	110.1
1995–96	135.1
1996–97	145.5

Figures are provisional and subject to change. It is estimated that £179.9 million will be recovered during the current financial year.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Archival Files (Release)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of and how many archival files which were handed to the Public Record Office in 1965 were released (a) in whole and (b) in part before 30 years elapsed. [4659]

Mr. Hoon: The Question concerns a specific operational matter on which the Chief Executive of the Public Record Office is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the Chief Executive to reply direct.

Letter from Sarah Tyacke to Mr. Norman Baker, dated 19 June 1997:

I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about the above.

To produce actual or percentage figures for items from the 47,865 units transferred to the Public Record Office 1965, which were subsequently released in whole or in part before they were 30 years old, could only be done by checking against each individual item its expected and actual release date, and to do so would incur disproportionate cost.

I would be very pleased to invite you to the Public Record Office to see how the system works and to discuss this matter further, if you wished.

CABINET OFFICE

Engagements

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will list his official engagements for the month of July. [4641]

Mr. Mandelson: I expect to have a number of meetings with ministerial colleagues and others.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio (1) if he will list the meetings he has had with persons and organisations external to the Government since taking office; [4660]

(2) if he will list the official engagements he has undertaken on behalf of the Government since taking office. [4642]

Mr. Mandelson: Since taking office I have had a number of meetings with ministerial colleagues and others.

Ministerial Activities

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what responsibilities he has in respect of monitoring and approving the activities of other Government Ministers. [4749]

Mr. Mandelson: My role is to assist my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and ministerial colleagues in implementing Government policy and presenting it effectively.

Press Releases

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will list the press releases he has issued since taking office. [4640]

Mr. Mandelson: On 9 June, I released the text of my speech to the Media Trust. On 18 June, I issued a press notice, announcing the appointment of my Parliamentary Private Secretary.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Social Chapter

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many directives are currently under discussion for implementation under the social chapter; and for how many of these the United Kingdom would hold the right of veto. [4465]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Council of Ministers is currently considering one draft directive under the Agreement on Social Policy (the proposed Burden of Proof Directive). The voting procedure is qualified majority.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Sport (Tobacco Sponsorship)

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has received from (a) sports organisations, (b) non-sports organisations and (c) individuals relating to his proposal to ban tobacco company sponsorship of sport. [4183]

Mr. Banks: To date I have received 17 representations on the proposed ban on advertising by tobacco companies from organisations and individuals, including from the hon. Member himself; some in favour others against. I am giving them careful consideration.

Chess

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what criteria determine which sports are recognized by the Sports Council; and for what reasons chess is not an approved sport. [4236]

Mr. Banks: The United Kingdom and the Home Country Sports Councils have adopted a system of formal "recognition" of activities, primarily to identify those with which the Councils should be associated for the purposes of providing grant aid and services. The identification of these activities is based on a number of criteria, broadly based on the following principles:

- physical skills;
- physical effort;
- accessibility;
- rules and organisation;
- strategy and tactics;
- essential purpose;
- physical challenge;
- risk;
- "uniqueness";
- level of participation; and
- other issues (eg. political, moral, ethical etc.).

Chess is not a recognised activity because, in the opinion of the United Kingdom and the Home Country Sports Councils, it does not meet a sufficient number of the criteria outlined above, in particular those in respect of physical skills, effort and challenge. These criteria are, however, kept under review and revised from time to time and I am currently studying them very carefully.

Heritage Fund and Millennium Commission Awards

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will publish the total awards made to date by (a) the Heritage Fund and (b) the Millennium Commission, by administrative counties in England. [4272]

Mr. Tony Banks [holding answer 19 June 1997]: The following table shows the number and value of awards made by the Heritage Lottery Fund and the Millennium Commission as at 17 June.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Road Traffic Reduction

Ms Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on how the Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997 is to be implemented by local authorities, with particular reference to its financial implications. [4237]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government is considering at present the arrangements for implementing the Road Traffic Reduction Act. The Act provides for Ministers to issue guidance to local authorities on meeting its provisions. We envisage that this guidance will be issued in draft later this year to allow relevant bodies to comment. Amongst other issues, it is likely to address the financial implications for local authorities.

Trains (Slam Doors)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list by train operating company the number of rolling stock units with slam doors in operation and the target dates for their replacement. [4446]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Slam-door trains in use at present, and current plans for their removal by 2000, are as follows:

Operator	Number in service now	Number expected to be in service in 2000
North London Railways	26	0
Regional Railways North East	63	0
North West Trains	110	0
South Wales and West	8	0
South West Trains	476	340
Connex South Eastern	720	400
Connex South Central	600	600
Total	2,203	1,340

It is likely that all such units will be phased out by about 2007 at the latest.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Computer System

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he is taking to ensure that the computer system operating the Driver and Vehicle Licensing System will not be affected by the millennium problem. [4449]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency has reviewed all its computer systems. Those which would have been affected by the millennium problem are being upgraded or replaced. The programme of work is expected to be completed by the end of 1998.

Air Services

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the average length of time taken from push back to becoming airborne at Gatwick and Heathrow airports in 1986 and 1996. [4469]

Ms Glenda Jackson: National Air Traffic Services report that, based on 214,309 departures during 1996, the average length of time taken at Heathrow from push back to becoming airborne was 16.9 minutes. At Gatwick, based on a sample of 3,717 departures between April and September 1996, the average length of time taken was 15.0 minutes. The information requested in respect of 1986 is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact on airlines of congestion at Heathrow and Gatwick airports. [4468]

Ms Jackson: I have made no assessment. However, the impact of congestion on airlines operating at Heathrow and Gatwick is limited, as the total number of slots allocated is tightly controlled by National Air Traffic Services through the capacity determination process. The airlines are consulted on the necessary trade-off between any change in the total number of slots to be allocated and the consequences for the average delay the airlines can expect to experience.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many applications for slots at Gatwick and Heathrow airports could not be accommodated in 1996. [4472]

Ms Jackson: Airport Co-ordination Limited is responsible for the allocation of slots at UK airports co-ordinated under EC Regulation 95/93. ACL inform me that at the two allocation rounds during 1996, covering the Winter 1996–97 and Summer 1997 seasons, the total of slot requests which could not be accommodated was 73,805 at Heathrow, and 46,547 at Gatwick.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the average length of airborne holding prior to touch down was at Heathrow and Gatwick airports in 1986 and 1996. [4470]

Ms Jackson: In 1996 the average airborne holding times for Heathrow and Gatwick airports were 3 minutes 9 seconds and 55 seconds respectively. Data for 1986 can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the average number of passengers per air transport movement at Heathrow and Gatwick in (a) 1986, (b) 1991 and (c) 1996; and what projections he has made for (i) 2001 and (ii) 2006. [4398]

Ms Jackson: The information for past years is as follows:

Average number of passengers per air transport movement, 1986, 1991 and 1996

	1986	1991	1996
Heathrow	107	111	130
Gatwick	103	115	114

My Department does not produce forecasts of average passenger numbers per aircraft for future years.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the average number of passengers per air transport movement at (a) Stansted, (b) Aberdeen, (c) Edinburgh, (d) Glasgow and (e) Southampton in (i) 1986, (ii) 1991 and (iii) 1996; and what projections he has made for (i) 2001 and (ii) 2006. [4399]

Ms Jackson: The information for past years is as follows:

Average number of passengers per air transport movement, 1986, 1991 and 1996

	1986	1991	1996
Stansted	33	47	67
Aberdeen	22	23	29
Edinburgh	45	47	55
Glasgow	55	58	72
Southampton	21	22	23

My Department does not produce forecasts of average passenger numbers per aircraft.

Rail Safety

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list by train operating company the number of accidents occurring on rolling stock operated by that company since privatisation. [4447]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This information is not available in the form requested. Accidents may be reported to the Health and Safety Executive either by the train operating company or by Railtrack Plc (in which case it is not always possible to identify on whose rolling stock the accidents have occurred). In addition, separate statistics showing accidents happening after the operative date for each franchise are not readily available.

Rail Services

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list by train operating company the number of occasions and the details of warnings issued by (a) OPRAF and (b) the Rail Regulator for not operating services to the levels specified in the passenger service requirement. [4445]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Franchising Director has proposed one draft enforcement order against a train operating company for a breach of the cancellation levels in the franchise agreement. The draft order published on 14 March against South West Trains, for poor performance in February and March, was withdrawn on 8 May following significant improvements in performance.

The Franchising Director issued a notice on 18 June about a breach by Island Line of its cancellation levels in March 1997. There will be no further action as the company is taking all necessary steps to secure future compliance.

The Rail Regulator is not responsible for enforcing compliance with passenger service requirements.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list by regional rail users committee the number of passenger complaints received for the last 12 months; [4510]

(2) if he will list by regional rail users committee the number of complaints relating to (i) punctuality, (ii) ticketing and (iii) other issues received over the last 12 months. [4511]

Ms Jackson: The most recent 12-month period for which details are available is the financial year 1996–97. The figures are as follows:

Public complaints received by the rail users' consultative committees and by the london regional passengers' committee

1 April 1996 auntil 31 march 1997

Committee	Punctuality	Fares and tickets[1]	Other complaints	Annual total
LRPC	288	208	1,881	2,377
RUCC for southern England	99	29	896	1,024
RUCC for western England	321	80	1,011	1,412
RUCC for Wales	194	39	829	1,062
RUCC for the Midlands	155	18	314	487
RUCC for eastern England	77	54	538	669
RUCC for north eastern England	105	33	659	797
RUCC for north western England	272	86	1,116	1,474
RUCC for Scotland	42	24	385	451
National total	1,553	571	7,629	9,753

[1]Fares and tickets category includes ticket pricing levels and structure; Railcards, Railrover tickets and promotional offers; permited routes; acceptance of through tickets; and predatory fares/exclusionary behaviour.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list by the train operating company the number of occasions recorded by OPRAF of that company operating trains with fewer carriages than specified in the passenger service requirement. [4444]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This information is not available in the form requested. A train is "short formed" if it operates with fewer seats than planned, whether or not the number of seats is specified in the passenger service requirement. Under their franchise agreements, operators face a penalty payment for every train short formed. Furthermore, a high level of short formations is liable to result in breach of the franchise agreement and enforcement action by the Franchising Director. There have been no material breaches of franchise agreements as a result of short formations; the performance payments of each operator will be published in the Franchising Director's annual report in the next few weeks.

Vehicle Safety

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he is taking to encourage vehicle manufacturers to improve the design of their vehicles following the publication of the EURONCAP crash test results. [4450]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Manufacturers are involved in the EURONCAP testing and evaluation programme and I am keen that they use the results in developing future models. I also hope that the publication of the results of the second series of tests on 13 family-sized saloons on 1 July 1997 will create consumer pressure for improved designs; that has been the experience in the United States and Australia, where similar programmes have been operating for some years.

Mixed Oxide Nuclear Fuels

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Rotherham (Mr. MacShane) of 10 June, Official Report, column 409, if he will set out the basis for the statement that in the event of an aircraft accident mixed oxide nuclear fuel poses no significant risk to public health. [4375]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My statement was based upon the conclusions of the Advisory Committee on the Transport of Radioactive Materials (ACTRAM) an independent body charged with advising the Secretary of State for Transport and the Chairman of the Health and Safety Commission on major issues related to the transport of radioactive material and on the robustness of the containers used.

In its report, The Transport of Civil Plutonium by Air, published in 1988, ACTRAM concluded: (14.2)

"The health risk to people from the current transport of civil plutonium by air to and from the UK is [also] extremely remote and acceptable."

Bearing in mind that the major hazard of plutonium is one of inhalation, its comments specifically on Mox fuel are particularly relevant: (14.3)

"Plutonium dioxide mixed with Uranium dioxide in the form of ceramic pellets constitutes no significant inhalation hazard."

A copy of ACTRAM's report is available in the Library.

Trees

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of trees planted by the Highways Agency (a) are red-leaved and (b) have leaves which turn red in the Autumn; and what plans he has to increase that percentage. [4313]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highway Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mrs. Theresa May, dated 20 June 1997:

The Deputy Prime Minister has asked me to reply to your recent question asking what percentage of trees planted by the Highways Agency are red-leaved or have leaves which turn red in the Autumn; and what plans he has to increase that percentage.

Unfortunately it is not possible to quantify this information. Most trees planted by the Highways Agency are native deciduous and although there are no red-leaved native trees, those such as the Wayfaring Tree can give a dense red colour in the Autumn. In general Autumn colour varies with species, soil and weather, and adds interest to tree planting's important role of helping to fit roads into their surroundings. There are no plans to change the current practice.

Seatbelts

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to extend the MOT test to include checks on the operation of seatbelts. [4451]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Mandatory seatbelts are already checked in MOT tests to ensure that they latch and unlatch correctly. The condition of the webbing, anchorage and retractor mechanism is also checked for deterioration. However, there is no check on the restraining operation of seat belts. It would be very difficult to devise a meaningful and reproducible test which could be carried out in 18,000 MOT testing stations across the country and we are aware of no evidence that seat belts fail to operate properly in practice.

Out-of-town Developments

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to change the guidance to planning inspectors on granting permission to out-of-town or edge-of-town shopping centres. [3824]

Mr. Raynsford: Guidance is contained in PPG6: Town Centres and Retail Developments. It clarifies that the key tests that should be applied to assessing proposals for new retail development are the application of the sequential approach to site selection, the impact on the development plan strategy, the vitality and viability of existing centres, accessibility by a choice of means of transport particularly public transport, impact on overall travel and car use and other environmental impacts. We have no current plans to change it.

Sefton Metropolitan Borough Council

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what date the review of Sefton Metropolitan Borough Council will be published by the Local Government Commission for England. [4046]

Mr. Raynsford: The Commission have been directed to prepare the Final Report by 25 November 1997. A report containing their draft recommendations is to be published on 1 July 1997.

Dog Fouling Fines

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will assess the advantage of allowing local authorities to use for enforcement purposes the revenue from fines levied under dog fouling legislation. [4027]

Angela Eagle: We believe that local authorities prosecuting criminal cases should have no pecuniary interest in them. A local authority does not receive the fine imposed by a Court on an offender in cases under dog fouling byelaws or the Dogs (Fouling of Land) Act 1996. It follows that the local authority should not keep the income from any fixed penalty notices which it issues for offences under the 1996 Act.

Pedestrianisation (London)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what studies his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the pedestrianisation of sections of London; and if he will make a statement. [3665]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 18 June 1997]: My Department has not traditionally commissioned studies into pedestrianisation schemes. In London this has been a matter for Boroughs to take forward as the local transport authority. However, the Traffic Director for London may, where appropriate, liaise with Boroughs in assessing the impact on traffic of specific schemes. We will shortly be consulting on our plans for a new strategic authority for London which would have transport responsibilities.

My Department, in association with the Department of National Heritage, English Heritage and London Transport, has contributed to the "World Squares for All" study led by Westminster City Council, tasked with developing a masterplan for the Whitehall Conservation Area. This may include elements of pedestrianisation. Proposals will be published for public consultation in September.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to invite further bids under the single regeneration budget; and what funds will be available in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–00 and (c) 2000–01. [4804]

Angela Eagle: My hon. Friend the Minister for the Regions, Regeneration and Planning announced on 22 May, Official Report, columns 152–53, that the Government would continue with Round 4 of the Single Regeneration Budget Challenge Fund, altered to take account of our policy priorities. Bids have been invited by 26 September 1997. On current expenditure plans, total provision nationally for the SRB Challenge Fund of £568 million in 1998–99 and £625 million in 1999–00 includes £12.5 million in 1998–99 and £75 million in 1999–00 for new schemes approved under the current bidding round. The level of resources available for new schemes in each Government Office region will depend on the levels of commitments in each region from the three previous Challenge Fund rounds. Expenditure plans have not yet been set for the year 2000–01. No decisions have yet been taken on whether to have further bidding rounds after Round 4.

Driving Bans

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list the five most common primary reasons for driving bans for a period of (a) one year or under, (b) one to two years, (c) two to three years, (d) over three years and (e) life; and if he will make a statement; [3663]

(2) how many and what percentage of drivers are currently banned from driving for a period of (a) one year or under, (b) one to two years, (c) two to three years, (d) over three years and (e) life; and if he will make a statement. [3662]

Mr. Michael [holding answers 18 June 1997]: I have been asked to reply.

Figures on the number of drivers currently disqualified from driving could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

The number of disqualifications imposed by the courts by period of disqualification and by offence group is published annually in "Offences relating to motor vehicles England and Wales, Supplementary tables" (tables 13 and 14).

Copies of these publications are in the Library.

SCOTLAND

HIV-AIDS

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to match for Scotland the increase in funding for HIV-AIDS treatment in 1997–98 made by the Department of Health in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [4213]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 19 June 1997]: Health Boards were advised in March this year of the funds earmarked for the treatment and care of HIV-AIDS patients in their areas in 1997–98. It is open to individual boards to augment these resources from their general allocations in the light of local circumstances. I am currently assessing whether further action is appropriate.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the number of HIV-AIDS sufferers receiving treatment (i) by health board area and (ii) in Scotland as a whole; what was the spending per head on treatment and care of HIV-AIDS sufferers (i) by health board area and (ii) in Scotland as a whole, in the most recent year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [4215]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 14 June 1997]: Around 1,000 people in Scotland are estimated to be receiving treatment for HIV infection or AIDS. Of this total, some 870 are being treated within the Lothian, Greater Glasgow, Tayside and Grampian Health Board areas. In the current financial year, £9.6 million has been allocated by way of funds earmarked for HIV-AIDS treatment and care. On that basis, expenditure per patient would amount to around £9,600. But that figure does not take into account any additional resources which individual boards may commit from their general allocations.

Home Energy Efficiency Grants

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total value of and how many home energy efficiency grants were paid to residents in (a) the Highlands and Islands and (b) Scotland as a whole, in 1996–97. [3798]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is as follows:

	Number of grants	Total value £
Scotland	38,135	5,754,000
Highlands and Islands	3,085	512,000

Because of the way scheme data are collected, the Highlands and Islands information does not include figures for the Argyll and Bute area, which incorporates Inverclyde, Dumbarton, Renfrew and parts of west Glasgow. 3,774 grants were paid in this area, with a total value of £531,570.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Environmental Taxes

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on use of environmental taxes to encourage industry to be more competitive. [3022]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

It would not be appropriate to comment in the run-up to the Budget.

TREASURY

Bank of England

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to bring forward the proposed Bill to give the Bank of England operational responsibility for setting interest rates. [2088]

Mrs. Liddell: The Bank of England Bill will be introduced after the summer Recess.

Ways and Means Advance

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the prohibition of overdraft facilities with the Bank of England in article 104 in the Maastricht treaty will come into effect. [1447]

Mrs. Liddell: In accordance with Article 109e(3), Article 104 took effect at the start of the second stage of Economic and Monetary Union on 1 January 1994.

However, paragraph 11 of Protocol 11 to the EC Treaty states that "the United Kingdom may maintain its 'ways and means' facility with the Bank of England if and so long as the United Kingdom does not move to the third stage [of Economic and Monetary Union]".

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the outstanding ways and means advance from the Issue Department at the Bank of England to the National Loans Fund at the end of the current financial year. [3561]

Mrs. Liddell: Outstanding ways and means advances from Issue Department at the Bank of England to the National Loans Fund at the end of 1996–97 were £14,322 million. Whilst current Government policy is to keep the stock of short-term financing (both the ways and means advance and Treasury bills) roughly constant from year-to-year, its composition depends on fluctuations in the month-to-month pattern of factors affecting the liquidity position of the banking system, including the note issue and net government receipts or payments. As these can be large and unpredictable, it is difficult to give a meaningful forecast of the ways and means advance for the end of this financial year.

Special Advisers

Mr. Maples: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what capacity his special advisers are employed in his private office. [3243]

Mrs. Liddell: Four paid Special Advisers have been appointed in the following capacities:

Ed Balls: Economic Adviser to the Chancellor

Charlie Whelan: Press Adviser to the Chancellor

Edward Miliband: Special Adviser to the Chief Secretary

Andrew Maugham: Special Adviser to the Chief Secretary

Corporation Tax

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his assessment of the effects on business investment decisions of (a) a classical system and (b) an imputations system of corporation tax. [3368]

Dawn Primarolo: Any assessment of the effects on business investment decisions of a classical or an imputation system of corporation tax is dependent on the specific features of that system and the tax rates adopted.

Departmental Appointment

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the nature of the appointment of Ms Sue Nye to the Treasury. [3360]

Mrs. Liddell: Ms Sue Nye has been appointed personally by the Chancellor as his Political Secretary. She is not an employee of the Treasury and receives no remuneration or reimbursement of expenses from public funds.

VAT

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of VAT was paid by businesses and is recoverable as a business cost in each of the last three years. [3446]

Dawn Primarolo: The approximate proportion of total VAT paid which was paid by businesses and recoverable as a business cost in each of the last three years was as follows:

1994–95: 78 per cent.

1995–96: 79 per cent.

1996–97: 78 per cent.

VAT is paid and recovered at each stage in the process of production and distribution of goods and services by taxable persons.

Oil Tax

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was in each of the last five financial years the amount of tax revenue received per barrel of oil produced. [3378]

Dawn Primarolo: North Sea oil tax revenues received per barrel of oil produced in the same financial year, including revenues from gas production converted into equivalent amounts of oil, are in the table below.

	Tax[1] revenue per barrel £
1992–93	1.20
1993–94	1.00
1994–95	1.20
1995–96	1.70
1996–97[2]	2.30

[1] Petroleum revenue tax, corporation tax, and royalty.
[2] Provisional.

Taxpayers

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his current estimate of the outstanding amount of money owed by the Inland Revenue to taxpayers which has not been claimed by them. [3533]

Dawn Primarolo: No estimate has been made. There are many circumstances in which taxpayers and others may be able to claim money from the Inland Revenue, and tax offices will often be aware of a particular case only when a claim is received.

Internet

Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has for taxing usage of the Internet. [3325]

Dawn Primarolo: Access to the Internet has always been subject to value added tax. Following a derogation from the Sixth VAT Directive to all member states agreed by the Council of Ministers on 17 March, legislation will be introduced in the UK with effect from 1 July 1997. The legislation, which covers a range of telecommunication services including Internet access, changes the rules governing where, for VAT purposes, the supply takes place. This will ensure fairer taxation where these services are supplied from one country to another. Further information on these changes is available in an Information Sheet issued by Customs and Excise titled VAT Information Sheet 2/97.

Income Tax

Mr. Prior: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the top rate of income tax on earned income in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany, (c) France, (d) the USA and (e) Japan; and at which income level it applies. [3527]

Dawn Primarolo: The information for tax regimes in force at the beginning of 1997 is given in the table. The income figures relate to earned income of single taxpayers and have been converted to pounds sterling using 1996 OECD purchasing power parities.

	Top rate of central government income tax Per cent	Taxable income level above which top rate applies £
United Kingdom	40	29,265
Germany[1]	53	39,350
France[2]	54	29,330
USA[3]	39.6	182,150
Japan[4]	50	117,200

[1] Excluding solidarity surcharge (7.5 per cent. of tax) and church tax (9 per cent. tax). At incomes below the level shown rates rise gradually according to a complex formula.
[2] There are also 48 per cent. and 43 per cent. tax bands which start at £23,790 and £14,620 respectively.
[3] States and local governments also impose income tax. OECD use a typical level of 7.25 per cent. Federal income tax at 36 per cent. starts at £83,760 and 31 per cent. tax at £40,150.
[4] Local inhabitant taxes are also charged, at 15 per cent. on incomes over £26,650. Central government tax at 40 per cent. starts at £70,330 and 30 per cent. rates begins at £35,160.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how he intends to monitor the implementation of self-assessment of individuals' liability for income tax; and if he will make a statement. [3547]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has in place a number of management information systems to monitor the implementation of self assessment. As the Minister responsible for Self Assessment I also receive a monthly progress report.

Tax System

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Treasury has to reform the schedular arrangements of the United Kingdom tax system. [3521]

Dawn Primarolo: The way in which different types of income are classified for tax purposes will be considered as part of the Inland Revenue project to rewrite direct tax law so that it is clearer and easier to use.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the first draft of re-written and simplified tax legislation will be published. [3619]

Dawn Primarolo: On present plans, we hope to publish the first draft re-written legislation for consultation next month.

Pensions (Tax Relief)

Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to reduce tax relief on pension contributions; and if he will make a statement. [3331]

Dawn Primarolo: It would not be appropriate to comment on any possible tax changes during the run-up to the Budget.

Bank of England Monetary Policy Committee

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if non-voting members of the Bank of England's monetary policy committee are entitled to take part in the deliberations of the committee; and if their comments will be minuted; [4576]

(2) how many non-voting members are permitted to attend the Bank of England's monetary policy committee; and what criteria are used in selecting those non-voting members. [4580]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury representative is the only non-voting member of the monetary policy committee. The Treasury representative can take part in the discussion, but not in the decision, on interest rates. As is the case with other members, comments made by the Treasury representative will be reflected but not attributed in the minutes.

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what priority the Bank of England's monetary policy committee is expected to give to imbalances between the demand and output of (a) different industries, (b) different sectors and (c) different regions of the economy in making its decisions on interest rates. [4637]

Mrs. Liddell: The Chancellor has made it clear that the monetary policy committee will be responsible for taking full account of regional and sectoral information in its monetary policy decisions. The Bank's Court will have particular regard to whether the Bank is collecting such information, and the Court will itself be reformed so that it is representative of the whole of the United Kingdom.

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. Norman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his Department's estimates of the income distribution of taxpayers benefiting from mortgage interest relief. [3708]

Dawn Primarolo: Information for 1997–98 is given in the table. The estimates are based on information projected from the 1994–95 Family Expenditure Survey and are therefore provisional.

Number of beneficiaries of mortgage interest relief by range of total income

Range of total income (lower limit)[1] £	Number of single people or married couples benefiting from mortgage interest relief thousands

Low Pay

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people in the constituency of Bolton, West who currently earn less than (a) £2.50, (b) £3, (c) £3.50 and (d) £4 per hour. [4247]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Ruth Kelly, dated 20 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on earnings in the Bolton West parliamentary constituency.

The latest available information, from the New Earnings Survey (NES) April 1996, is given in the table below.

Unemployment

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many persons aged 18 to 24 years in Bolton, West are currently registered unemployed; [4250]

(2) how many persons in Bolton, West aged 18 to 24 years are currently seeking and available for work; [4248]

(3) how many persons aged 18 to 24 years in Bolton, West who are currently registered unemployed have never been employed. [4249]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Ruth Kelly, dated 20 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent questions (4250,4248 and 4249) on unemployment of 18 to 24 year olds in Bolton West.

The measure of unemployment, derived from the quarterly Labour Force Survey (LFS), is defined on a consistent and internationally recognised basis set out by the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and counts as unemployed people who are: a) without a paid job; b) available to start work within the next two weeks and c) have either looked for work in the last four weeks or are waiting to start a job already obtained. However, largely because it is a sample survey, information is not available from the LFS in as much geographical detail as from the claimant count measure described below.

ONS also publishes the monthly claimant count, which is based on the administrative system and includes all people claiming unemployment-related benefits (i.e. Jobseekers Allowance, Income Support or National Insurance credits) at Employment Service offices on the day of the monthly count, who on that day had signed on as unemployed and available to do any suitable work. Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign are counted, irrespective of whether they are actually receiving benefit.

Both measures are described and compared in the ONS booklet How Exactly is Unemployment Measured?, a copy of which is enclosed.

In April 1997, on the unadjusted basis there were 329 18 to 24 years olds unemployed claimants in the Bolton West parliamentary constituency. The group you refer to in your second question "currently seeking and available for work" is broadly the same as the ILO definition of unemployment except that this also includes those who are waiting to start a job they have already obtained.

However this information is not available at Parliamentary Constituency level. The lowest level at which any LFS data is available is Local Authority District.

No information is available from the claimant count about those who are currently seeking and available for work or those registered unemployed who have never been employed. Information about those ILO unemployed who have never been employed is available from the LFS, but not below county level.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) males and (b) females have been unemployed in Southport for more than (i) six months, (ii) 12 months and (iii) 24 months. [4019]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Ronnie Fearn, dated 20 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on unemployment in Southport by duration.

The measure of unemployment, derived from the quarterly Labour Force Survey, is defined on a consistent and internationally recognised basis set out by the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and counts as unemployed people who are: a) without a paid job; b) available to start work within the next two weeks and c) have either looked for work in the last four weeks or are waiting to start a job already obtained. Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign are counted, irrespective of whether they are actually receiving benefit.

The information you have requested is only available for claimant unemployment and is given in the attached table.

Unadjusted claimant unemployment by duration in the Southport parliamentary constituency , April 1997[1]

	Males	Females
Duration
Over 6 months	1,019	307
Over 12 months	676	186
Over 24 months	364	90

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) male and (b) female 18 to 25-year-olds are currently unemployed in Southport. [4020]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Ronnie Fearn, dated 20 June 1997:

Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign are counted, irrespective of whether they are actually receiving benefit.

The information requested can only be derived from the claimant count. In April 1997, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 417 males and 148 females aged 18 to 24 years who were claimant unemployed in Southport.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the levels and rates of unemployment were in each constituency in (a) April and (b) May. [4144]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 17 June 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Claimant unemployment rates are not available for parliamentary constituencies. The only information for parliamentary constituencies is the unadjusted level of claimant unemployment, which is accessible from the Nomis database in the House of Commons Library.

TREASURY

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the Government's long-term targets for the percentage of Gross Domestic Product which public expenditure constitutes. [3355]

Mr. Darling: The Government is currently undertaking a comprehensive review of public expenditure and will determine its plans in the light of the findings and the prospects for the economy generally.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Maples: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to change the convention which governs what capital spending by local authorities is included in the public spending total. [3251]

Mr. Darling: I have no plans to change the definition of local authority capital spending in General Government Expenditure. The definition is consistent with international statistical conventions as laid down in the European System of accounts (ESA).

Tax Bands

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current starting rate of income tax and the width of the lowest tax band in each member state of the European Union. [3452]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is given in the table. It is based on OECD information for 1995 or 1995–96 tax years, the latest for which comprehensive information is available. The income figures relate to earned income of single taxpayers and have been converted to £ sterling using 1995 OECD purchasing power parity figures.

	Starting rate of central government income tax %	Income band for starting rate £	Tax threshold for single person £
Austria	10	0–2,380	6,980
Belgium[1]	25	0–4,500	4,830
Denmark[2]	13	2,300–10,160	2,780
Finland[3]	7	4,680–6,470	5,140
France	12	2,290–5,000	3,910
Germany[4]	19	1,820–2,640	3,800
Greece	5	3,220–8,050	3,830
Ireland	27	2,580–9,170	3,810
Italy	10	0–2,860	3,460
Luxembourg	10	4,100–5,890	6,010
Netherlands	6.15	1,960–14,290	1,980
Portugal	15	0–5,330	3,340
Spain	20	2,220–3,320	4,630
Sweden[5]	see note	0–13,700	0
United Kingdom	20	3,525–6,725	3,525

Notes:

[1] Central income tax subject to surcharge of 3 per cent. in 1995. Local income taxes, averaging 7 per cent. of central tax (before surcharge) are also charged.

[2] Local income tax at average rate of 30.6 per cent. is charged in addition to 13 per cent. central rate.

[3] Local and church taxes at average rate of 18.8 per cent. are also charged and operate at a lower tax threshold than central tax.

[4] Excludes solidarity surcharge (7.5 per cent. of tax) and church tax (9 per cent. of tax).

[5] All taxpayers with any employment income pay tax at a flat rate of about £7 a year. Apart from this, central government tax is only charged on incomes above £13,700 at a rate of 25 per cent. However, local income tax, at an average rate of 31.5 per cent., is charged on all incomes above £610.

Computers (Millennium Date Change)

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost (a) to the Treasury and (b) to public expenditure throughout Government of making the adaptations to computer programmes required by the change to the year 2000. [3540]

Mr. Darling: The Treasury and other Government departments are producing, by October 1997, fully costed plans for undertaking the work needed.

The cost of the work will be met from within the published departmental expenditure plans for 1997–98 and 1998–99.

Capital Gains

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how he defines short-term capital gains. [3364]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 3 June, column 152.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will report the Government's response to Mr. Malcolm Bates's review of the Private Finance Initiative; and if he will make a statement. [5392]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: I am today placing in the Members' Library a summary of the Bates review and a list of all its recommendations. It is a thorough piece of work for which the Government is most grateful. It builds upon the 12 Point Plan for Partnership originally published in the Labour Policy's Business Manifesto.

The Government promised to re-invigorate the PFI and that is what we have done. Malcolm Bates has applied a businessman's mind to this policy and produced specific recommendations which we accept in full as an agenda for action.

The review says that the PFI can secure improved value for money when handled well. But the public sector structure must be simplified and responsibilities made entirely clear.

Departments and agencies must be accountable for their own procurement decisions. However, it identifies a temporary need for a strong central input to help ensure delivery of quality transactions that provide a sound basis for future business.

To meet this need, we will, as recommended, create a new Treasury Private Finance Taskforce—combining central project and policy expertise. Its Chief Executive on the projects side will report direct to me. We will make an appointment in due course.

This individual will focus on the quality of PFI transactions. He will be supported by 6–8 Executives from the private sector with direct project management experience and financial skills. Until now, the Treasury has been involved too late in the process, leading to frustration and increased costs. The Taskforce will help central government departments and agencies road-test significant projects for their commercial viability before procurement begins.

The Taskforce's policy side will also have its hands full. The review includes specific recommendations to produce rapidly more standardised documentation for key stages of the procurement process. The Government wants greater certainty wherever it can be provided to help reduce bidding costs.

The Private Finance Panel will be stood down. I have written to all members today thanking them for their past contribution. The review acknowledges the immense value that high calibre members made in freely giving their time to meet key players, speak at conferences, write articles and support a growing band of Executives. However, it concluded that their on-going role was unclear and that there was a need to simplify organisational structures.

The recommendation to strengthen departmental Private Finance Units alongside the new Treasury Taskforce also takes away the need for the Private Finance Panel Executive. The Government accepts the Review recommendation that it should be disbanded by the end of September. Opportunities will, of course, exist within the new structure for those individuals currently with the Executive who have the skills and experience now required.

The agenda for action is detailed, practical and full of common sense. It will be welcomed as long overdue by companies and departments who have struggled for two long under previous management.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Arms Exports

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions were held between the British and German Governments prior to granting a license allowing the export of Henckler Koch MP5 sub-machine guns to Indonesia in 1995. [2776]

Mr. Fatchett: I am not aware of any such discussions.

COPEX Exhibition, Farnborough

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will identify by name, rank and unit, the Indonesian (i) military, (ii) security, (iii) police, (iv) paramilitary or (v) special forces personnel invited by the British Government to attend the forthcoming COPEX Exhibition at Farnborough in September 1997. [3585]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence on 18 June, column 217.

Defence Equipment Exhibition, Farnborough

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the visas granted to Indonesian (a) military, (b) security, (c) police, (d) paramilitary and (e) special forces personnel invited by the British Government or private companies to attend the forthcoming Royal Navy and British Army Equipment Exhibition at Farnborough in September. [3588]

Mr. Fatchett: We have not been asked to issue visas specifically for Indonesians attending the RNBAEE 97 at Farnborough.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will identify by name, rank and unit, such Indonesian (a) military, (b) security, (c) police, (d) paramilitary and (e) special forces personnel invited by the British Government to attend the forthcoming Royal Navy and British Army Equipment Exhibition at Farnborough in September 1997. [3584]

Mr. Spellar: The following Indonesian personnel have been invited to attend this year's Royal Navy and British Army Equipment Exhibition:

General Tanjung (Commander In Chief Indonesian Armed Forces);

General Wiranto (Chief of Staff Army);

Admiral Kushariadi (Chief of Staff Navy).

BBC World Service

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received on the jamming of BBC World Service broadcasts; and if he will make a statement. [4165]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: None recently. We deplore all attempts to jam World Service broadcasts and make representations to the Governments concerned.

Departmental Wages

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time persons employed by his Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (iii) less than £3 an hour. [4191]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Full Time Staff: Two persons are employed earning less than £4 per hour. Four persons are employed earning less than £3.50 per hour. One person is employed by this Department's Executive Agency (Wilton Park) earning less than £3.50 per hour.

Part Time Staff: One person is employed earning less than £3.50 per hour. No staff earn less than £3 per hour. Earnings quoted take account of 1997 pay award. In all these cases, staff are employed outside London are not eligible for Recruitment and Retention Allowance.

Disability Discrimination (European Union)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs is he will introduce proposals to revise the treaty on European Union so as to (a) introduce a general power at a European level to outlaw discrimination against disabled people in policy areas where the European Union has competence under the treaty and (b) introduce a change to article 100a of the treaty on European Union so that all proposals put forward to regulate the internal market take into account the needs of disabled people. [3617]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 18 June 1997]: At the Amsterdam European Council, we supported Article 6a allowing the Community to combat discrimination on grounds of disability. We also tabled a Declaration attached to Article 100a, calling on the institutions of the Community to take the needs of the disabled into account when framing internal market legislation. Both measures were adopted.

Polygraphs

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what use his Department makes of polygraphs; and if he will make a statement. [4584]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: This Department does not make use of polygraphs and has no plans to do so.

Kenya

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans next to visit Kenya. [4874]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no immediate plans to visit Kenya. I will pay an official visit there from 25 to 27 June 1997.

Nuclear Arms

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken to promote nuclear disarmament; and if he will make a statement. [4406]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have made clear our commitment to the goal of the global elimination of nuclear weapons and determination to press for multilateral negotiations towards mutual, balanced and verifiable reductions in such weapons. We will be considering how best to implement these commitments, particularly in the context of the Strategic Defence Review.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the International Court of Justice ruling on nuclear arms on United Kingdom policy; and if he will make a statement. [4758]

Mr. Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave on 22 May to the honourable Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) column 135–36.

Antarctic Treaty Secretariat

Mr. Corybn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made on the siting of a secretariat for the Antarctic treaty; and if he will make a statement. [4413]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: There is as yet no consensus amongst the Antarctic Treaty Consultative Parties on the location of the Treaty Secretariat. We are reviewing our policy in the light of developments at the recent Antarctic Treaty meeting in Christchurch.

Rockall

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the legal basis for his Department's assertion that Rockkall is part of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [4414]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: British sovereignty over Rockall was proclaimed in 1955. It was confirmed by the subsequent passing of the Island of Rockall Act 1972 which made Rockall part of Scotland.

NATO Expansion

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the costs of NATO expansion to include Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic on the defence budgets of those countries and no other NATO members separately identifying the costs to the United Kingdom. [4403]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Twelve countries have applied to join NATO.

No decision has been taken on which countries will accede to NATO membership. The costs of enlargement, which fall both on the countries which join and on existing members of the Alliance and which will be incurred over a long period, will depend on that decision. Subject to that caveat, we expect the costs of enlargement to be manageable.

The US Government report to Congress in February 1997 gives an estimate of the direct additional costs of NATO enlargement of between $9 billion to £2 billion.

Qualified Majority Voting

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the various areas of extension of qualified majority voting under the Amsterdam treaty. [5026]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Presidency text on the extension of qualified majority voting (QMV) agreed at Amsterdam is below.

There will also be QMV for implementing decisions under the Common Foreign and Security Policy as provided for by Article J13. However a Member State may prevent a vote from being taken for important and stated reasons of national interest, whereupon the decision may be referred to the European Council for decision by unanimity.

The flexibility provisions in Articles 5a and K12 are also subject to qualified majority voting. However a similar national veto mechanism applies. The new Articles B (2) (b) (i) and (iii) in the new chapter on free movement of persons, asylum and immigration shall also be subject to QMV. The UK will not be obliged to take part in cooperation under this chapter.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE-infected Material (Disposal)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the arrangements for the future disposal of BSE-infected carcases. [2825]

Mr. Rooker: It will continue to be the Ministry's practice to use incineration wherever feasible to dispose of cattle suspected of having BSE.

Abattoirs (Licences)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the criteria by which abattoirs are licensed by the Intervention Board to slaughter cattle under the 30 month scheme. [3933]

Mr. Rooker: Abattoirs wishing to slaughter cattle qualifying for the Over Thirty Month Slaughter Scheme are currently being selected by competitive tender. The evaluation criteria are set out in the invitation to tender. They include compliance with statutory requirements, quality of service, geographical location and price.

BSE

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if it is his policy that all cows born in a given BSE-infected cohort within a given herd, regardless of the location of subsequent rearing, should be culled in any case where one or more cows in such a cohort are culled under the selective cull scheme. [3916]

Mr. Rooker: The scientific basis of the cull is that animals which ate the same feed as BSE cases in the first six months of their lives are likely to be at risk of exposure to infection through that feed. Any such exposed animals which have been sold from the natal herd will be traced as far as possible. Those animals found alive will be restricted and slaughtered.

We intend also to include animals which were reared together in their first six months of life, irrespective of where they were born, provided we can be reasonably sure that it was there, rather than in the natal herd, that exposure to infection took place. We are currently seeking agreement from the European Commission that to do so would be in line with the relevant EC legislation.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when his Department first contacted other member states of the EU advising them that BSE-contaminated feed should be removed from farms. [4282]

Mr. Rooker: The measures which Member States should take in order to avoid the feeding of BSE contaminated feed were discussed with representatives of the Commission and the other Member Stases in the Standing Veterinary Committee of 18–19 July 1989.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the dates on which farmers were advised by their national authorities to dispose of BSE-contaminated feed, in respect of each member state in the EU which imported such feed from the UK. [4285]

Mr. Rooker: Advice given by the authorities of the other Member States to their farmers is a matter of national competence and we do not have records of such advice.

Swine Fever

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ensure that the United Kingdom's EU partners take steps to eradicate classical swine fever; and if he will make a statement on the extent of classical swine fever in other EU countries. [3920]

Mr. Rooker: European Community legislation lays down requirements for the control and eradication of classical swine fever within the territory of a Member State and to prevent the spread of the disease from one Member State to another. Classical swine fever is currently present in Germany, the Netherlands, Italy and Spain. The situation is being kept under continuous review by the EC Standing Veterinary Committee (SVC), on which the UK is represented. The SVC may adopt additional ad hoc safeguard measures which they believe are necessary to consolidate existing control and eradication measures.

Sellafield

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what notification his Department has received from British Nuclear Fuels in respect of increases in the discharge of radioactive waste materials from Sellafield. [3820]

Mr. Rooker: The Department receives routine discharge data from BNFL at Sellafield within three months of the end of the appropriate accounting period. In circumstances where a unusually high discharge occurs, the information is passed rapidly, as soon as it is available. Routine discharges are authorised by the Environment Agency. There are statutory powers to protect the safety of food, should it in any way be compromised.

Beef Imports

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has received on the legality, under EU law, of a unilateral ban on imports of European beef into the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [3793]

Mr. Rooker: We have not sought advice on the legality of a unilateral ban on imports of European beef since we are not proposing to introduce such a ban. The announcement made on 5 June by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, Official Report, columns 227–8, related to a proposal to apply current UK controls on specified bovine material to imported as well as home produced beef.

Mrs. May: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what mechanisms for monitoring standards in overseas slaughterhouses his Department has evaluated in connection with its consideration of an import ban on beef from slaughterhouses not meeting United Kingdom standards; and what conclusions have been reached. [4137]

Mr. Rooker: No import ban on beef from slaughterhouses not meeting UK standards is under consideration.

All fresh meat imported into the UK, whether from other Member States or third countries, must have been produced in accordance with harmonised Community rules laid down in Council Directive 64/433/EEC as amended, on health conditions for the production and marketing of fresh meat.

These rules require that, amongst other things, all fresh meat which is intended for human consumption fulfils the required public health standards. As far as slaughterhouses are concerned, they must be approved as meeting the requirements of the Directive and all meat leaving the slaughterhouse must bear a health mark. The inspection, approval and monitoring of slaughterhouses in third countries is the respnsibility of the European Commission. The inspection, approval and monitoring of slaughterhouses in Member States is the responsibility of the competent authority of the Member State concerned, although the Commission make on-site checks to ensure uniform application of the Directive.

Following advice from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, however, and in the absence of EU wide rules on the removal and disposal of specified bovine material (SBM), we are now consulting on proposals which would mean that our requirement to remove and dispose of SBM would apply not only to cattle which have died or been slaughtered in the UK, but also to bovine material which has been imported into this country. This is not an import ban.

Hunt Kennels

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those hunt kennels which the State Veterinary Service has assessed to be unsatisfactory under the BSE enforcement programme, since 1 January. [3826]

Mr. Rooker: The State Veterinary Service (SVS) makes monthly unannounced visits to hunt kennels handling specified bovine material to audit the controls under the Specified Bovine Material Order 1997. Those premises at which failings were found during such visits since 1 January 1997 are listed below. The fact that failures have occurred does not necessarily mean that there is a risk to public health. Visits may be recorded as unsatisfactory for a variety of reasons, including minor, technical and short-lived problems. Following an unsatisfactory visit the operator of the premises is required to take immediate remedial action. A further unannounced visit is made shortly afterwards to check that this has been carried out.

Departmental Wages

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many, (a) full-time and (b) part-time persons employed by his Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (ii) less than £3 an hour. [4189]

Mr. Morley: Staff in the Department are salaried and are not paid by the hour. However, I am able to provide a breakdown based on salary levels divided by normal full-time working hours of 36 hours per week in London or 37 hours elsewhere. This is set out in the table below.

	Full-time			Part-time
	Number of staff less than £4/hour	Number of staff less than £3.50/hour	Number of staff less than £3/hour	Number of staff less than £4/hour	Number of staff less than £3.50/hour	Number of staff less than £3/hour

The figures in the left-hand columns do not incorporate the totals from the other columns.

The above figures reflect 1996–97 salaries as the 1997 pay reviews have not yet been implemented.

Genetically Modified Food

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which countries require the labelling as such of genetically modified food. [4283]

Mr. Rooker: There are currently no internationally harmonised rules for labelling genetically modified (GM) foods. The main producers of these, the United States, Canada and Japan, do not require them to be labelled as such. In Europe, Germany, Austria, Denmark, Sweden, the Netherlands and ourselves have all operated rules or guidelines governing the labelling of these materials for some time. As from 15 May, these were superseded by the labelling requirements of the EC Novel Foods Regulation (258/97) and we shall be pressing to ensure that the application of these leads to all foods being labelled if they contain GM material regardless of whether or not they have been segregated from conventional materials at an earlier stage in the food chain.

Beef Farmers

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will raise the 30 month cull limit to 36 months, with special reference to beef farmers using traditional, extensive grass-based systems. [3051]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer given on 19 June 1997]: No. The Beef Assurance Scheme already provides for eligible animals aged to and including 42 months to be sold for human consumption. Eligible animals are those from specialist, mainly grass reared beef herds in which no case of BSE has ever occurred and in which the risk of BSE occurring in the future is considered very low.

Cod Liver Oil (Toxin Levels)

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the results of the official survey of the toxin levels in code liver oil supplements. [4992]

Mr. Rooker: The results of the MAFF survey for dioxins and polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) in fish oil dietary supplements and licensed medicines were announced on 14 May 1997 by the Chief Medical Officer, Sir Kenneth Calman. Further details are available from MAFF on request and are also on the Internet.

Rabies

Mr. Malins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if his officials have completed the review of rabies policy options begun in October 1996; and when he expects to publish the report; [5027]

(2) when he expects to publish the Green Paper on Rabies policy reform. [5028]

Mr. Rooker: The review referred to by the hon. Member was a matter for the previous Government. However, we are reviewing whether alternatives to quarantine might give equal or better protection against rabies. We would expect to consult at some point on this, but decisions on when and how to do so have yet to be taken.

DEFENCE

Army (Buy-outs)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers bought themselves out of the Army in each year since 1992. [4861]

Dr. Reid: The number of soldiers who have bought themselves out of the Army in each year since 1992 is as follows:

Financial year	Trained soldiers outflow (premature voluntary release by purchase)	Outflow of recruits (on payment)	Total soldier outflow (on payment)
1991–92	2,465	1,118	3,583
1992–93	2,130	1,038	3,168
1993–94	1,727	797	2,524
1994–95	1,603	869	2,472
1995–96	1,410	815	2,225
1996–97	821	1,219	2,040
Total	10,156	5,856	16,012

Polygraph

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what use his Department makes of the polygraph; and if he will make a statement. [4582]

Dr. Reid: My Department does not use the polygraph and has no plans to do so.

Pay and Personnel Agency

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Pay and Personnel Agency for 1997–98. [4917]

Mr. Spellar: The Chief Executive of the Pay and Personnel Agency (PPA) is responsible for providing pay and personnel services for the Ministry of Defence as defined in the Agency Framework Document. During 1997–98, the PPA will be set the following challenging key performance targets:

1. (a) While making 100 per cent. of payments of pay by the due date, the number of errors not to exceed 12 per 1,000 payments of weekly industrial pay.

(b) While making 100 per cent. of payments of pay by the due date, the number of errors not to exceed six per 1,000 payments of monthly non-industrial pay.

(c) While authorising 100 per cent. of awards of pensions by the due date, the number of errors not to exceed 20 per 1,000 awards.

(d) While making 100 per cent. of payments of expenses within 10 working days of receipts, the number of errors not to exceed 15 per 1,000 payments.

(e) To pay 100 per cent. of claims for fees and personal payments within nine working days of receipt.

2. By 31 August 1997 to introduce methods of measuring how well its services meet the customers' needs, building on the findings of the customer satisfaction study report completed in December 1996.

3. By 31 March 1998 to achieve efficiency savings to meet at least the Departmental target of 2 per cent. efficiency savings of annual operating costs.

4. To publish by 31 March 1998 a business case setting out the options available from potential private sector partners, in comparison with the cost of providing services from agency resources.

5. By 31 March 1998 to introduce a new personnel information system.

Prince Consort Library, Aldershot

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Prince Consort Library in the Aldershot Garrison and its contents. [4616]

Dr. Reid [holding reply Friday 20 June 1997]: My Department is currently considering a number of options for the co-location within the United Kingdom of the Army Command Libraries, including the Prince Consort's Library at Aldershot. No decision has yet been taken.

US Nuclear Bases

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the costs to public funds of cleaning up the former United States nuclear bases; what is his estimate of the costs to the US authorities of thee operations; and if he will make a statement. [4407]

Mr. Spellar: Remediation will normally be undertaken on MoD land if there is a significant risk to health and safety or the environment, for instance where contamination poses a threat to individuals, water courses or neighbouring property. No special arrangements apply to bases formerly occupied by US forces. No significant costs incurred to date on their remediation have been identified. The Environment Act 1995 may impose additional remediation responsibilities on landowners and new enforcement arrangements, but the full implications for MoD land, including any formerly occupied by US forces, cannot yet be assessed.

Training Land

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the number of landowners making their land available for training on private land and (b) the number of hectares they make available, adjacent to (i) Salisbury Plain training area, (ii) Otterburn training area and (iii) Sennybridge training area; and by what percentage training land is extended by the availability of training on private land in each of the three areas. [4750]

Mr. Spellar: The type of training undertaken on private land will usually differ from that conducted on MoD training areas: for example, training on Salisbury Plain training area is primarily armoured training whereas that on adjacent private land will not involve armoured vehicles. Training on private land cannot therefore be regarded as a simple extension of training on adjacent MoD land. The quantity and locations of training on private land will also vary from year to year. Subject to these qualifications, in the past 12 months, the figures requested have been as follows:

a. Number of landowners making their land available:

(i) Areas adjacent to Salisbury Plain training area (SPTA): 77

(ii) Areas adjacent to Otterburn training area (OTA): 21

(iii) Areas adjacent to Sennybridge training area (SENTA): 2

b. Numbers of hectares made available:

(i) Areas adjacent to Salisbury Plain training areas (SPTA): 10,000ha approximately

(ii) Areas adjacent to Otterburn training areas (OTA): 675ha approximately

(iii) Areas adjacent to Sennybridge training area (SENTA): 3ha approximately

c. Private land made available as a percentage of adjacent MoD training land:

(i) Areas adjacent to Salisbury Plain training areas (SPTA): 25 per cent. of SPTA

(ii) Areas adjacent to Otterburn training area (OTA): 2.9 per cent. of OTA

(iii) Areas adjacent to Sennybridge training area (SENTA): less than 0.1 per cent. of SENTA

Note: Private land adjacent to SENTA has been used for access only rather than manoeuvres.

Diversification Agency

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action his Department is taking to establish a defence diversification agency; and if he will make a statement. [4754]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon), Official Report, 16 June, col. 11.

Expenditure

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish the estimates for defence expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [4756]

Dr. Reid: Estimates of defence expenditure in the current financial year are contained in "Supply Estimates 1997–98: Main Estimates", which were published in March this year. As I explained in my written reply to the hon. and learned Member for North-East Fife, (Mr. Campbell) on 3 June, Official Report, column 121), we do not intend this year to publish a forward looking statement of policy in the form of a Statement on the Defence Estimates (SDE). Factual material on the activities of my Department and the Armed Forces in the last year, which is usually contained in the SDE, will however, appear in an expanded MOD Performance Report which the Department plans to publish in the Autumn.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the total cost of the European fighter aircraft project; and what proportion of these costs will be borne by the United Kingdom. [4405]

Mr. Spellar: The estimated procurement cost of the Eurofighter projet is £41.6 billion. As I told my right hon. Friend the Member for Llanelli (Mr. Davies) on 2 June, Official Report, column 14, up to 31 March 1997 the UK's expenditure on the Eurofighter programme totalled £2.7 billion. Future UK procurement expenditure is currently estimated at £12.7 billion. Figures are at average 1996–97 prices.

Trident

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 June, Official Report, column 3, if he will give a breakdown of the annual operating cost of Trident; and if he will estimate future capital expenditure on the project. [4759]

Dr. Reid: It is too early in the life of the Trident programme accurately to assess operating costs but we estimate them to be in the order of £200 million per annum over a 30 year in-service life. This estimate encompasses manpower and related costs, refits of the submarines, stores and transport costs, a share of the running costs of shore facilities, an element of the costs of the Atomic Weapons Establishment, in-service support of the submarines and their weapon systems and decommissioning and disposal costs. Estimated future capital expenditure on the project is as stated by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Defence in his answer of 16 June, Official Report, column 3.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the operational purpose of the Trident nuclear missile system. [4416]

Dr. Reid: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 16 June 1997 to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Dr. Jones), Official Report, column 81.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of keeping the Trident fleet (a) on 24 hour patrol and (b) on stand by. [4757]

Dr. Reid: Figures are not available in the form requested.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the ordering of a fifth Trident submarine. [4417]

Mr. Spellar: We have no such plans.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the report from the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament concerning the costs of Trident, a copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement. [5025]

Dr. Reid: We are not aware of a recent report from the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament concerning the costs of Trident. We have, however, recently received a number of letters and postcards on this subject. Our latest estimate of the total acquisition cost of the Trident programme is £12.57 billion at 1996–97 economic conditions, over £3.6 billion less in real terms than the original 1982 estimate. Operating costs are estimated to be some £200 million per annum over a 30 year in-service life.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for a nuclear weapons system to replace Trident; and if he will make a statement. [4408]

Mr. Spellar: Decisions on a successor to Trident would not be needed for a number of years. They could be taken in the light of progress towards our goal of verifiable global nuclear disarmament.

Beef

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what volume of beef and beef products was purchased by his Department in 1996 and what percentage originated (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) in Germany, (c) in other European Union countries and (d) in non-European Union countries. [4654]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 20 June 1997]: Approximately 1.25 million kilograms of beef is purchased annually by my Department. This figure excludes beef in finished products for which figures are not readily available. Purchase records are not kept in sufficient detail to allow the identification of the percentage of beef originating from the particular trading areas requested, but the majority is known to come from non-European countries.

HOME DEPARTMENT

WPC Yvonne Fletcher

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 10 June, Official Report, column 388, on WPC Yvonne Fletcher, what is the result of the review of the contents of the programme by the Metropolitan police. [3782]

Mr. Straw: The Metropolitan Police are continuing their review. This involves a good deal of detailed analysis of the extensive documentation already generated by their investigation. They expect to have completed their analysis by the end of September 1997.

Immigration (Detention Policy)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the scope of the general review of the Government's immigration detention policy; what the time scale is for the review; and whether external organisations will be consulted. [3939]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The review is being conducted internally in the Home Office. Its scope is wide ranging to cover all aspects of immigration detention policy. We expect the results to be available later in the summer. External organisations have been informed that the review is taking place.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time persons employed by his Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (iii) less than £3 an hour. [4196]

Mr. Straw: The information for the core Home Office and its Agencies, based on gross hours and on basic pay, is as follows:

Full-time

(i) less than £4 per hour = 828

(ii) less than £3.50 per hour = 459

(iii) less than £3 per hour = nil

Part-time

(i) less than £4 per hour = 329

(ii) less than £3.50 per hour = 12

(iii) less than £3 per hour = nil

Allowances in regular payment (for example, London Weighting) reduce these totals as follows:

Full-time

(i) less than £4 per hour = 449

(ii) less than £3.50 per hour = 304

(iii) less than £3 per hour = nil

Part-time

(i) less than £4 per hour = 6

(ii) less than £3.50 per hour = 8

(iii) less than £3 per hour = nil

Land Development (Wandsworth)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to develop land adjacent to Wandsworth Prison; if Wandsworth Council has been fully informed of these proposals; and if he will make a statement. [4439]

Ms Joyce Quin: It is proposed to provide a stores building, a pre-release hostel, a visitors' centre and a 125-place car park on the land adjacent to Wandsworth prison. These proposals were discussed at a meeting with Wandsworth Council prior to an application for outline planning permission being submitted on 1 May.

Sexual Offences

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the ratio of reported sexual attacks and offences to population in (a) designated new towns and (b) other towns of similar size. [4467]

Mr. Michael: Information on recorded crime in England and Wales is collated centrally only on the basis of police force areas. Individual police forces do collate more localised data but this would not necessarily equate to new town boundaries.

Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made in preparing the necessary statutory instruments for the Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997. [4865]

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to implement the Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997. [4604]

Deaths (Proscribed Drugs)

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many deaths arising from overdoses of a proscribed drug there were in each of the last five years for which figures are available by type of drug. [4840]

Mr. Michael: Summary statistics of deaths involving controlled drugs are given in the table. It is not possible to determine accurately which of these were caused by drug overdoses. Fuller details, including the type of drug involved, are contained in tables 17, 18 and 19 of the following Home Office Statistical Bulletins—issue 6/92, "Statistics of drug addicts notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1991"; issue 15/93, "Statistics of drug addicts notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1992"; issue 10/94, "Statistics of drug addicts notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1993"; issue 15/95, "Statistics of drug addicts notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1995". Copies of these publications are in the Library.

United Kingdom — Number of deaths

Underlying cause of death	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994
Drug dependence and non-dependent abuse of drugs[1]	294	307	345	322	489
Deaths from poisoning where a controlled drug was mentioned[2]
Accidental	233	255	327	358	442
Suicide	440	433	400	340	334
Undetermined	262	295	274	252	243
AIDS	55	79	82	107	112
Total	1,284	1,369	1,428	1,379	1,620

[1] Includes solvents and other non-controlled drugs such as alcohol.

[2] Excludes Northern Ireland.

Treason and Piracy (Maximum Sentences)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to abolish the death penalty for the offences of (a) treason and (b) piracy; and if he will make a statement. [4646]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 20 June 1997]: The Government have no such plans at present.

Fire Safety

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce legislation on fire safety analogous to the Fire Safety Bill introduced in the last Parliament. [5015]

Mr. George Howarth: The Government strongly support the aims of the Fire Safety Bill and will be looking for appropriate opportunities to achieve those aims. I have asked my officials, as a priority, to provide me with an outline of the options that are available. As part of that process, officials are in the middle of a series of discussions with some of the key stakeholders to hear their views on the best way to proceed. Discussion of the Fire Safety Bill will then be at the top of the agenda for discussion by the Joint Fire Safety Committee of the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council at its next meeting on 8 July.

Sport (Crowd Control)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of measures to deal with soccer-related crowd problems on other major spectator team sports. [3103]

Mr. Michael: The measures taken to deal with crowd disorder in football have been specific to football. These include controls on the sale and possession of alcohol under the Sporting Events (Control of Alcohol etc.) Act 1985; the exclusion order scheme under Part IV of the Public Order Act 1986; the restriction order scheme under Part II of the Football Spectators Act 1989; and the creation of four football specific offences under the Football (Offences) Act 1991 and section 166 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994.

The police have other powers which apply at all sports. In particular, the 1986 Public Order Act enables the police to take action against a broad range of disorderly behaviour. There are also powers to deal with vandalism, damage to property and assault.

If there is evidence from the police that the problem of crowd disorder has become more widespread and is having a significant impact on other sports, we will review the need for further measures.

Representation of the People Act 1983

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will undertake a review of the law as it applies to the Representation of the People Act 1983. [3116]

Mr. George Howarth: We have no plans to do so at present.

Coroners

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the role and functions of coroners. [3119]

Mr. George Howarth: We have no plans to do so, but arrangements are kept under review.

Fines (Motorists)

Professor Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to allow (a) local authorities and (b) police forces to retain some of the proceeds from fines levied upon speeding motorists caught by speed cameras. [4415]

Mr. Michael: None. Hypothecating the revenue from speeding fines would result in expenditure on traffic enforcement being determined by the income generated, rather than the relative priority of the activity.

In the light of the Home Office's study of the cost-benefit analysis of traffic light and speed cameras, we have decided to examine the funding arrangements for the cameras and consider what more might be done.

Entry Visas

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reduce the cost of entry visas to the United Kingdom. [4015]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

We continually look at ways to make efficiency savings to enable us to reduce entry clearance fees. Fees, which are set to recover the cost of processing an application world wide to minimise the burden on the taxpayer, are reviewed annually. The standard single entry fee has not been increased since January 1995. The current fees, introduced on 10 June 1997, include a reduction in the cost for a five year multiple entry visa.

SCOTLAND

Private Finance Initiative (Health Service)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to conclude his review of PFI projects in the health service in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [4201]

Mr. Galbraith: Alongside the review being undertaken by the Minister of State, Department of Health, my hon. Friend the Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) I have been undertaking a similar review of Health PFI schemes in Scotland. I have today written to all Scottish MPs, giving full details of the conclusions I have reached.

I am committed to delivering PFI-led service improvements in the Scottish Health Service. A number of high quality PFI projects, such as those at the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh and the hospitals at Law and Hairmyres, which will deliver clear health care benefits, are well placed to proceed to financial close. I wish to see those benefits on the ground as quickly as possible and have asked my officials to push forward with these.

However it has become clear that other projects are not appropriate for the PFI process. Last week (Monday 16 June) I announced that, in view of the urgent nature of the maternity and theatre proposals at Glasgow Royal Infirmary, we would push these aspects of the project forward through £36 million of public funding. Other aspects of the original project, such as catering and the car park facilities, will continue to be pursued under PFI.

After consideration, I have concluded that the PFI process at the Western General in Edinburgh should also be halted. The PFI project for the Western is complicated by the fact that it is an existing NHS site with a large number of buildings of varying ages, functions and conditions. My view is that in the case of the Western General, PFI is not the right route. Instead the Government intend to provide around £40 million to fund a new ward and theatre block which is so clearly needed. Our proposals will also enable the go-ahead of the midwife-led maternity unit.

I think it only right that further major PFI projects such as the Western Infirmary should be taken forward only once the overall review of the PFI process in Health has been completed. However there are numerous other relatively smaller Scottish Health projects exploring PFI. I want Trusts and Boards to continue to pursue these projects and to come forward with new proposals. There will be rigorous scrutiny of these projects at every stage of their development. A project must be proven to be affordable, value for money and, most importantly, offer real health care improvements for Scotland.

I will be working closely with my hon. colleague, the Minister of State, Department of Health, over the coming months at improving the PFI product and will also be exploring the possibility of developing other models of structured private finance schemes in the longer term.

Illegal Weapons

Mr. Willian Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by police force the number of persons shot with illegal weapons in each of the last three years and the current year, indicating (a) how many persons were (i) killed and (ii) injured, (b) the type of firearm used, (c) the calibre of firearms used, (d) the number of persons made answerable to the courts in respect of such crimes and (e) the number of occasions the police have sent an armed response team to an incident. [4052]

Mr. McLeish: The following tables detail the number of persons (i) killed and (ii) injured with illegal weapons in the years 1992–95 in Scotland. The figures relate only to cases in which both the accused and the weapon were identified; in other cases, it is not possible to say whether or not the weapon was legally certificated.

Since January 1994, Scottish police forces have despatched armed police officers to over 2,000 incidents where a firearm was reported or suspected. The number of these incidents where an illegal firearm was actually involved is not recorded. The remaining information is not collect centrally.

Number of persons killed by type of weapon, 1992 to 1995

1992

In addition, there were a number of fatalities in which the weapon was unidentified and therefore it could not be determined whether or not it was legally held or not. There were two such cases in 1994 and six in 1995.

In addition, there were a number of injuries in which a weapon was fired but unidentified and it was not therefore possible to determine whether the weapon was legally held or not. There was one such case in 1993, 11 in 1994 and 15 in 1995.

Low Pay

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time employees or his Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (iii) less than £3 an hour. [4193]

Mr. Dewar: Of those employed in my Department and its Executive Agencies in April 1997, 383 full-time employees have basic salaries below £4/hour; 3 adults and 25 staff aged under 18 have basic salaries below £3.50/hour; with a further 17 staff all aged under 18 below £3/hour. Among part-time staff, 27 have basic salaries below £4/hour with no-one under £3.50/hour.

Radioactive Discharges

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends that the Scottish Environment Protection Agency's regulation of radioactive discharges in Scotland will fall within the responsibilities of the proposed Scottish Parliament. [4223]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 19 June 1997]: The Government's proposals for a Scottish Parliament will be set out in a White Paper which my right hon. Friend expects to publish before the House rises for its summer recess.

Environment Protection Agency

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will indicate for each of the organisations replaced by the Scottish Environment Protection Agency in 1996; and whether they operated under an exemption in terms of the Value Added Tax Act 1994, section 33. [4220]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 19 June 1997]: The predecessor bodies of the Scottish Environment Protection Agency were River Purification Boards, District and Islands Councils, Her Majesty's Industrial Pollution Inspectorate (HMIPI) and the Hazardous Waste Inspectorate (HWI). With the exception of HMIPI and HWI, both formerly parts of The Scottish Office, all those bodies had the right to precept on local taxation and thus were entitled to claim refunds of VAT under the terms of Section 33 of the Value Added Tax Act 1994.

SEPA does not have the power to precept on local taxation and is therefore not eligible to claim refunds of VAT in this way.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the responsibilities of the Scottish Environment Protection Agency. [4221]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 19 June 1997]: The principal responsibilities of SEPA are:-

- consenting of discharges to the water environment (surface, tidal and ground waters);
- conserving water resources as far as practicable and promoting the conversation and enhancement of the natural beauty and amenity of controlled waters;
- providing flood warning systems, assessing the risk of flooding on any area and advising planning authorities on flood risk;
- granting abstraction licences for irrigation where a control order is in force;
- issuing authorisations to prevent, minimise or render harmless the release of substances into the environment from prescribed processes;
- authorising the handling and disposal of radioactive materials and registering persons holding or using such materials;
- licensing of waste management activities;
- registering waste carriers and brokers and regulating the transfrontier shipment of waste;
- taking enforcement action against persons breaching licence conditions or illegally polluting the environment;
- carrying out assessments of the general state of the environment (if required by the Secretary of State);
- keeping up-to-date on pollution control technology, with powers to undertake relevant research and development;
- creating smoke control areas;
- ensuring compliance with the "producer responsibility" regulations as directed by the Secretary of State.

In carrying out these specific responsibilities, SEPA is required to:-

- have regard both to the desirability of conserving and enhancing the natural and man-made environment and to the social and economic needs of any area; and
- take into account the likely costs and benefits of exercising its powers.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding the refusal to grant the Scottish Environment Protection Agency an exemption in terms of the Value Added Tax Act 1994, section 33; and if he will make a statement. [4222]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 19 June 1997]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland regularly discusses various issues with colleagues, including my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Forestry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate for each of the past five years for (i) England, (ii) Scotland and (iii) Wales the total (a) broadleaf tree cover, (b) evergreen tree cover, (c) area felled and (d) area planted; and if he will make a statement. [4409]

Mr. Chisholm: The information is set out in the tables below.

[1]The areas of broadleaved and comfier woodland are based on the 1980 Census of Woodlands. They have been updated by including the estimated changes since then.
[2]The Forestry Commission does not record the areas felled by private woodland owners, but it does record the areas approved for felling. However, approvals are valid for a five year period, and large areas which are approved for felling are never felled.
[3]The areas planted include both the areas of felled woodland which are replanted and the areas of new woodlands which are created.

Transport Policy

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how he proposes to provide an effective and integrated transport policy; and what plans he has to carry out a strategic review of the roads programme in Scotland. [5142]

Mr. Dewar: My noble Friend, the Minister with responsibility for agriculture, the environment and fisheries announced on Thursday—Official Report, House of Lords, column 136—our intention to publish a White Paper early next year which will set out our proposals for a workable, effective and integrated transport policy appropriate to the needs of Scotland. Our development of that will operate in parallel with the development of the planned White Paper on integrated transport policy announced by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister on 5 June, column 226.

One key strand of developing an integrated transport strategy is the strategic review of the trunk roads programme promised in the Manifesto. We believe that we need a thorough examination of our rationale for new roads construction. Possible new roads projects must be properly examined in the context of their local and wider economic and environmental impacts and with the possible provision of alternative modes of transport properly considered in parallel. Our eventual decisions must meet our commitment to sustainable development.

This review will consider the full range of factors, including traffic growth, which will give rise to pressure for further major improvements across the trunk road network over the next decade. In parallel with the review, as part of the work leading to the White Paper, we shall examine means of restraining growth, including consideration of the opportunities for doing so on the trunk road network. We will also consider the role which new technology and improved information systems can play.

The review will examine the criteria (including accessibility, safety, economy and environmental impact) for setting priorities within the trunk road programme. It will also review the scope for improved value for money for expenditure on maintenance, structural repairs and minor schemes.

The review is being conducted against the background of our clear commitment to control public expenditure overall and fundamentally to review expenditure priorities through the comprehensive spending review. Given this, no further procedural work on major schemes will be undertaken before the reviews are concluded. However, schemes under construction will continue; and the schemes for the A828 (Creagan Bridge) and the A75 (The Glen), which are both close to commencement, will also continue. Tenders are expected in July for a privately financed design, build, finance and operate contract on the M8 (Baillieston to Shotts) and a decision on that will be announced after the evaluation of tenders, in the light of the information provided by the tenders and other relevant factors. The review will reach conclusions on options for the Kincardine Bridge in advance of those on other projects because of the uncertainties attaching to the operational condition of the bridge and the need to progress contingency plans.

The Scottish Office will continue to invest in the maintenance and structural repairs of the existing network and take forward small schemes, costing less than £3 million, where route action and accident plans have identified measures to alléviate congestion and improve safety.

There has been extensive comments about the previous Government's Green paper "Keeping Scotland Moving" and these, where appropriate, will be considered as part of both the development of our White Paper and the review of the trunk roads programme. We intend to consult about the options and the findings emerging from the review, with the objective of concluding the review by the Summer of 1998.

Home Energy Efficiency Grants

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to amend the home energy efficiency scheme to encourage applications from the Scottish islands and remote areas. [3797]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

Major revisions to this scheme, which were made by the previous administration, come into force on 1 July. From that date the scheme will include cavity wall insulation, loft insulation, heating control system upgrades, draughtproofing, energy efficient lamps, hot water tank insulation and personal advice. Installers have been appointed throughout Great Britain and they will undertake local marketing throughout their areas to bring the scheme to the attention of eligible householders. Every local authority will shortly receive guidance, issued jointly with the Scottish Office, about the scheme and the part they can play in promoting it.

We shall be taking an early opportunity to review the scheme to check whether the changes are meeting the needs of customers.

CABINET OFFICE

Cabinet Committees

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will make a statement on his role in respect of each Cabinet committee on which he sits. [4661]

Mr. Mandelson: Like my colleagues on these committees, I contribute to collective consideration of the issues under discussion.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Government Car Service

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if the Government car service will assess the advantages of using Triumph motorcycles for its dispatch riders. [4316]

Dr. David Clark: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to the Government Car and Despatch Agency. I have asked its Chief Executive, Mr. Nick Matheson, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Nick Matheson to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 20 June 1997:

I have been asked by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to reply to your Parliamentary Question on using Triumph motorcycles for the InterDespatch Service's courier despatch service. I am the Chief Executive of the Agency with operational responsibility for the InterDespatch Service.

The current fleet of six motorcycles was purchased in April 1996 following a technical and operational evaluation of suitability for courier work. This included research with existing users, particularly in assessing load carrying capacity.

The motorcycle fleet is due for replacement in approximately two years, and I will be carrying out a new assessment towards the end of this year. That assessment will include machines produced by Triumph.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if the rules relating to the deposit of compliance cost assessments in the Library prior to the publication of Bills in force in Session 1996–97 continue to apply; and if he will list those Bills for which compliance cost assessments have not been duly deposited in the current session. [4747]

Dr. David Clark: We intend to develop a more succinct, open and relevant system for assessing the costs and benefits of new legislative proposals. In the meantime, the existing rules for publishing a compliance cost assessment alongside bills presented to Parliament continue to apply. The responsibility for the preparation of individual compliance cost assessments rests with the relevant Minister.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the special advisers in his Department, the Minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in his Department in the year up to 1 May. [5347]

The Attorney-General: No special advisers are, or have been, employed in my Department.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Tourism Industry

10. Mrs. McGuire: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has for encouraging the improvement of training and qualifications in the tourism industry. [3090]

19. Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has for encouraging the improvement of training and qualifications in the tourist industry. [3102]

Mr. Tom Clarke: Training and investment in people is one of our key policy aims for the tourism and hospitality industries. We will pursue this aim in partnership with those industries, tourist boards, local authorities and others, together with colleagues in the Department for Education and Employment.

18. Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to increase the United Kingdom income from tourism. [3101]

Mr. Clarke: The Government is working with the industry, the tourist boards, local authorities and others to ensure that tourism is making its full contribution to the UK economy. In 1995, the industry was worth £38 billion, equivalent to over 5 per cent. of the UK's GDP, and it has great potential for growth.

26. Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what work opportunities the tourism industry will provide to the welfare-to-work programme. [3111]

Mr. Clarke: The tourism industry is well placed to play a key role in the welfare-to-work initiative. The industry has enormous potential for employment generation. It already supports some 1.6 million jobs, a number which could grow up to one million in the next decade. We shall be looking to leading employers within the industry to support the Government's initiative.

National Lottery

11. Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to ensure a fairer distribution of lottery proceeds across the regions. [3094]

Mr. Chris Smith: It is clear that some areas of the country have benefited a great dal more from the lottery than others. We will be looking at the reasons for this as part of our review of lottery distribution. We will publish a White Paper containing our proposals in July.

16. Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to change the terms of the operation of the national lottery. [3099]

Mr. Banks: My Department does not have the power to change the terms of operation for the current licence holder. We will seek an efficient and competitive not-for-profit operator when the existing licence expires in 2001.

21. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make it his policy to allow the national lottery to operate overseas; and if he will make a statement. [3105]

Mr. Smith: The operator of the national lottery may under the terms of its licence sell tickets in other member states of the European Community and the European Economic Area provided such sales are not prevented by the state's domestic legislation. Ticket sales outside this permitted area are not allowed under the licence. Any change to the licence would require the Director General's consent.

23. Mr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to review the terms of the lottery operator's licence. [3107]

Mr. Smith: I have announced our intention to seek an efficient not-for-profit operator when the current licence expires. I do not have the power to change the terms of operation for the current licence holder.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the (a) grants of and (b) expenditure of lottery moneys by economic region up until 1 April 1997 (i) in total and (ii) expressed in terms of expenditure per capita in the region. [3185]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 June 1997]: A full list of awards is available from the Library of the House. The table sets out the summary of the total number and value of awards by region and country, including a per capita breakdown:

Film Industry

13. Barbara Follett: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what measures he proposes to encourage Britain's creative industries with particular reference to film. [3096]

Mr. Chris Smith: My Department recently announced the setting up of a Film Policy Review Group whose task will be to formulate an agenda for action for the film industry and for the Government's support to it. It will be the aim of the group to double the audience for British films and to help the film industry to achieve its full creative and economic potential.

More broadly, the Government will take action to help the creative industries to flourish, thereby creating new jobs and new opportunities in the domestic market, boosting exports, and encouraging tourism and inward investment.

24. Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to assist the British film industry. [3109]

Mr. Tom Clarke: My Department recently announced the setting up of a Film Policy Review Group whose task will be to formulate an agenda for action for the film industry and for the Government's support to it. It will be the aim of the group to double the audience for British films and to help the film industry to achieve its full creative and economic potential.

The Group will be co-chaired by myself and Stewart Till of PolyGram Filmed Entertainment. The members all have a real working knowledge of what it takes to achieve artistic and commercial success, both in Britain and abroad.

Regional Orchestras

14. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement concerning his policy on regional orchestras. [3097]

Mr. Fisher: The Government has placed access at the heart of its arts policies. I have the highest regard for the excellence of our regional orchestras and for the opportunities they create for more people to enjoy music. The regional orchestras, including the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic, in which I know my hon. Friend takes a particularly keen interest, are bringing music of the highest standards to audiences across the country and, indeed, abroad.

Public Library Services

15. Dr. Lynda Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to increase the availability of public library services. [3098]

27. Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to increase the availability of public library services. [3112]

Mr. Fisher: The Government is committed to developing the public library service as an essential part of an informed and educated society. The harnessing of new technology will play a vital part in this. I have therefore asked the Library and Information Commission to report on how public libraries can respond effectively to the challenge of new information and communication technology. Its report is due at the end of July.

Millennium Exhibition

17. Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are his Department's proposals for the millennium exhibition. [3100]

Mr. Chris Smith: Last week my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister confirmed our full backing for the millennium exhibition. We took this decision on the basis of five clear commitments to the British people: the exhibition will have a durable legacy; it will have nationwide relevance and links; it will have a content that reflects technological progress and provides a window to the future; it will cost no more public money, other than that required for site clearance; and it will have an enhanced creative team.

Arts (Public Access)

20. Mrs. Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for the National Heritage what plans he has to enable greater access by the public to the arts. [3104]

Mr. Fisher: Access is at the heart of my Department's policies. We believe strongly that the public has a right to better access in return for the public funding which goes into the arts. We have made a number of specific proposals aimed at increasing access to the arts. These include plans to pilot open theatre nights and an Artscard scheme for young people and to review the case for admission charges to core collections in our national museums and galleries.

Land (National Heritage Memorial Fund)

22. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will review the provisions relating to the purchase of land in the national interest through the national heritage memorial fund. [3106]

Mr. Banks: The Government is reviewing the distribution of lottery proceeds generally. We will be considering the funding strategies of all the distributing bodies as part of that review. But we see no immediate need to amend the statutory powers of the National Heritage Memorial Fund in relation to land acquisition projects.

Royal Naval College, Greenwich

25. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will discuss with the Secretary of State for Defence the future of the Royal Naval College, Greenwich. [3110]

Mr. Banks: Officials in my Department are working closely with officials in the Ministry of Defence, the Greenwich Foundation for the Royal Naval College, (the new trust), and Greenwich Hospital in working up proposals for the future of this historic site, following the Royal Navy's departure.

Guest Houses and Hotels

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to introduce a national scheme for the grading of guest houses and hotels. [3163]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The AA, RAC and ETB announced in February plans for a new harmonised scheme which for the first time would give a single rating for hotels according to both the quality of their service and the facilities they offer. They will be consulting the industry on the details of this and on a scheme covering non-hotel serviced accommodation, such as guest-houses, B&Bs, farmhouses and inns.

Broadcasting

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps he is taking to increase the provision of local broadcasting by (a) radio and (b) television. [4739]

Mr. Fisher: The existing regulatory framework already allows for increased local provision.

The Radio Authority is required to secure a range and diversity of local services. Since its creation, the number of commercial local radio services has increased from 130 in 1991 to 177 in 1996. The Authority has also recently introduced small-scale alternative location licencees, and the number of short-term Restricted Service Licences continues to increase. These mechanisms provide a flexible structure within which more modest local operations can flourish.

The Independent Television Commission has recently published guidance on how it intends to implement the provisions of the Broadcasting Act 1996 which introduced a new category of licence for local services and special events—the Restricted Service Licence. Subject to spectrum availability, this new licence category will enable the ITC to oversee the expansion of local television services.

We aim to secure a wide diversity of broadcasting services, and local services are an important element of that diversity. The Government will monitor the effectiveness of the existing and recently enhanced licensing arrangements in providing more local services.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he will next meet the Director General of (a) the Radio Authority and (b) the Independent Television Commission to discuss the conditions of ownership of local radio stations. [4740]

Mr. Fisher: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State meets the Chairmen and Chief Executives of the Radio Authority and the Independent Television Commission from time to time to discuss a variety of broadcasting issues. The conditions of ownership of radio stations are laid down in the Broadcasting Acts 1990 and 1996 and the use of powers under that legislation is solely a matter for the Radio Authority.

School Sport

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans the Government have for encouraging sport in schools. [3188]

Mr. Banks: We are working to extend the opportunities for sport and physical recreation for all people by widening access and encouraging participation. Promoting physical education and sport in schools will be a key element of our strategy. A number of initiatives aimed at promoting sport in schools are already being taken forward by the English Sports Council, and we will shortly be meeting the Department for Education and Employment to consider further action.

National Academy for Sport

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when the decision on the location of the National Academy for Sport is to be made. [3190]

Mr. Banks: I have visited the three short-listed sites and am now examining the bids in light of the visits. We will make an announcement of how we intend to proceed in due course.

Seaside Resorts

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to visit (a) Southport and (b) other north-west England seaside resorts. [3310]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I shall be visiting Southport on Wednesday 25 June to address the National Conference of the Institute of Leisure and Amenity Management. I will be visiting north-west England again later in the year.

Coastal resorts are an important part of our heritage and account for some 44 per cent. of holiday spending in the United Kingdom. I am keen to see them build on this in the future so that local communities and businesses can share fully in the economic benefits of tourism.

Football

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will assess the advantages of permitting restricted standing room areas in new football grounds. [3809]

Mr. Banks: I believe we are striking the right balance in providing some of the most modern all-seater facilities in the world at our top clubs and allowing some standing accommodation at lower division grounds subject to stringent safety requirements. The Government is committed to delivering essential football ground safety improvements following the Taylor Report on the Hillsborough disaster. The £55 million funding package announced recently to assist the Football Trust with Taylor-related safety work demonstrates our commitment to this.

Television Licences

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many letters have been received by his Department concerning concessionary television licences since 2 May; and what response he has given to such letters. [5070]

Mr. Fisher: Since 2 May, the Department of National Heritage has received 49 letters from hon. Members and 71 letters from members of the public about reduced-fee television licences. The Government accepts that the current concessionary scheme can give rise to anomalies and is not wholly satisfactory, and will continue to examine ways in which it might be improved, but has no plans at present to introduce any changes.

Tourism (Social Chapter)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the impact on the tourism industry of the United Kingdom adopting the social chapter. [3108]

Mr. Tom Clarke: Basic standards of employment, by creating a better rewarded and motivated work force, can help to improve business performance. Basic minimum standards will help improve competitiveness.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Water Charges

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will make a statement on the use of council tax banding as the basis for water charges; [3844]

(2) if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on water metering; [3842]

(3) what plans he has for legislation to enable water companies to continue to base their charges on the rateable value of properties; and if he will make a statement. [3843]

Angela Eagle: Under Section 145 of the Water Industry Act 1991, water companies must not base their charges on the rateable value of property after 31 March 2000. The Deputy Prime Minister announced at the recent Water Summit that the Government is to review the system of charging for water. Among other issues this review will consider alternative bases of charging, including the future use of rateable values, the use of council tax bands and metering policy. We shall be looking at the way in which metering works at present, taking special account of the effect on low-income households. We have made clear our opposition to compulsory metering for essential household use.

Technetium 99 Contamination (West Cumbrian Coast)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of recent British Nuclear Fuels monitoring figures in respect of the level of technetium 99 in crustaceans off the west Cumbrian coast; and what action he plans to take to eradicate the contamination. [4263]

Angela Eagle: Assessments of monitoring data of the levels of technetium 99 in crustaceans off the west Cumbrian coast are, in the first instance, matters for the Environment Agency and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. British Nuclear Fuels plc has applied to the Environment Agency for variations to the certificates of authorisation under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993 for the Sellafield site. These include a proposed reduction in the discharge limit for technetium 99. The Environment Agency is currently considering the applications and will shortly issue for public consultation the changes to the authorisations that it is minded to grant.

Housing (Improvements)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many properties underwent works through home improvement agencies in each of the last three years. [4292]

Mr. Raynsford: The table shows the number of jobs completed in the last three years by home improvement agencies in England funded by my Department:

Year	Number of jobs
1994–95	21,735
1995–96	24,129
1996–97	27,137

Some properties benefited from more than one job but information about the number of properties receiving works is not kept.

Playing Fields

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take steps to prevent the disposal for development of playing fields owned by (a) local authorities, (b) companies and (c) other bodies. [4478]

Mr. Raynsford: Under current legislation local authorities only need the consent of the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions to a disposal of land at less than open market value. However, the Government intends to ensure that those playing fields which schools and their communities need are not sold in future. My right hon. Friends, the Deputy Prime Minister, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment and the Secretary of State for National Heritage are discussing this as a matter of urgency, looking at a wide range of options.

Green Ministers

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the Green Ministers appointed to date in other Government departments; and what guidance has been produced by his Department on the role to be played by Green Ministers. [4305]

Angela Eagle: The Ministerial Committee on the Environment has been set up to consider environmental policy issues with the following membership:

Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (Chairman)

Chancellor of the Exchequer

Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs

President of the Board of Trade and Secretary of State for Trade and Industry

Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food

Secretary of State for Scotland

Secretary of State for Health

President of the Council and Leader of the House of Commons

Secretary of State for National Heritage

Secretary of State for Northern Ireland

Secretary of State for Wales

Secretary of State for International Development

Lord Privy Seal and Leader of the House of Lords

Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster

Minister of Transport

Chief Secretary, Treasury

Minister of State, Department of the Environment and Transport

Minister without Portfolio.

The Secretary of State for Social Security also receives the papers. She and other Ministers are invited to attend as necessary.

We are still in the process of appointing Green Ministers and a further announcement will be made once they have been established.

English Partnerships

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each region the amount of money spent by English Partnerships in each of the last three financial years. [4608]

Angela Eagle: English Partnerships' expenditure by region on its development programme, excluding expenditure on the Greenwich Peninsula, in the last three financial years is as follows:

£ million

Region	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
North-east	47.7	34.3	31.8
North-west	52.9	52.0	50.4
Yorkshire and Humberside	43.8	55.0	40.5
Midlands	63.4	58.0	67.8
South-east	10.3	25.6	36.0
South-west	7.3	11.8	8.5
Total	225.4	236.7	235.0

Natterjack Toad

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the sites designated as the natural habitat of the natterjack toad. [4593]

Ms Angela Eagle: Fifty sites have been designated for the natterjack toad in Great Britain. A list giving details of these has been placed in the Library.

Leasehold Land

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the advantages of increasing protection for home owners in flats whose property lies on leasehold land. [3126]

Mr. Raynsford: We are committed to simplifying the current rules restricting the purchase of freeholds by leaseholders when a suitable legislative opportunity arises. We will consult on our proposals in due course. Meanwhile, we will lay before the House shortly Orders to implement the provisions of the Housing Act 1996 which will transfer jurisdiction for determining disputes over service charges to Leasehold Valuation Tribunals.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide a Keeling schedule in respect of the relevant sections of

(a) the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 and (b) other Acts amended by the Local Government Finance (Supplementary Credit approvals) Bill. [5123]

Mr. Raynsford: We do not propose to add such a schedule to the Local Government Finance (Supplementary Credit Approvals) Bill. However, the following sets out the text of section 55(3) of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 as it would be if amended by Clause 1 of the Bill, and the text of section 54(5) of that Act as it would be if amended by Clause 2 of the Bill:

Section 55

(3) In determining the amount of a basic credit approval, the Secretary of State shall not take account of capital receipts to the extent that the authority concerned are required to set aside the receipts as provision for credit liabilities; and in determining the amount of a basic credit approval or a supplementary credit approval, the Secretary of State or other Minister shall not take account of capital receipts to the extent that they are applied or paid as mentioned in subsections (7) to (9) of section 59 below.

Section 54

(5) In the case of a supplementary credit approval issued in respect of expenditure which is treated by the authority concerned as expenditure for capital purposes by virtue only of direction sunder section 40(6) above, the approval may specify an amortisation period.

Departmental Land

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action his Department is taking to monitor the disposal of land by other Government Departments for compliance with the terms of local development plans, with particular reference to the National Physical Laboratory site at Teddington. [4587]

Mr. Raynsford: Any Crown body wishing to secure planning permission for land prior to its disposal must apply for permission under section 299 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990. As with applications for planning permission from non-Crown bodies, it is for the local planning authority to determine the application. Such determination shall be in accordance with the development plan for the area, unless material considerations indicate otherwise. Other than where the matter is expressly referred to the Secretary of State—e.g. under the Town and Country Planning (Development Plans and Consultation) Directions 1992, or on appeal—my Department is not concerned with the specific proposals of other Government Departments to dispose of their land, nor the proposed use of any such land. The National Physical Laboratory is within the London Borough of Richmond, and the Unitary Development Plan policy for the site is for employment uses. We understand that no planning application has been made to the planning authority in respect of the site.

Airports

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the cost of constructing a 1,400 metre runway in the south-east of England; and what costs would be incurred by the construction of a 2,000 metre runway. [4471]

Ms Jackson: No assessment has been made of the costs of runway construction, which would vary greatly depending on the site chosen.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the time required to (a) construct and (b) bring into operation a new runway in south-east England. [4474]

Ms Jackson: The time required for constructing a new runway and bringing it into operation would depend on the nature of the particular proposal and on the planning procedures followed.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will reintroduce traffic distribution rules; and what plans he has to direct charter services to specific airports in the London area. [4473]

Ms Jackson: Traffic distribution rules remain in place at Heathrow and Gatwick which prevent all-cargo services and general aviation from using the airport at peak periods. There are no plans to reintroduce them for scheduled and charter services. In any case, powers do not exist to direct services to an airport—only to exclude them.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to address problems relating to runway capacity in the south-east of England. [4539]

Ms Jackson: Work has been under way since February 1995 to assess the implications of runway capacity enhancement at Heathrow and the feasibility of a close parallel runway at Gatwick. When completed, these studies will help to inform the assessment by Ministers of all available options.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the extra slots made available at Heathrow by the proposed BA/AA alliance will be allocated to services to regional airports. [4401]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I have been asked to reply.

The previous President of the Board of Trade announced on 6 December 1996 that he intended to refer the proposed alliance between British Airways and American Airlines to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, unless suitable undertakings were given by the parties to the alliance. He took the view that, without such undertakings, the alliance would be likely to lead to a significant loss of actual and potential competition on air routes between the UK and the US. He asked the Director General of Fair Trading to seek appropriate undertakings from the parties, and also to consider views from all interested third parties on the undertakings and other conditions which he proposed. The proposed undertakings and conditions included the release by the alliance of up to 168 take-off and landing slots at Heathrow. These slots were to be made available for use by competitor airlines only on transatlantic services, in order to ensure that the slot release addressed the competition concerns raised by the alliance.

My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has not yet made a decision on the proposed alliance. The Office of Fair Trading and the Department of Trade and Industry are still considering the case in consultation with the European Commission.

Red Routes (London)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans for red routes in London. [4720]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The red route programme delivers improved conditions for all road users by making effective use of the road space while taking into account the needs of those who live and work along the route. I have no plans to vary the red route network although I shall naturally consider individual representations on their merits. I intend to look at how these improvements can be further enhanced, giving particular attention to what can be done to assist buses, cyclists and pedestrians. The timetable for completion of the network will be reviewed, along with all other expenditure programmes, as part of our Comprehensive Spending Review.

Footpaths and Bridleways

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons notice was not given to the statutory consultees under the Transport and Works Act about the proposed closure of footpaths and bridleways for the proposed Welsh Highland Railway Order; and if he will place a copy of his reply to the Ramblers Association concerning these issues in the Library. [4590]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The promoters of the proposed Order, the Ffestiniog Railway Company, consider that the Transport and Works Act applications rules were complied with in respect of the placing of notices and serving of documents on statutory consultees. However, in the light of representations made by the Ramblers Association and others, they have agreed to put up notices and serve documents in respect of all footpaths affected by the Order as if they were public rights of way for the purposes of the rules. Persons who wish to object to the proposals relating to footpaths will have a further six weeks in which to lodge such objection in writing with the Secretary of State. A copy of the Department's reply to the Ramblers Association will be placed in the Library.

Radioactive Materials (Transportation)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to improve safety standards for the transportation of (i) nuclear waste and (ii) spent nuclear fuel. [4639]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 20 June]: The safety standards for the transport of nuclear waste and spent nuclear fuel are already extremely high. They are based upon the recommendations of the International Atomic Energy Agency and are reviewed on a regular basis to ensure that the excellent safety record is maintained. The Government is active in and will continue to support the work of the international Atomic Energy Authority and the other international bodies that regulate the carriage of radioactive material, such as the International Maritime Organisation, the International Civil Aviation Organisation, the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe (for road transport) and the Intergovernmental Organisation for International Carriage by Rail.

South West Trains (Bicycles)

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will seek to ensure that South West Trains retain space for the carriage of bicycles when renewing their rolling stock. [5088]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Southampton, Test (Mr. Whitehead) on 16 June, Official Report, column 41.

Pilotage (Thames River)

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what consultations he has had with the Port of London Authority over their proposals to relax pilotage regulations along the Thames. [5008]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Port of London Authority has informed my Department that it is reviewing its pilotage directions. There is no requirement for harbour authorities to consult the Secretary of State before issuing new directions but they have a duty to consult those operating in their harbour. I understand that the Port of London Authority intends to do this once its proposals are finalised.

Railways (Ticket Machines)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that automatic train ticket machines have facilities for accepting railcards held by disabled people; and what progress his Department has made in pursuing this matter with the office of the Rail Regulator in relation to its code of practice. [4087]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We will be looking at this in the context of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. We will also ask the Rail Regulator to consider expanding the advice in his Code of Practice, which already includes design guidance on ticket machines, to address this point.

Ports

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from smaller trust ports on the anti-competitive action of larger ports; what response he has made; and if he will make a statement. [4662]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No such representations have been received.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to encourage the remaining trust ports to become private companies. [4663]

Ms Jackson: We will consider on their merits any privatisation schemes put forward by trust port authorities. Where a scheme is approved in principle, our officials will provide advice to the authority on carrying out the privatisation in accordance with the provisions of the Ports Act 1991.

PRIME MINISTER

Earth Summit 2

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Earth summit 2 conference. [4800]

The Prime Minister: I will make a statement on my return.

Polygraphs

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Prime Minister what use the security services make of the polygraph; and if he will make a statement. [4586]

The Prime Minister: The Security and Intelligence Services make no use of the polygraph and have no plans to do so.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Prime Minister which Government departments and agencies are involved in the examination of E. coli. [3607]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 June 1997]: The following Government departments and agencies are involved in the examination of E. coli:

Departments

Department of Health

Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food

Department for the Environment and Transport

Department of Health and Social Services—Northern Ireland

Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland

Welsh Office

Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department

Scottish Office Department of Health

Agencies

Veterinary Laboratories Agency

Central Science Laboratory

Public Health Laboratory (Northern Ireland)

Public Health Laboratory Service (England and Wales)

The Scottish Centre for Infection and Environmental Health

Environment Agency

Drinking Water Inspectorate.

Ministerial Residences

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Prime Minister how much public money is budgeted for expenditure on refurbishing official residences occupied by Ministers. [3710]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 16 June 1997]: This is a matter for individual Boards of Trustees or Departments.

Devolution (Referendums)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Prime Minister how many requests he has received from current residents of Colchester, born in Scotland or Wales, who want to vote in the Scottish and Welsh devolution referendums. [4035]

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representatives on this issue. It is not possible to identify the information as requested.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Uranium Fuel

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what tonnage of spent uranium fuel elements was discharged in each of the past 10 years from (1) magnox reactors, (2) advanced gas-cooled reactors, (3) pressurised water reactors and (4) fast reactors; and what in each case were the (a) initial uranium enrichment, (b) initial plutonium content, (c) initial fissile plutonium content and (d) the spent fuel burn-up rate. [1843]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 2 June 1997]: Information relating to the majority of tonnage of spent nuclear fuel discharged from various reactors during the last 10 years is kept by the private sector operator (British Energy). Information as far as the public sector is concerned, in respect of Magnox Electric reactors, Calder Hall and Chapelcross (operated by BNFL) and Dounreay (operated by UKAEA), in each of the last 10 years, is not readily available in the format required and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Low Pay

Mr. Tom King: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time employees of her Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (iii) less than £3 an hour. [4192]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Department employs no staff with an hourly rate of pay less than £3.50. It employs a total of 100 staff paid at less than £4 an hour. Of these 12 work part-time. Part-time staff are paid at the same annual rate of pay as full-time staff.

Retail Petrol Industry

Mr. Moss: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) for what reasons the Director General of Fair Trading did not meet the undertaking given to the Trade and Industry Committee in 1996 that the quadrennial review of the retail petrol industry would be brought forward to early 1997; [3838]

(2) what are the terms of reference for the quadrennial review of the retail petrol industry to be undertaken by the Director General of Fair Trading; and if she will make a statement. [3839]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I am informed that, following the Trade and Industry Select Committee hearing on 16 December 1996, the Office of Fair Trading did in fact start preliminary work on the review in January. They commenced the review itself in April, as the Director General of Fair Trading stated in his recent press notice.

The review is focusing on the key indicators identified by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in their 1990 report on the supply of petrol: market structure, profitability and prices. It is also looking at the longer-term market trends to see whether it is possible to draw any conclusions about the future competitiveness of the market and whether it will continue to operate to the benefit of consumers.

Oil Exploration Licences

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade under what circumstances she has the power to suspend oil exploration licences issued in the 17th round; and what would be the impact on public funds of such action. [3849]

Mr. Battle: There is no provision in the United Kingdom's petroleum licensing legislation for the suspension of production licences such as those awarded in the 17th Seaward Round. The circumstances in which 17th Round licences can be revoked are set out in Schedule 4 to the Petroleum (Production) (Seaward Areas) Regulations 1988 as amended.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will provide increased support for (a) solar energy and (b) other renewable energy technologies. [3018]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 16 June 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Stoke on Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 10 June 1997, Official Report, column 417.

Wind Power

Mr. William Ross: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many wind power generating farms there are in the United Kingdom; how many machines they contain; and how many of the blades she estimates have been broken in each of the last 10 years. [4049]

Mr. Battle: At 18 June 1997, there were 43 windfarms, each comprising three or more turbines, operating in the UK, totalling 740 turbines in all. My Department does not maintain records of broken wind turbine blades.

Dounreay (Contamination)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what notification she has received from the Atomic Energy Authority management at Dounreay in respect of their plans to clean up radioactive particles from the beaches close to the plant; and if she will consult the National Radiological Project Board on its recent radiological assessment of beaches near to Dounreay. [3819]

Mr. Battle: The UKAEA has kept my Department fully informed of their plans for dealing with the Dounreay beach particles. The UKAEA is conducting an extensive search to find the source of these particles. Meanwhile it continues to monitor local beaches removing any particles it finds.

The Scottish Environment Protection Agency (SEPA), the independent environmental regulator, recently commissioned the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) to undertake a survey of the beach at Sandside Bay near Dounreay following discovery of a particle there by UKAEA during routine monitoring. No further particles were detected.

Patenting of Animals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received concerning the patenting of animals; and if she will make a statement. [3227]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 17 June 1997]: I am replying because my department has overall responsibility for intellectual property policy. My department has received one representation from Compassion in World Farming concerning a proposal from the European Commission on the patenting of biotechnological inventions. I understand that the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has also received a representation from Compassion in World Farming concerning the patenting of animals.

Solar Power

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what factors underlie the allocation of funding by her Department to the promotion of (a) the oil and gas industry and (b) the deployment of solar power in Britain. [4443]

Mr. John Battle: (a) The DTI sponsors the UK companies which supply goods and services to the oil, gas and petrochemicals industry in the UK and abroad. Funds are directed at actions to increase the technological capability and international competitiveness of these supplier companies and to promote exports.

(b) The DTI sponsors the new and renewable energy industry, which encompasses solar energy. In line with our manifesto commitment to undertake a new and strong drive to develop renewable energy sources, I recently announced a review of policy including considerations of what would be necessary and practicable to achieve 10 per cent. of UK's electricity needs by the year 2010, and how renewables, including solar, can make an effective contribution to meeting requirements for future greenhouse gas reduction commitments. In the meantime, the Government's new and renewable energy programme, currently under way, will continue.

The Government will be considering the balance of activities within the spending plans it inherited to ensure that they reflect the Government's priorities, through the Comprehensive Spending Review, announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 11 June 1997.

Mr. Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the number of jobs which could result from the development and widespread use of solar power in Britain. [4441]

Mr. Battle: My Department has not yet made any assessment of this kind. The current estimate of the number of people working directly on photovoltaics in the UK is around 250 and on active solar heating it is 160.

Mr. Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures her Department is undertaking to ensure that (a) its own and (b) other suitable Government buildings are fitted with solar photovoltaic panels. [4386]

Mr. Battle: Continuing energy savings targets require that departments consider and implement means of reducing energy consumption. The use of photovoltaic cells is one method that departments and their professional advisers consider in seeking to reduce the amount of electricity supplied from the grid to buildings they are responsible for.

At the time of the refurbishment of the DTI Headquarter's Building at 1 Victoria Street and the designing of the Department of Environment's new Headquarter's building Eland House, thorough cost-benefit analyses of the potential for utilising PV were carried out. In the light of those analyses, it was decided that it would not be cost-effective to install PV modules in either building. Cost-benefit analyses typically consider the life cycle costings and total energy consumption for an installation.

Mr. Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade pursuant to her recent speech, (1) what measures her Department is undertaking to promote the use of solar power; [4385]

(2) what measures apart from the Scholar Programme her Department is undertaking to increase the use of solar electric power in (a) homes and (b) offices; [4440]

(3) what measures her Department is undertaking to create a market in Britain for the British solar photovoltaic industry. [4442]

Mr. Battle: I announced on 6 June, Official Report column 273, a review of Government policy on new and renewable energy including looking at all aspects of its support for solar energy. In the meantime my Department's New and Renewable Energy Programme, which includes work on solar energy, will continue.

Also, in addition to the SCOLAR programme under the Technology Foresight initiative, the Office of Science and Technology funds a programme of basic and applied research into solar energy, including photovoltaics, through the Engineering and Physical Science Research Council.

Transco (Price Controls)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Presidents of the Board of Trade when she expects to make a decision on the Monopolies and Mergers Commission inquiry into price controls on Transco. [4392]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Director General of Gas Supply published the MMC report on 18 June. Under the provisions of the Gas Act 1986, it is her responsibility to respond to the MMC's conclusions.

Airlines (Alliance)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to make a decision on the proposed alliance between British Airways and American Airlines. [4387]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The UK competition authorities are currently considering the proposed alliance between British Airways and American Airlines, in consultation with the European Commission. It is not the practice of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade to comment publicly on the timing or substance of competition cases in which she will be responsible for making a decision.

Travel Industry

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to receive the report from the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on vertical integration in the travel trade. [4390]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) report on foreign package holidays is due to be delivered to my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on 6 November 1997.

Beer Companies (Merger)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to make a decision on the proposed merger between Bass and Carlsberg Tetley. [4389]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) report on the proposed merger between Bass and Carlsberg-Tetley will be published as quickly as is practicable. I cannot comment on the likely publication date of the MMC report or its contents, since this information is market sensitive. Copies of the report will be laid before Parliament at the same time as it is published.

Electrical Goods

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to make a decision on the inquiry into the alleged price fixing of electrical goods. [4391]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) report on domestic electrical goods will be published as quickly as is practicable. I cannot comment on the likely publication date of the MMC report or its contents, since this information is market sensitive. Copies of the report will be laid before Parliament at the same time as it is published.

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will include an assessment of public opinion on the operation of manufacturers' recommended retail prices in her consideration of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report into the electrical goods industry. [4602]

Mr. Griffiths: The report remains confidential until publication. I am not able to comment until then.

Electricity Industry (Competition)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions she has had with the Director General of Offer over the timetable for the introduction of competition in the domestic electricity market. [4396]

Mr. Battle: I have had discussions with the Director General on many of the strategic issues on the 1998 electricity supply market liberalisation. At my request, he made a report on the current status of the programme of work, and his proposals for future progress to a timely and successful conclusion. PA Consulting, the Overall Programme Managers for the electricity market liberalisation, also produced a report. Both of these reports were published on 29 May. Recently, the Director

General and I met the Chief Executives of the Public Electricity Suppliers and the Electricity Pool to discuss the practical implementation of the proposals. It was agreed that the Director General's proposals should be accepted as the basis to take the programme forward.

Recommended Retail Price Scheme

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what public consultations she has held in respect of the future of the recommended retail price scheme; and if she will make a statement. [4601]

Mr. Griffiths: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has held no public consultations in respect of the future of the recommended retail price scheme.

The Government plans, as part of its reform of competition law, to replace the Resale Prices Act 1976 with a tough prohibition approach to deal with anti-competitive agreements, practices and behaviour. There will be a consultation process over the summer before a Competition Bill is introduced in the autumn.

Pembroke Power Station (Orimulsion)

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to announce her decision on the National Power application to convert the Pembroke power station to orimulsion. [4592]

Mr. Battle: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has called for a public inquiry to be held into the application.

Arrangements for the inquiry are currently in hand and the date, time, venue and the statement of matters which she considers relevant to her consideration of the application will be announced in due course.

ISDN Telephone Lines

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she will next have discussions with the Director General of Oftel regarding the cost of installing ISDN telephone lines; and if she will evaluate the costs of installing lines in the United Kingdom relative to those in Europe. [4733]

Mr. Battle: The pricing of ISDN is a matter for Oftel. Oftel reviewed ISDN prices in 1996 and as a result BT provided more flexible connection pricing arrangements in October of that year for basic rate ISDN (ISDN 2). Although BT's connection charges are high compared with our European neighbours, recent benchmarking studies have shown that the monthly rental and call charges are both very competitive, which means that the overall annual cost of using ISDN in the UK is one of the most competitive in the world.

Nuclear Material

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the volumes of (a) low-level nuclear material, (b) medium-level nuclear material and (c) high-level nuclear material which were (i) imported into and (ii) exported from Great Britain for each year from 1980 to 1996. [4648]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 20 June 1997]: Approximately 3,507 tonnes of spent fuel, which is categorised as high-level nuclear material, from overseas is currently held in the UK, after which the majority of the nuclear material will be reprocessed and exported to the country of origin.

The volumes of nuclear material for the whole of the UK cover many thousands of import and export transactions every year, and involve other nuclear materials such as isotopes for hospitals, industry, and academic institutions. The data requested, in respect of all these transactions covering each year from 1980 to 1996, could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the countries in 1996 (i) from which Britain imported (a) nuclear fuel, (b) spent nuclear fuel and (c) nuclear waste and (ii) to which Britain exported (1) nuclear fuel, (2) spent nuclear fuel and (3) nuclear waste. [4649]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 20 June 1997]: In 1996, (i) Britain imported (a) nuclear fuel from Germany, France and Belgium (b) spent fuel from Japan, Germany, Switzerland, Netherlands and Australia (c) no nuclear waste and (ii) exported (1) nuclear fuel to Indonesia, Netherlands, France, Germany, Canada, Australia (2) spent nuclear fuel to France, and (3) no nuclear waste.

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what the estimated volume is of (a) high-level nuclear material, (b) medium-level nuclear material and (c) low-level nuclear material currently in Great Britain. [4645]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 20 June 1997]: The volumes of undisposed radioactive waste in stock and predicted to arise in the UK are routinely reported in the UK Radioactive Waste Inventory, published by Nirex Limited, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Based on the latest update, provided by Nirex, together in the 1994 Inventory, and assuming uniform rates of future arisings the estimated volumes of waste in stock on 1 April 1997 are:

(i) high-level: 2,000m^3

(ii) intermediate-level: 74,000m^3

(iii) low-level: [1]8,000m^3

[1]Low-level waste is routinely disposed of to Drigg and hence it has been assumed that the vast majority of arisings, between 1994 and 1997, have been disposed of.

Calculating the total of all nuclear materials currently in the UK, which would include industry, hospitals and academic institutions, could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Nuclear Industry (US Representations)

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations the Government have received, since 1 May, from the United States Government concerning the nuclear industry; and what discussions between representatives of the two Governments have taken place on this issue. [4644]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 20 June 1997]: My Department has received no specific representations from the US Government on nuclear issues since 1 May 1997.

My officials have had discussions with representatives of the US Government with whom they maintain regular contact on both a bilateral and multilateral basis. These discussions have covered a range of issues of continuing mutual interest, including disposition of surplus US and Russian fissile materials; verification of nuclear materials; management of decommissioning; nuclear transport; the international liability regime; fusion research; and nuclear safety in Eastern Europe and the Former Soviet Union including preparations for the discussions on these issues at the Summit of the Eight at Denver on 20–22 June.

Dixons

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will investigate the timing of sales of shares in Dixons. [5109]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: It is the Department's longstanding policy not to discuss the affairs of individual companies.

My Department takes seriously its role in the investigation of any misconduct, and is always keen to receive any information which might assist in deciding if enquiries are needed.

If the hon. Member has any information which he feels ought to be brought to my attention, he should do so as soon as possible.

Gas Industry (Competition)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussion she has had with the Director General of Ofgas over the establishment of criteria for effective competition in the domestic gas market; and if she will make a statement. [4394]

Mr. Battle: The Government consider that the extension of competition on as wide a basis as possible is in the interests of gas consumers. The securing of effective competition is a part of the Director General's statutory duties, and it is for her as an independent regulator to decide how to interpret and achieve that duty.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects Ofgas to announce the next phases of gas competition. [4393]

Mr. Battle: I understand that the Director General of Gas Supply intends to issue proposals for consultation shortly.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Adult Education (Funding)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement about the future funding of adult education. [3276]

Dr. Howells: Under the Further and Higher Education Act 1992, statutory responsibility for securing the adequate provision of adult further education is divided between local education authorities—which are responsible for the more informal adult further education courses in their areas—and the Further Education Funding Council—which is responsible for those courses described in the Act under schedule 2 as having national significance, such as basic skills course, access courses and those which lead to academic or vocational qualifications.

My right hon. Friend recently announced that Professor Bob Fryer will chair a national advisory group on adult learning to advise on all issues relating to adult learning.

Welfare-to-work Programme

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what employment or training initiatives the Government plans to introduce under the welfare-to-work programme for those who have been unemployed for less than six months. [4376]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Our current priority is the introduction of the New Deal for young people out of work for six months or more. Help will continue to be available immediately to all those who become unemployed.

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the proposed locations of the Government's welfare-to-work projects; and what criteria govern these decisions. [4579]

Mr. Howarth: Our New Deal for young and long-term unemployed people will operate throughout the United Kingdom. All unemployed people who are eligible will have a chance to participate in this initiative, which is designed to help them from welfare into sustained employment as quickly as possible.

Drugs

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the total amount (a) spent and (b) allocated by his Department on tackling problems relating to drugs in respect of (i) developing prevention publicity, education and community action and (ii) improving treatment and rehabilitation, for (1) 1994, (2) 1995, (3) 1996 and (4) 1997. [4797]

Ms Estelle Morris: Information on total Government and individual Departments' expenditure on tackling drug misuse is not recorded on an annual basis. The most recently available estimates were published in the White Paper "Tackling Drugs Together" in May 1995. They show that at least £526 million of expenditure in 1993–94 could be directly attributable to drug programmes and activities across the UK.

The Government will be appointing a "drug czar" to co-ordinate action against drugs, working to the President of the Council as Chair of the Cabinet's co-ordinating committee on drug misuse. One of his/her first tasks will be to review urgently the existing drugs strategy, and to put forward proposals for tackling the problem with renewed vigour. This review will include current Government expenditure.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research has been commissioned by his Department to identify the level of drug abuse at each level of the education system. [5089]

Ms Morris: A good deal of research is available on levels of drug abuse which, while not necessarily commissioned by my Department, is taken into account when planning initiatives to support drug education in schools.

My Department did provide funding for an evaluation of The Advisory Council for Alcohol and Drug Education's—TACADE's—"Skills for Life" PSE programme for secondary schools, which had a particular emphasis on drug education. This included research into students' experience of drugs and the level of reported drug taking by students in a small sample of schools, as well as an in-depth study of how those schools were implementing the programme. A report will be published shortly. In addition, my Department has recently produced a booklet outlining the results of the independent evaluation reports of a number of LEA innovative drug education projects supported by our Grants for Education Support and Training—GEST—programme in 1995–96. These projects researched and trailled a range of different approaches to drug education work. A copy is in the Library.

Early Excellence Centres

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment where he proposes to site the 25 early excellence centres; and on what criteria his judgment as to their location will be based. [4578]

Ms Estelle Morris: We shall invite proposals for a national pilot programme of early excellence centres. We are considering the criteria for centres, and will make an announcement soon.

Assisted Places

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received about primary aged children in receipt of an assisted place who will lose assisted status at the age of 11 years. [4744]

Mr. Byers: I have received correspondence from bodies representing schools offering assisted places to primary age children, and from others, about the phasing out of the assisted places scheme.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils residing in the Colchester parliamentary constituency benefit from an assisted place. [5005]

Mr. Byers: Information about the constituency area from which assisted pupils originate is not collected centrally. There are no schools participating in the assisted places scheme in the Colchester constituency.

Class Sizes

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average class size in state sector education in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland, (d) Northern Ireland and (e) the United Kingdom for the most recent year for which he has figures. [4589]

Mr. Byers: The available information on average class sizes is shown in the table.

Average class sizes[1,2]: 1995–96

	One teacher classes		All classes[3]
	Primary	Secondary	Primary	Secondary
United Kingdom	[4]—	[4]—	27.0	[5]21.6
England	27.3	21.7	27.5	21.9
Wales	[4]—	[4]—	25.9	20.2
Scotland	[4]—	[4]—	24.8	19.5
Northern Ireland	24.1	[4]—	24.1	—

[1] Data on class sizes was collected at different times of the academic year in the different countries: January 1996 for England and Wales, September 1995 for Scotland and October 1995 for Northern Ireland.

[2] In Northern Ireland, for data collection purposes, a class is defined as a group of pupils normally in the charge of one teacher.

[3] "All classes" figures include classes where more than one teacher may be present.

[4] Not available.

[5] Great Britain only.

Passive Smoking

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to raise awareness in schools of the dangers of passive smoking. [5084]

Ms Estelle Morris: Education about the harmful effects of smoking remains a statutory requirement as part of National Curriculum science. The Department has issued guidance to schools on their contribution towards ensuring that pupils are made aware of all the health risks associated with smoking, including passive smoking; and to teachers on addressing smoking within the school curriculum and on appropriate smoking education materials.

Teacher Education

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his plans to improve initial teacher education. [5072]

Ms Estelle Morris: I hope to be announcing new requirements for courses of initial teacher training later this week.

White Paper

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will publish an Education White Paper. [4891]

Mr. Byers: A White Paper setting out the Government's agenda for raising standards in schools will be published in early July.

Specialist Schools

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the criteria will be for the next round of applications for specialist schools. [4892]

Ms Estelle Morris: The new criteria will retain the benefits of the existing arrangements but will include an emphasis on collaboration with other schools and the wider community. We expect that revised criteria will be available to schools during July.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what resources he plans to provide to ensure that sports specialist schools in the state education system develop into a network. [4893]

Ms Morris: The resources for specialist sports colleges, as with all programmes, will be considered as part of the Department's review of its spending plans.

State Schools

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the total value of balances held by state schools in England. [5066]

Mr. Byers: Balances carried forward at the end of the financial year 1995–96 by county, voluntary and special schools maintained by LEAs in England are provisionally estimated by the Department to have amounted in total to about £580 million. These figures are derived from the LMS outturn statements published by LEAs under section 122 of the Education Act 1996—formerly section 42 of the Education Reform Act 1988—and represent surpluses net of any deficits.

The financial monitoring of schools in the grant-maintained sector is the responsibility of the Funding Agency for Schools, and I have asked the Chairman of the Funding Agency to arrange for a reply to be sent to the hon. Member in respect of the sector.

HEALTH

Brachial Plexus Injuries

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if all health authorities record the incidence of brachial plexus injuries. [4047]

Ms Jowell: Information is collected on the number of babies admitted to hospital with a primary diagnosis of brachial plexus injuries. The number of babies with brachial plexus injuries diagnosed at birth who are not readmitted to hospital is not known.

Smoking

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the 1996 smoking prevalence data. [4507]

Ms Jowell: It is planned to publish as follows:

(i) preliminary results from the 1996–97 General Household Survey including smoking prevalence for adults, during autumn 1997;

(ii) "Smoking Among Secondary Schoolchildren in 1996", later this year.

Dental Services (Wiltshire)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the money allocated to the Wiltshire health authority from the general dental service access fund 1996–97 has been allocated to dental practices in the health authority region; how it has been distributed; and to what extent this funding has satisfied the criteria set out in the bid. [4790]

Mr. Milburn: Yes. The funding is being used to meet the aims identified in the health authority's bid.

Private Medical Insurance (Tax Relief)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on NHS (a) costs and (b) receipts from private medical insurers if tax relief on private medical insurance for the over-60s were removed; [5081]

(2) what assessment he has made of the potential impact on NHS waiting lists as a result of increased demand if tax relief on private medical insurance for the over 60s were removed. [5108]

Mr. Milburn: None.

Funding Formula

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the market forces factor in the NHS funding allocation formula; and what weight he will attach to representations submitted to his Department by (a) Leeds Community Health Council and (b) others. [5291]

Mr. Milburn: We will look at how resources are distributed across both secondary and primary care, to ensure that these fully reflect local population needs and operate as fairly as possible.

We will consider all representations received.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the average waiting times at accident and emergency departments at the Royal Free Hospital, Whittington, Homerton, Royal London and the North Middlesex; and if he will make a statement. [4410]

Mr. Milburn: The Department does not currently collect information on average waiting times in accident and emergency departments.

Information is collected on the Patient's Charter standards for immediate assessment in accident and emergency, which is published annually in the NHS Performance Tables; and admission to a hospital bed through accident and emergency by health authority.

We understand from the health authorities concerned that the percentages of patients needing hospital admission through accident and emergency who were admitted within two hours and four hours for the three months to 31 March 1997 were as set out in the table.

Hospital	Percentage of patients admitted within two hours	Percentage of patients admitted within four hours
The Royal Free Hospital	56.8	83.9
Whittington	32.0	69.0
Homerton	77.5	95.0
Royal London	87.2	98.5
North Middlesex	79.0	100.0

Health authorities' unpublished information.

Northwick Park and St. Mark's Hospital Trust

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what specific proposals have been put forward by the Northwick Park and St. Mark's Hospital Trust to recover from its deficit; what targets his Department has set; and what progress has been made towards them. [4619]

Mr. Milburn: The trust has in place a recovery plan, jointly agreed with Brent and Harrow Health Authority and the NHS Executive, which includes a variety of measures to ensure that it achieves financial balance within a 2-year time scale. Progress has been made on this with the trust having identified just under £6 million savings for this year, predominately from non-clinical budgets. The NHS Executive will continue to monitor the situation.

Drugs and Medicines Spending

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent in real terms on drugs and medicines by the NHS in each of the last 10 years. [5076]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is shown in the table.

Total NHS spending on drugs

£ million

Year	Family Health Services drugs	Hospital and Community Health service drugs	Total (Cash)	Total (Real)
1986–87	1,378	318	1,696	2,619
1987–88	1,536	352	1,888	2,768
1988–89	1,744	380	2,124	2,919
1989–90	1,942	414	2,356	3,026
1990–91	2,080	460	2,540	3,021
1991–92	2,317	591	2,908	3,251
1992–93	2,641	643	3,284	3,523
1993–94	2,951	710	3,661	3,817
1994–95	3,230	764	3,994	4,091
1995–96	3,498	874	4,372	4,372

Please note that the real figures are given to a 1995–96 baseline.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Profession (Recruitment)

33. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his Department's policy concerning the recruitment of people to the legal profession from a wider variety of social backgrounds; and if he will make a statement. [3121]

Mr. Hoon: Recruitment to the legal profession is primarily a matter for the profession itself. Both the Bar Council and the Law Society have adopted policies designed to ensure that entrance to the profession is based on merit alone. The Government believes that opportunities in the legal profession should be open to those from the widest possible variety of social backgrounds.

Civil Aid Certificates

34. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the current rights of a non-assisted third party to challenge the issue of a civil aid certificate to a party in a proceeding; and if he will make a statement. [3122]

Mr. Hoon: It is open to anyone to make representations to the Legal Aid Board about the issue of a legal aid certificate in civil proceedings, in relation either the merits of the case or the financial eligibility of the applicant.

Crown Courts

35. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the administration of the Crown courts. [3123]

Mr. Hoon: Since April 1995, the administration of the Crown courts has been the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Court Service under the terms of the Framework Document for the Agency.

Magistracy

36. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals he has to ensure that the magistracy is representative of political opinions and ethnic balance. [3124]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor requires his Advisory Committees to draw candidates for the lay magistracy from a broad a spectrum of the community so as to ensure, as far as is possible, that those recommended for appointment broadly reflect the communities which they will serve. Both political affiliation and ethnic origin are taken into account.

Monmouth and Chepstow Magistrates Courts

37. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the future of Chepstow and Monmouth court house. [3125]

Mr. Hoon: I would refer my Hon. Friend to the written answer I gave to his question, on 12 June this year, Official Report, 12 June 1997, column 548.

Magistrates Courts Committees

38. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department by what mechanism local magistrates courts committees consult (a) local authorities and (b) local hon. Members on proposals to merge benches of magistrates. [3127]

Mr. Hoon: Section 33 of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997 provides that a magistrates courts committee may submit to the Lord Chancellor a draft order proposing changes to the petty sessional divisions, or PSDs, in its area. Section 34 of the Act requires a magistrates courts committee to consult all the magistrates of the affected benches and the relevant paying authority, before the Lord Chancellor may consider any application for change under section 33.

MCCs are not required to consult Members direct, although section 34 also requires that notices be placed in local newspapers and the local courthouses. In practice the vast majority of MCCs consult more extensively than the Act stipulates.

Marriage Support

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what evaluation he plans to make of the current pilot programme of marriage support projects. [4075]

Mr. Hoon: The main aim of the pilot programme is to identify the types of service which support marriage most effectively. All the projects include an element of monitoring and evaluation, and organisations are required to provide an interim report on progress to the end of the calendar year 1997, followed by a full evaluation on completion of the project.

The Department will assess the effectiveness of the pilot projects in terms of their achievement of specific aims and objectives, and their cost-effectiveness.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what support he proposes to give to enable successful marriage support projects to continue once the current pilot programme has been completed. [4074]

Mr. Hoon: The Department's programme of marriage support projects started on 1 April 1997. The programme will run for a year, and it is too early yet to identify the successful projects. The results of the pilot programme will be one of the factors taken into account by my right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Chancellor in deciding on the future funding of marriage support projects.

Magistrates

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if records are kept which show in relation to lay justices and stipendiary magistrates (a) the average length of trials before them, (b) the average fines imposed by them and (c) the number of successful appeals from them. [5031]

Mr. Hoon: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what criteria exist to enable comparisons between the performance of lay magistrates and stipendiary magistrates. [5033]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor's Department does not attempt to draw comparisons between the performance of judicial officers.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to require stipendiary magistrates to sit with lay justices. [5034]

Mr. Hoon: There are some situations, for example in the youth court and the family court, where either law or practice requires stipendiary magistrates to sit with lay justices. There are no current plans to add to these categories.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the savings in cost and time from appointing a higher proportion of stipendiary magistrates. [5035]

Mr. Hoon: No formal assessment has been made of the savings in cost and time which might result from appointing a higher proportion of stipendiary magistrates. The Study of Delay in the Criminal Justice System (the Narey Report), contained no specific cost-benefit analysis.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many of the justices of the peace in England are qualified barristers or solicitors. [5036]

Mr. Hoon: No records are kept of the numbers of justices of the peace who are qualified barristers or solicitors.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of the magistrates courts in England and Wales are equipped to cater for magistrates who are registered disabled. [5038]

Mr. Hoon: As magistrates court buildings are the responsibility of the local authorities this information is not centrally held. The design standards set down for magistrates courts since 1991 require the magistrates' entry into the courthouse and access to a proportion of the courtrooms to be suitable for wheelchairs. Provision is also made for loop induction systems to be provided for those with hearing impairments. Disabled toilet facilities are also provided within the magistrates' circulation area. Applications by local authorities for grant aid to adapt older magistrates courts to provide improved facilities for disabled users including magistrates are treated as high priority bids when allocating capital grant.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of magistrates in England and Wales are registered disabled. [5040]

Mr. Hoon: No records are kept for the percentage of magistrates in England and Wales who are registered disabled.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of (a) lay magistrates and (b) stipendiary magistrates are from an ethnic minority background. [5041]

Mr. Hoon: (a) a survey of the ethnic origin of lay magistrates was begun in February 1997 and the results are expected to be available in early October.

(b) 2 per cent. of stipendiary magistrates are from an ethnic minority background.

Mr. Malone: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will establish a working group to report on the quality of justice and the relative case disposal rate of lay justices and stipendiary magistrates. [5030]

Mr. Hoon: The working party on the role of the stipendiary magistracy reported in February 1996. There are no current plans to commission a further study.

Court Costs

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average cost per day to the Exchequer of (a) a Crown court, (b) a magistrates court with lay justices sitting and (c) a magistrates court with a stipendiary magistrate sitting. [5032]

Mr. Hoon: The Home Office "Model of Flows and Costs in the Criminal Justice Process" for 1995–96 shows the total cost excluding capital expenditure in the Crown Court was £202,544,937 and in the magistrates' courts for criminal matters was £257,885,498. The number of days sat in the Crown Court in 1996 was 90,956. The number of hours sat in the magistrates' courts in 1996 was 1,173,071. It is not possible to break this information down between lay and stipendiary magistrates.

Judicial Training

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to improve the (a) race and (b) gender awareness of (i) judges, (ii) stipendiary magistrates and (iii) lay justices. [5042]

Mr. Hoon: Judicial training is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board (JSB), which is a non-departmental governmental body. Following a major programme of seminars in ethnic minority awareness between 1994 and 1996 for circuit judges, recorders, assistant recorders, district judges and stipendiary magistrates, the JSB continues to include such training as part of induction training for newly appointed assistant recorders and deputy district judges. It has also held a number of sessions in both induction and continuation training on equal treatment, including gender awareness, and is considering how training in this area might be developed.

Lay magistrate training is delivered by magistrates courts committees but the JSB has a role in setting the syllabus. Lay magistrates already address the issue of equal treatment for all in the light of their judicial oath and the JSB has recently begun a study to identify the skills and knowledge required by lay magistrates to ensure equality of treatment for all who appear in their courts.

Legal Aid

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of persons charged with serious criminal offences in (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) 1996 were legally aided. [5044]

Mr. Hoon: 96.6 per cent of those dealt with on indictment in the Crown Court in 1994 were legally aided. The figures for 1995 and 1996 were 96.0 per cent. and 95.3 per cent. respectively.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of legally aided persons in all criminal proceedings in (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) 1996 received custodial sentences. [5045]

Mr. Hoon: This information is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Justices Clerks

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many clerks and deputy clerks to justices there are in England and Wales; and how many of these are qualified solicitors or barristers. [5037]

Mr. Hoon: According to records held by the Justices Clerk Society there are 204 justices clerks in England and Wales. All are qualified barristers or solicitors. There are around 230 people who are designated as deputies for justices clerks. Of these some 30 are neither barristers nor solicitors.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if it is his practice to ensure that lay magistrates always sit with clerks who are qualified as solicitors or barristers. [5039]

Mr. Hoon: Under the provisions of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997, magistrates courts are local managed. Decisions on which clerk advises which bench are therefore taken locally. The qualifications required of clerks in magistrates courts are set out in the Justices' Clerks (Qualification of Assistants) Rules 1979.

Chief Stipendiary Magistrates

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the future of the office of chief stipendiary magistrate. [5043]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor hopes shortly to designate one of the metropolitan stipendiary magistrates to be chief metropolitan stipendiary magistrate in succession to Mr. Peter Badge.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if it is his policy to appoint future chief stipendiary magistrates from among existing stipendiary magistrates. [5029]

Mr. Hoon: Section 16(3) of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997 requires the Lord Chancellor to designate one of the metropolitan stipendiary magistrates to be the chief metropolitan stipendiary magistrate.

Judicial Appointments

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to review the system for appointing judges. [3118]

Mr. Hoon: The Government proposes to consult later this year on the merits of a Judicial Appointments Commission and whether it should be established.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Integrated Schools

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will ensure that when an integrated school is established in an area, funds are not reduced for other local schools. [3342]

Mr. Worthington: A key principle of the local management of schools arrangements is that a large part of a school's budget is determined largely by the enrolment. If the take-up of places in new grant-maintained schools affect the enrolments in other schools, it could also have implications for the budgets of those schools which will, of course, then have lower running costs.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will provide additional funding in the next financial year to encourage the establishment of integrated schools. [3343]

Mr. Worthington: In the coming months I intend to review, in consultation with relevant interests, the present approach to the establishment of integrated schools to determine how best to encourage the development of this sector. It is too early to say how much, if any, additional funding will be made available next year.

Bed Blocking

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many hospital patients (a) in Northern Ireland and (b) in the Ulster, North Down and Ards Trust, assessed as ready for institutional care in the community, are currently bed blocking; and if she will make a statement on the factors underlying the bed blocking. [3830]

Mr. Worthington: This information is not collected on a routine basis. However, recent surveys carried out be the four health and social services boards indicated that there were some 127 hospital patients who had been assessed as needing either residential or nursing home care and who had been waiting more than two weeks while arrangements were being made for that care. Of these patients 29 were in the Ulster North Down and Ards Trust. A survey of discharge delays carried out by the Eastern Health and Social Services Board found that there were a number of reasons for such delays. While pressure on community care budgets was a contributory cause in more than half the cases,

"patient or relative disagreement with the assessment outcome",

and

"patient choice of accommodation not being available"

were causes in nearly 20 per cent. of cases. The remaining were due to other reasons such as "housing preparation", "changes in medical condition" and "unavailability of specialist equipment."

Hunt Kennels

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list those hunt kennels which the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland Veterinary Service assessed to be unsatisfactory under the BSE enforcement programme, since 1 January. [3825]

Mr. Murphy: The following list details the hunt kennels which the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland Veterinary Service assessed to be unsatisfactory under the BSE enforcement programme, since 1 January:

Killultagh Hunt Kennels

Newry Harriers

East Antrim Hounds

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many disability living allowance reviews and appeals took place last year; what percentage were successful; what is the average cost of each such procedure; and if she will make a statement on the impact on the work of her Department of the total number of decisions which were overturned. [3828]

Mr. Worthington: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Alec Wylie, and I have asked him to arrange for a response to be given.

Letter from Alec Wylie to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 17 June 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about Disability Living Allowance reviews and appeals.

The information you requested on the number of reviews and appeals is set out in the attached tables.

I regret that information on the cost of review and appeal procedures is not maintained separately and to provide this would require a major clerical exercise generating disproportionate costs.

As many customers provide additional evidence throughout the adjudication process, it is inevitable that some of the original decisions will be overturned at the review and appeal stages. Experience also shows that most customers routinely ask for a review or appeal where the higher rates of Disability Living Allowance have not been awarded. In most cases, arrears of benefit arising from overturned decisions are calculated and paid by computer which means that the impact of this work on the Social Security Agency is minimal.

I hope this explains the position for you but I would be happy to provide any further information you require.

Table No. 1: Review decisions implemented during 1996

Year	Number of review decisions	Success rate
1996 (January to December)	22,253	33.7 per cent. (7,497)

Table No. 2: Tribunal decisions implemented during 1996

Year	Decisions of appeal tribunal implemented	Success rate
1996 (January to December)	3,358	36.6 per cent. (1,230)

Housing Benefit

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will permit housing benefit to be made available in the form of loans for deposits and first month's advance rental on private sector accommodation. [3831]

Mr. Worthington: No. There is no provision within the housing benefit legislation for the award of loans and there are no plans to change this policy.

The Northern Ireland Housing Executive is supporting a rent guarantee scheme, which avoids the requirement for an advance or deposit, operated by the Simon Community (NI), a voluntary organisation working with the homeless. The scheme is currently operating as a pilot exercise in the Belfast area and, if successful, is likely to be extended in its scope.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will ensure that the Child Support Agency distinguishes in correspondence to parents between basic payment amounts and arrears amounts; and if she will make a statement. [3827]

Mr. Worthington: Responsibility for this subject has been delegated to the Northern Ireland Child Support Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Patrick Devlin, and I have asked him to arrange for a response to be given.

Letter from P. Devlin to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 19 June 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question about distinguishing between basic payment amounts and arrears amounts in correspondence to parents.

When a child maintenance assessment is calculated notifications are issued to both the absent parent and parent with care informing them of the amount and the effective date of the weekly liability. At this stage accounts are set up and further notifications setting out the method, frequency, amount and date of the first regular payment are sent to both parents. They are also advised of the amount of maintenance due for the initial payment period. The absent parent is advised that if he has paid any maintenance during this time for any of the children named the amount of the initial payment may be reduced to take account of monies already paid.

If an absent parent fails to make payment on the due date he is advised that child maintenance payments are in arrears. The notification sets out the due date, amount due, amount paid/adjusted and arrears. He is also asked to pay the arrears in full or if he is unable to do so to contact the Agency immediately to discuss an agreement to pay them. The notification also advises that if an agreement to pay the arrears is reached then payments of regular maintenance must be maintained.

I hope you find this information useful.

Homelessness

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will estimate the cost of providing public sector dwellings for all homeless cases. [3833]

Mr. Murphy: It is not possible to provide an accurate estimate, since those classified as homeless by the Housing Executive are considered for allocations from the existing housing stock or from newly constructed dwellings. They may also be temporarily housed at present in hostels or bed and breakfast accommodation. The national cost of providing new dwellings for the estimated 4,000 currently classified as homeless would be £140 million.

Right to Buy

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will amend the rules of the Housing Executive preventing sales of ground floor dwellings to those becoming tenants after the age of 60 years so as to permit house sales in certain circumstances. [3829]

Mr. Murphy: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and its Chief Executive has advised me that in August 1996 the Housing Executive Board reviewed this aspect of its house sales policy. It decided not to change the scheme because the present policy achieved the necessary balance between the competing needs of tenants who require an adequate supply of such accommodation and potential purchasers who wish to buy their homes.

Rateable Values

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list for each council area the rateable value of (a) domestic and (b) other hereditaments, indicating the sums she expects to raise for each sector this year; and what were the sums raised in each of the last three years. [4071]

Mr. Murphy: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Rate Collection Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. D. W. Gallagher. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. W. Gallagher to Mr. William Ross, dated 18 June 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on rateable values, the total rates to be collected in the 1997/98 rating year and the total rates collected in each of the past three years.

I attach as Annexes '1' to '3' tables showing by District Council the Domestic and Non-Domestic Net Annual Values, the Gross Collectable Rate for these sectors for this rating year and the amount collected by the Rate Collection Agency from 1993/94. You will note that the Annexes have included comments where necessary to clarify the tables.

I hope that this information is of use to you but should you require further explanation please do not hesitate to contact me.

Motor Sports Events

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation motor clubs are required to undertake with residents in respect of the closing of public roads for the purpose of motor sports events. [4025]

Mr. Murphy: None. However the promoter of a motor race for which the Department of the Environment is making a road closing order is required by the Road Races (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 (SI 1986/1887 [NI 17]) to give adequate notice of the event. The order also requires the Department to ensure that public notice of the provisions of any road closing order are brought to the attention of the public.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many times public roads in Northern Ireland have been closed in each of the last five years for the purpose of staging motor sports events. [4026]

Mr. Murphy: The number of road closing orders made by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland was:

Year	Road races	Hill-climbs	Kart races	Total
1992	10	9	4	23
1993	10	8	4	22
1994	10	8	4	22
1995	10	8	3	21
1996	10	7	3	20

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation is required between the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland, the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Ulster Automobile Club with regard to the closing of roads in Northern Ireland for the circuit of Ireland rally. [4024]

Mr. Murphy: The Road Races (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 (SI 1986–87 [NI 17]) requires the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland to consult the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary before making any road closing order in respect of a motor racing event. The Department is not required to consult the Ulster Automobile Club which is the promoter of the Circuit or Ireland Rally.

Business Rates

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is her estimate of the rates paid as a percentage of the turnover of retail business. [4069]

Mr. Murphy: The information is not available because there is no estimate for Northern Ireland retail turnover separate from that of the United Kingdom.

Electricity Prices

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland by how much the price of a unit of electric power has increased in cash and percentage terms in each of the last five years; and what factors have contributed to this increase, separately identifying those relating to the non-fossil fuels obligation. [4072]

Mr. Ingram: The prices charged under Northern Ireland's tariff in each of the last five years, and the year by year increases are given in the following table:

Northern Ireland electricity tariff charges

Year	p/kWh[1]	Percentage increase/decrease	Percentage of which due to NFFO
1992–93	6.827	—	—
1993–94	7.238	+6.02	—
1994–95	7.050	–2.60	+0.13
1995–96	7.370	+4.54	+0.61
1996–97	7.517	+1.99	+0.74

[1] Average unit cost based on sales.

There were a number of factors which contributed to these increases, including the cost of coal and fuel oil on the international markets, the effects of general inflationary pressures and, to a less significant degree, the increase in the level of renewable energy production.

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much electrical power has been generated by (a) wind, (b) water and (c) other non-fossil fuel sources in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years for which figures are available; what was the price (i) per unit and (ii) in total paid by Northern Ireland Electricity for such energy from each source in each of these years; and how much of the electrical power generated by each source in each year was transmitted to customers via the electricity grid. [4070]

Mr. Ingram: The amount of electrical power which has been generated by non-fossil fuel sources in Northern Ireland during the last five years and the price paid per unit by Northern Ireland Electricity is given in the following table.

Year	Wind GWh	Wind p/Kwh[1]	Hydro GWh	Hydro p/kWh[1]	Other non-fossil fuel sources GWh	Other non-fossil fuel sources p/kWh[1]	Total GWh
1992–93	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
1993–94	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
1994–95	13.496	6.507	0.139	7.098	—	—	13.635
1995–96	65.252	6.546	0.662	7.036	—	—	65.914
1996–97	80.815	6.553	2.322	6.851	—	—	83.137

[1] Average unit price.

The total paid by Northern Ireland Electricity for non-fossil fuel energy from each source in each of the last five years is given in the following table:

Year	Wind £	Hydro £	Other non-fossil fuel sources	Total £
1992–93	—	—	—	—
1993–94	—	—	—	—
1994–95	878,214	9,859	—	880,073
1995–96	4,271,420	46,592	—	4,318,012
1996–97	5,295,819	159,049	—	5,454,868

All the electrical energy generated by the renewable energy sources shown above was transmitted to customers via the electricity grid.

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will publish the formula used to determine the price paid for electrical power under the non-fossil fuel obligation contracts awarded under each tranche of contracts indicating the figures used in the calculations. [4067]

Mr. Ingram: Non-fossil fuel obligaton contracts are awarded to developers after an open competition on the basis of lowest priced bids within each renewable technology band. Bid prices are expected to reduce in each succeeding NFFO competition towards the prices prices paid to fossil fuel generators.

Retail Petrol Industry

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to keep under review the retail petrol industry in Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement. [3840]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Director General of Fair Trading recently announced a review of the wholesale and retail petrol market in the United Kingdom. The review will cover Northe.n Ireland.

SOCIAL SECURITY

State Retirement Pensions (Overseas Residents)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will implement the recommendation of the Social Security Committee in its third report, "Uprating of State Retirement Pensions Payable to People Resident Abroad" (HC 143, 1996–97) relating to the granting of a free vote to hon. Members on the payment of upratings to pensioners living in countries where uprating are not paid at present; and if she will make a statement. [604]

Mr. Denham: We recognise the strong feelings regarding this long-standing policy among UK pensioners who live in those countries where pensions are not uprated.

However, there are competing demands and constraints on social security spending. In these circumstances, the Government believes that it would be wrong to raise expectations that an uprating of these pensions would be likely to attract priority.

Poverty

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment her Department has made of the report prepared by the European Commission's Eurostat secretariat on the comparative levels of poverty in EU member states. [863]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Government has considered the report. We are determined to tackle unjustifiable social and economic inequality through a range of initiatives.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will estimate the number and proportion of United Kingdom households living under the Council of Europe poverty threshold; and if she will publish this information monthly. [4404]

Mr. Bradley: The Council of Europe decency threshold relates to individual earnings. It is therefore not meaningful to compare this with total disposable income of households. Information on the numbers and proportions of individuals, whose household income is below various levels, is published annually in the DSS statistical series "Households Below Average Income," a copy of which is in the Library. The estimates are drawn from household surveys, whose sample sizes would not allow any valid estimates to be made on a monthly basis.

Incomes

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many households to date are currently in receipt of below average income (a) nationally and (b) by regions. [866]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Reforming the welfare state will be one of our key priorities. We will modernise the welfare system to reduce poverty and social division.

The DSS series "Households Below Average Income" reports the numbers of individuals in households below average income rather than the numbers of households.

The information in the table shows the numbers of individuals living in households with below national average income. Figures are provided both on income before housing costs are deducted (BHC) and on income after housing costs are deducted (AHC), in line with DSS conventions on income statistics.

The latest estimates for the United Kingdom are for 1993–94 and 1994–95 financial years combined—shown in the table as "1993–94"—and are based on data from the Family Expenditure Survey (FES). The FES sample is not sufficiently large to allow regional analysis but regional estimates are available from the Family Resources Survey (FRS) for 1994–95. The FRS has a very much larger sample but does not include Northern Ireland.

No allowance has been made for any regional variations in the cost of living.

Housing Benefit (Winchester)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently claiming housing benefit in Winchester (a) under the age of 25 years and (b) in total; and if she will make a statement. [1288]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table:

Widowers (Child Care)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to provide widowers looking after children with the same benefits as widows. [2382]

Mr. Denham: Modernising the Social Security system is a key priority of the Government. In our examination of the current Social Security structure, we will take account of the needs and responsibilities of the bereaved in pursuit of our aim of reducing poverty and welfare dependency, promoting work incentives and providing better, simpler more efficient services to clients.

Incapacity Benefit

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will restore an element of local discretion on decisions relating to the award of incapacity benefits. [2173]

Mr. Denham: Modernising the Social Security system is a key priority of the Government. Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. We will develop a system that supports work, savings and honesty. We will streamline services to provide better, simpler, more efficient services to clients.

As part of this aim we will be seeking to ensure that decisions relating to the award of incapacity benefits provide a fair assessment of a person's incapacity for work for benefit purposes.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants appealed against refusal by the Benefits Agency to allow incapacity benefit in 1996–97; what was that number as a percentage of the total number of claims refused; and what percentage of appeals were successful. [3759]

Mr. Denham: One of the Government's first priorities for social security is to modernise both the appeals system and the decision making process. We intend to bring forward measures early to streamline and simplify the system to make it easier to understand and more cost effective.

The specific information requested on incapacity benefit appeals is in the table:

Period	Number of incapacity benefit appeals against disallowance	Appeals as a proportion of claims disallowed	Percentage of appeals heard and decided in the claimant's favour
April 1996 to March 1997	100,703	50 per cent.	44

Child Support Agency

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what reforms she plans to the Child Support Agency; and if she will make a statement. [2474]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We will be looking closely at all areas of the Child Support Agency's operations over the coming months to ensure it provides an efficient and effective service to assess and collect maintenance that is due.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her estimate of revenue expenditure and savings, broken down by (i) income tax, (ii) national insurance and (iii) means tested benefits, arising from the introduction of a national minimum wage at (a) £3.50 per hour and (b) £4.20 per hour, accompanied by a reduction in housing benefit and family credit tapers to 50 per cent. and replacing the current 20 tax band with 10p. [2969]

Mr. Field: We will ask the independent Low Pay Commission, before it reaches a recommendation on the level at which the national minimum wage might be set, to take into account all the economic circumstances, including its likely impact. We will not speculate about the possible effects of hypothetical levels before the Commission has had a chance to consider the issues.

Benefits (Immigrants)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of spouses of British citizens admitted under the Immigration Rules obtained social security benefits in each of the three most recent years for which figures are available; and what was the cost of such benefits in each year. [2867]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Spouses of British citizens admitted to the United Kingdom under the Immigration Rules are required to demonstrate they can be supported and accommodated without claiming public funds.

Carers (Earnings Limited)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to make the earnings limit for carers on income support equivalent to the earnings limit for invalid care allowance; and if she will make a statement. [2868]

Mr. Denham: There is no fixed limit to the amount a carer can earn and continue to receive income support. Carers are exempt from the normal income support remunerative work rule. This means that they can continue to receive income support to top-up their earnings even if they work more than 16 hours each week. The first £15 of a carer's earnings is disregarded in the income support calculation. Most other groups can earn only £5 before their benefit is affected.

The invalid care allowance (ICA) earnings limit is fixed at £50 per week, after the deduction of certain expenses. It is intended to help carers keep contact with employment. However, unlike income support, ICA is not an income-related benefit. People with earnings below the earnings limit can get ICA in full but people whose earnings are above the limit cannot get ICA at all.

We have no plans to change these limits at present but are keeping the position of carers under review.

Lone Parents

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many lone parents there are in the constituency of Bolton, West; and of these how many are not in work or training. [3056]

Mr. Keith Bradley: There are no reliable estimates of the number of lone parents by constituency. As a broad indication of the number of lone parents not in work it is estimated that, in November 1995, there were 5,000 lone parents claiming income support in the metropolitan district of Bolton, which encompasses a larger area than Bolton, West.

Our welfare-to-work programme will help get young unemployed people, long-term unemployed people and lone mothers off benefit and into work.

Notes:

1. Caseload figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

2. Income Support figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling error.

Pensions

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to review the additional 25 pence a week paid to pensioners over 80 years of age. [3147]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Cryer), on 10 June, Official Report, column 431.

Benefits (Take-up)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what targets she has set the Benefits Agency to increase the level of take-up of benefits to which claimants are entitled for each type of benefit administered. [3217]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Our priority is to get help to around 1 million pensioners not taking up their income support entitlement. We are determined to address this issue, and we are currently commissioning research to establish why they do not claim the benefit which is their due.

Means-tested Benefits

Professor Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many individuals lived in benefit units receiving at least one means-tested benefit (a) in 1978–79 and (b) in the latest year for which figures are available; and if she will break down this total according to the combinations of benefits received. [4306]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We are committed to looking closely at all aspects of the welfare state to reduce the levels of poverty and welfare dependency.

Information for 1993–94 and for 1979 has been published in table B4 of Households Below Average Income (HBAI): 1979 to 1993–94, a copy of which is in the Library. No information is available for 1978. Information for 1979 is restricted to that published in HBAI.

An indication of the numbers of beneficiaries of the main combinations of benefits at May 1995 is given in the table.

Beneficiaries of means-tested benefits for May 1995 by combinations of benefits received

Combination of benefit	Total beneficiaries
Family credit or disability working allowance only	1,230,000
Income support only	2,370,000
Family credit or disability working allowance and income support	20,000
Housing benefit and/or council tax benefit only	3,190,000
Housing benefit and/or council tax benefit, and family credit or disability working allowance	780,000
Housing benefit and/or council tax benefit, and income support	7,230,000
Housing benefit and/or council tax benefit and family credit or disability working allowance and income support	80,000
All beneficiaries of means tested benefits	14,900,000

Notes:

1. Mean tested benefits are defined as income support, housing benefit, council tax benefit, family credit and disability working allowance.

2. Beneficiaries are defined as the recipient, their partner and their dependants.

3. Figures are rounded to the nearest ten thousand.

4. Income support figures include people in residential care/nursing homes.

Sources:

1. Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry May 1995.

2. Family credit 5 per cent. sample of awards.

3. Disability working allowance 100 per cent. count of claims.

4. Housing benefit management information system, annual 1 per cent. sample enquiries, with and without income support taken at the end of May 1995.

Benefits Statistics

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if she will list the estimated unclaimed benefit in each of the 13 area directorates of the Benefits Agency for each of the last five years for which figures are available (a) as amounts of benefit unclaimed and (b) as a percentage of total payments made for each type of benefit administered; [3215]

(2) if she will make it a requirement for the Benefits Agency to collect and publish annual statistics estimating the level of unclaimed benefit each year for each type of benefit administered by the Agency. [3216]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The regional figures requested are not collected. The latest estimates of national take-up of Income Related Benefits were published in "Income Related Benefits: Estimates of Take-up 1994–95", a copy of which is in the Library. These are the benefits of last resort and it is right that we pay particular attention to their take-up.

We will examine means of delivering more automatic help to the poorest pensioners—one million of whom do not even receive the income support which is their present entitlement. We are commissioning research to establish why they do not claim the benefit which is their due.

Adapt Programme

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to review the Adapt programme. [4915]

Mr. Field: The Department is engaged in a range of private sector initiatives, one of which is Adapt. We will review all proposals in the light of our objectives for modernising the delivery of the welfare system; the implications for customer service, staff and the taxpayer; our commitment to work within the announced spending totals for the first two years of Government; our aim of getting best value for public money; the scope to apply the private sector's expertise, discipline and economies of scale in procuring pubic services and securing investment; and the flexibility for government to make changes at a later date. Announcements will be made in due course.

Green Paper

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will publish the analysis of responses to the Green Paper, "Improving Decision-Making and Appeals in Social Security." [5181]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We have today published the analysis of responses to the Green Paper carried out by the Social Policy Research Unit at the University of York and arranged for copies to be placed in the Library.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 24 June 1997

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Service (Sickness Absence)

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the overall level of sickness absence in the Civil Service. [5469]

Dr. David Clark: The average number of working days sickness absence per staff-year in 1995 was 10.7.

I have placed in the house Libraries copies of the report prepared for my department by OHSA Limited on Sickness Absence in the Civil Service during 1995, which contains a comprehensive analysis of the figures about the Civil Service. That report also contains corrections to some of the figures about sickness absence in the Civil Service for previous years.

My Department regularly encourages Departments and agencies to review their approaches to sickness absence management.

Cash Limits

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proposals there are to change the 1997–98 cash limit or running cost limit for the Office of Public Service. [5470]

Dr. David Clark: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for the Office of Public Service (Class XVII, Vote 1) will be increased by £74,000 from £140,987,000 to £141,061,000 and the gross running cost limit will be decreased by £411,000 from £80,886,000 to £80,475,000.

The changes reflect the transfer of responsibility for the Hardcopy Publications function from the Lord Chancellor's Department (Class VIII, Vote 1); the transfer of Competitiveness Unit to the Department of Trade and Industry (Class IV, Vote 1); the creation of the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA); provision for the introduction of trade between The Buying Agency (TBA) and the Republic of Ireland Civil Service; provision for TBA loan repayments; re-classification of CCTA marketing and research expenditure; and provision for the residual costs of the privatisation of executive agencies in 1996–97. The increase in the cash limit will be offset by a transfer in and will not, therefore, add to the total of planned expenditure. The GCDA will have a net running cost limit of zero.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Cash Limits

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what changes he proposes to make to his Department's cash limits for 1997–98. [5550]

Mr. Chris Smith: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for Class X, Vote 1 will be increased by £1,523,000 from £866,330,000 to £867,853,000. This is to increase provision for transfers from the Department for Education and Employment (Class IX, Vote 1) for awards to dance and drama students, and from the Ordnance Survey (Class VI, Vote 8) to the Royal Commission on the Historical Monuments of England for rent on a property; and a machinery of government change transferring voluntary services to the Home Office. The increases will be offset by transfers and savings, and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

National Lottery

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much (a) was expected and (b) has been realised to date (i) for good causes and (ii) in tax from the national lottery. [3778]

Mr. Chris Smith: Camelot's original forecasts for turnover from the start of the licence to the end of March 1997 suggested that £2,228.8 million would be raised for good causes and that £955.2 million would be paid in lottery duty. In fact £3,212.6 million was raised for the good causes and £1,324.3 million was paid in lottery duty during that period.

Camelot Directors

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when the Government were first informed of arrangements for bonuses for Camelot directors. [3777]

Mr. Chris Smith: The bonus arrangements for the directors of Camelot were set out in their 1995 and 1996 annual reports. The scale of the current bonuses was drawn to my attention after reports appeared in a magazine on 28 May.

Accommodation Grading Schemes

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress he has made to rationalise accommodation grading schemes throughout the United Kingdom. [3092]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 23 June 1997]: So far as England is concerned, the AA, RAC and ETB announced in February plans for a new harmonised scheme which for the first time would give a single rating for hotels according to both the quality of their service and the facilities they offer. They will be consulting the industry on the details of this and on a scheme covering non-hotel serviced accommodation, such as guest houses, B&Bs, farmhouses and inns.

Responsibility for accommodation rating schemes in Scotland and Wales rests with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for those countries.

DEFENCE

Royal Navy Fleet Maintenance and Repair Organisation

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the results of the review of the Royal Navy's Fleet Maintenance and Repair Organisation, Portsmouth and the Tidworth/Bulford and Salisbury Garrisons and on his Department's approach to efficiency in the Army Individual Training Organisation. [5475]

Dr. Reid: Against the yardstick of our approach to securing best value for money for the taxpayer explained in my hon. Friend's answer to my hon. Friend the member for Leicester, South (Mr. Marshall) on 19 June, Official Report, column 264–65, we have now considered the results of two recently completed market tests, of the Royal Navy's Fleet Maintenance and Repair Organisation (FMRO) and of support services at the Tidworth/Bulford and Salisbury Garrisons.

At the FMRO, I am pleased to announce that Fleet Support Limited (FSL) a joint venture company formed by Vosper Thorneycroft and VSEL (GEC Marine), is the preferred bidder for the operation of the facility and, subject to a satisfactory conclusion of detailed discussions on terms and conditions, we will shortly place a five year contract for the management of the FMRO, with a vesting day this autumn. We are confident that the FMRO under commercial management will continue to provide a first class service to the Fleet. Additionally, FSL has guaranteed to attract a minimum level of commercial work into the FMRO and will maintain the apprentice training scheme. Although there will initially be some redundancies, FSL's bid provides the most promising set of arrangements for the future of the FMRO and its workforce, and for the people of Portsmouth. It offers excellent value for money, with savings of over 30 per cent.

At the Tidworth/Bulford and Salisbury Garrisons, I am pleased also to announce that the market test of support services has been won by the in-house team supported by a commercial partner, in competition with four commercial consortia. We expect shortly to put in place a service level agreement with the in-house team, providing savings of over 25 per cent. through rationalisation and reorganisation of the wide range of support services covered by the market test. Job losses will occur but redundancies will be kept to a minimum.

In addition, we have reviewed previous plans to conduct market tests at establishments throughout the Army Individual Training Organisation (AITO), a Defence Agency. A new approach has been developed based on the concept of wider partnering with the private sector. We expect to introduce this programme progressively in the majority of AITO establishments. Previously planned market tests at some establishments have been abandoned in favour of programmes to achieve efficiencies in-house, with the prospect that these establishments will join the partnering programme at a later stage.

The establishments include the Army Training Regiments at Bassingbourn, Glencorse, Lichfield, Purbright and Winchester; the Infantry Training Centre at Catterick; the Royal School of Artillery Larkhill; and the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst. We will complete the contractorisation project at the Royal Armoured Corps Centre, Bovington, and issue invitations to tender for a market test at the School of Electrical and Mechanical Engineering at Bordon, and for the renewal with wider scope of the support contract at the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers at Arborfield.

These specific announcements underline our determination to adopt, in each area of our business, the approach best calculated to maximise the value we obtain from defence resources.

Science and Technology Division

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the Defence Review will include a reappraisal of the proposal to transfer the Science and Technology Division from Colchester to Bicester; [4476]

(2) what the current estimated capital cost is of the proposed transfer of the Science and Technology Division from Colchester to Bicester; and if he will make a statement; [4475]

(3) if he will postpone preparations for the transfer of the Science and Technology Division from Colchester to Bicester until the conclusion of the Defence Review. [4477]

Dr. Reid: Any outcome of the Defence Review will retain a requirement for the Armed Forces to be clothed. As a consequence, we assess that there will be an on-going need for the continuing activity of the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency (DCTA) and the need to retain a research and development capability.

A number of studies have examined the most cost effective way for this capability to be provided. These include the Prior Options Study that preceded the formation of the Agency, specific scrutiny in the Defence Cost Studies and most recently by consideration of private finance involvement in the Agency. Further studies have specifically addressed the collocation of the Agency, including the transfer of the Science and Technology Division from Colchester. These have identified considerable savings and business benefit from collocation. The Strategic Defence Review will not look specifically at the Science and Technology Division of the DCTA, and there are no plans to postpone its transfer from Colchester to Caversfield.

The transfer of the Science and Technology Division from Colchester to Bicester is part of a single project for the collocation of laboratories and workshops of the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency on a single site. Further laboratories and workshops will transfer from the Quality and Product Support Division currently at Didcot. A major benefit from the collocation plan is to merge the currently duplicated facilities at each site and the project is costed on the basis of providing dual use facilities. Because of this joint development I regret it is not possible to identify separately the capital costs of the transfer for the Colchester element alone.

The cost of the total project has been revalidated recently by a firm of consultants employed by the Defence Estates Organisation. Their report dated 13 June 1997 indicated a cost of £5.9 million for the total project. The figure remains very close to the last costing of £5.1 million when savings were forecast at £17.7 million over the Investment Appraisal period of 20 years, in addition to the £6 million per year savings predicated on the new businesses practices that the DCTA can introduce by collocating.

Polaris

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what were the capital and running costs of the Polaris fleet in each year from 1967; [4837]

(2) what was the annual running and maintenance cost in each year when the four boat Polaris fleet was fully operational. [4838]

Dr. Reid: Full details of capital and running costs for the Polaris fleet over the 30-year period in question are not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. Expenditure on Polaris running costs for the years 1980–81 to 1996–97 at historic prices are as follows:

Financial year	Spend at historic prices £ million
1980–81	162
1981–82	238
1982–83	256
1983–84	233
1984–85	219
1985–86	241
1986–87	281
1987–88	296
1988–89	271
1989–90	236
1990–91	210
1991–92	164
1992–93	151
1993–94	103
1994–95	65
1995–96	67
1996–97	(estimated) 53

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what remediation and post-operational monitoring has taken place at the British overseas chemical weapons test sites at (a) Rawalpindi, Wellesley barracks, Cannanore Porkal and Kumbla, India, (b) Sorbo Plain Near Sapele, Nigeria and (c) Pualo Tenggol, Dungun, Malaysia. [4301]

Dr. Reid: We are unable to find any records that document remediation work of post-operational monitoring at the sites listed other than for Obanokoro where it is stated that all efforts were made to retrieve any unexploded munitions. The information we do have suggests that usage of these sites was relatively small scale and would not have been expected to leave any traces.

Trident

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his current estimate of the total cost of the four boat Trident fleet. [4839]

Dr. Reid: The latest estimate of the total acquisition cost of the Trident programme is £12.57 billion at 1996–97 economic conditions. This is over £3.6 billion less in real terms than the original 1982 estimate. Operating costs are estimated to be some £200 million per annum over a 30-year in-service life.

Dockyard Workers, Chatham

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how his Department intends to reconstruct records of the ex-Chatham dockyard workers who may have been exposed to radiation. [4787]

Mr. Spellar: As required by legislation, dose records are kept for former Chatham dockyard radiation workers who were designated as classified persons because their work led to higher annual radiation exposures. Many, but not all, records relating to the radiation exposure of non-classified workers have also been retained.

Where no dose record exists, my Department is examining methods of dose reconstruction based on employment history, radiation exposure information from surveys, and the exposure of comparable workers for whom there are dose records.

Falklands Garrison

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has the cost of maintaining the Falklands garrison in each of the last three years. [4862]

Dr. Reid: The outturn cost to the Ministry of Defence of the Falkland Islands Garrison, in each of the past three years, is as follows:

1994–95: £65.5 million

1995–96: £70 million

1996–97: £81 million.

Nuclear Submarines, Chatham

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the accident records of nuclear submarines whilst they were undergoing maintenance at Chatham dockyard. [4786]

Dr. Reid: There have been no nuclear reactor accidents involving HM submarines. However, my Department does have records of a number of less serious incidents at Chatham dockyard involving the exposure of personnel to radiation and/or unauthorised discharges to the environment which warranted investigation at the time.

The reports of these incidents contain reference to individuals who may have been involved and to others who may have contributed information, sometimes in confidence, to the investigation. This precludes the release of the reports as they stand. I am seeking information from my officials as to the practicability of providing summaries of those incidents, and will write to the hon. Member in due course.

Family Quarters

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the empty service quarters for families which his Department (a) identified for disposal and (b) classed as empty and under review in March have been sold to private buyers. [4918]

Mr. Spellar: A total of 159 of the 1,755 family quarters identified for disposal in March, have been sold. The 3,740 empty properties are still under review.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Speeding Offences (Fines)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy with regard to on-the-spot fines for speeding offences administered by police officers; and if he will make a statement. [4622]

Mr. Michael: There is no system of on-the-spot fines for the enforcement of road traffic offences but drivers who are stopped by the police for alleged speeding may be issued with fixed penalty notices requiring payment of a set sum of £40 to a court within 28 days and have their licence endorsed with three penalty points. Police officers have no authority to demand or accept payment of a fixed penalty on the spot.

Payment of the fixed penalty discharges the offender's liability to conviction by a court. It is open to a driver to decline to accept a fixed penalty and instead request a court hearing in respect of the alleged offence.

Policy on the circumstances in which fixed penalty notices are used for enforcing road traffic law is an operational matter for individual chief officers of police. Guidance has been issued to forces by the Association of Chief Police Officers, with the aim of promoting a uniformity of approach to enforcement.

Tote

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement about the future of the Tote; [4771]

(2) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) of 12 June, Official Report, column 512, if he will make a statement on the steps he is taking to secure a successor to the chairman of the Tote; which parties he has consulted; and when he expects to make an announcement. [4772]

Mr. Straw: I hope to appoint the new chairman of the Tote shortly.

The competition for the post is being conducted in accordance with the Nolan procedures for public appointments, including advertising the post and consideration by a Home Office advisory panel. I am considering a short list of candidates. It would be premature to make any further comment at this stage.

There are no plans at present to change the statutory arrangements governing the Tote. The new chairman will be tasked with a wide-ranging review of the Tote's operations.

Puppy Farms

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning animal welfare standards in puppy farms. [4768]

Mr. George Howarth: Representations have been received from hon. Members, members of the public and the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

HM Prison, Weare

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the recent fire on HM prison, Weare. [4767]

Ms Joyce Quin: There was no fire on the Weare. On the morning of Thursday 12 June, staff on board the Weare saw smoke and immediately activated the fire alarms. Staff and contractors were quickly evacuated and the fire brigade called, no prisoners were on board the vessel. The fire brigade found no evidence of any fire and have classed this as a false alarm. Staff believe the smoke came from welding work flushed out when the air conditioning system was tested.

The smoke alarms were also activated in the evening of Tuesday 17 June. The ship was again quickly evacuated and the fire brigade called. The fire brigade found no fire and confirmed that the alarm had been activated because of smoke from welding work.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the animal welfare implications of selling animals to children under the age of 16 years; and if he will make a statement. [4769]

Mr. George Howarth: The Pet Animals Act 1951, as amended, prohibits the sale of animals as pets to persons under the age of 12 years. No assessment has been made as to whether the current age limit has implications for animal welfare.

Cash Limits

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for changes to the 1997–98 cash limits within his responsibilities. [5474]

Mr. Straw: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for Class VII, Vote 1 (Home Office administration, police, probation, immigration and other services, England and Wales) will be increased by £127,000 from £4,729,044,000 to £4,729,171,000. This increase is the net effect of a transfer of running costs from the Cabinet Office, and from non-voted fire credit approvals. This transfer from non-voted provision reduces the non-voted cash limit (HO/LACAP) by £60,000 from £89,606,000 to £89,546,000. The Supplementary Estimate will also cover the transfer of responsibility for voluntary services from the Department of National Heritage.

In consequence of the above changes, the Home Office gross running cost limit will be increased by £67,000 from £1,887,613,000 to £1,887,680,000.

The increases will be offset by transfers and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Police Grant

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to re-examine the apportionment of police grant to shire and metropolitan authorities. [4998]

Mr. Michael: We will be looking carefully at the funding formula by which resources are allocated between police authorities, to consider what modifications might be made both for the short and the longer term.

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use he plans to make of the Internet to make government more open. [5095]

Mr. Straw: My Department will continue to pursue its programme of publishing material on the Internet whenever suitable opportunities arise.

The Home Office site www.homeoffice.gov.uk includes two pages of information about my Department's open government policies. The first, www.homeoffice.gov.uk/opengov1.htm, gives details of the system for making suggestions or complaints. The second, www.homeoffice.gov.uk/opengov2.htm, sets out the procedures for requesting information.

A wide range of information is available on the site, which is updated continually, and at present contains 288 pages. It has already been used to make consultation papers available more widely. It was also the first Government site to include details of its new ministerial team, and has links to other Government and relevant public sector pages.

UK Passport Agency

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the UK Passport Agency performed against its targets in 1996–97; and what performance targets he has set for the Agency in 1997–98. [5553]

Mr. Straw: I am pleased to say that the UK Passport Agency achieved all its targets in 1996–97. The targets for processing properly completed straightforward applications were met with demand for passport services at its highest recorded level. The average turnround time for the whole year was 6.3 working days. The Passport Agency's financial target was to reduce its unit cost by three per cent. in real terms. The latest indications are that the agency has achieved an 8.5 per cent. real terms reduction in its unit cost. Customer satisfaction levels remain very high.

During 1997–98, I expect the Passport Agency to continue to improve its standard of service to the public and manage a predicted reduction in demand as efficiently as possible.

I have set the agency the following key targets:-

1. to process properly completed straightforward applications within a maximum of 10 working days.

2. to secure real terms efficiency savings of 11.1 per cent. in the 3 year period 1995–96 to 1997–98.

The Chief Executive will remain directly accountable to me for the performance of the Passport Agency. An advisory board, including two private sector members with experience of delivering services to the public, will continue to provide me with an independent assessment of the agency's performance.

Drugs

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what means he ensures that each police authority follows a consistent policy on cautioning persons for possession of cannabis; and if he will make a statement on the practice of multiple cautioning. [4793]

Mr. Michael: It is for the police to decide whether to caution a person found in possession of a controlled drug, in light of the circumstances of the individual case and in accordance with the guidance on the cautioning of offenders in Home Office Circular 18/1994. Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary examines forces' overall cautioning policy and determines whether the policy is being observed in practice.

In 1995, the Association of Chief Police Officers issued further guidance on cautioning which encourages the use of gravity factors to ensure consistent identification of aggravating and mitigating circumstances in the decision-making process.

The Government intend to tackle the lack of consistency in cautioning and to reduce repeat cautions in respect of all offences. This is why we have pledged to replace repeat cautions with a single final warning for young offenders.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the total amount (a) spent and (b) allocated by his Department on tackling problems relating to drugs in respect of (i) improving international co-operation to reduce supplies from abroad, (ii) increasing the effectiveness of police and Customs enforcement, (iii) maintaining effective deterrents and tight domestic controls, (iv) developing prevention publicity, education and community action and (v) improving treatment and rehabilitation, for (1) 1994, (2) 1995, (3) 1996 and (4) 1997. [4784]

Mr. George Howarth: Information on total Government and individual Departments' expenditure on tackling drug misuse is not recorded on an annual basis. The most recently available estimates were published in the White Paper, "Tackling Drugs Together" in May 1996. They show that at least £526 million of expenditure in 1993–94 could be directly attributable to drug programmes and activities across the United Kingdom.

The Government will be appointing a "drug czar" to co-ordinate action against drugs, working to the President of the Council as Chair of the Cabinet's co-ordinating committee on drug misuse. One of his or her first tasks will be to review urgently the existing drugs strategy, and put forward proposals for tackling the problem with renewed vigour. This review will include current Government expenditure.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by type of drug the number of persons for each police authority in England and Wales (a) cautioned, (b) proceeded against in a magistrate's court and (c) tried at the Crown Court for possession of a proscribed drug in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995 and (iii) the last 12 month period for which figures are available. [4794]

Mr. Michael: Details of the numbers of persons cautioned, proceeded against in a magistrates' court or tried at the Crown court for possession of a controlled drug in 1994 and 1995, by type of drug and police force area, are given in the tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library. Data for 1996 will not be available until the late autumn.

Deportations

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 12 June, Official Report, column 510, how many persons removed from the United Kingdom in each of the last five years under the deportation process made a voluntary departure. [4835]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested is given in the list:

Voluntary departures from the United Kingdom after deportation action had been initiated, 1992–96.

1992: 94

1993: 208

1994: 271

1995: 365

1996[1]: 355.

Polygraphs

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use his Department makes of polygraphs, and if he will make a statement. [4585]

Mr. Straw: None, so far as I and my official have been able to ascertain. The Home Office does not encourage the use of polygraph testing for decision making on employment screening or security vetting. The Home Office's views on the use of polygraphs are broadly in accordance with those of the Scientific Affairs Board of the British Psychological Society. We have concern with regard to polygraphs' use of non-standardised administration procedures; internal inconsistency; unreliable rescoring of charts; insufficient evidence of retest reliability provided for examinees; disproportionate numbers of false positive results produced; absence of data on the adverse impact on minority groups; seemingly non-voluntary participation of examinees; and its sensitivity to aspects of temperament.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the advantages of admitting in evidence the results of polygraph tests; and if he will make a statement. [4583]

Mr. Michael: I have made no assessment of the admissibility of polygraph tests as evidence in criminal trials. The courts have held that, as a matter of principle, evidence produced by mechanical, chemical or hypnotic truth test on a witness is inadmissible to show the veracity or otherwise of that witness.

Under the general rules of evidence, the previous statements of a witness are inadmissible as hearsay and also, where such statements are consistent with his oral testimony, they are inadmissible as evidence of consistency under the rule against previous self-serving statements.

Electro-shock Devices

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the cost to central funds of the Hard Arrest programme; and what further research has been carried out on the operation, safety or use of electro-shock equipment; [3817]

(2) what was the duration of the Hard Arrests trial programme; and what equipment, policy issues and training were involved. [3816]

Mr. Michael: I understand that these questions relate to the possible development of electric shock shields for use against people. Neither my Department nor the police service have any knowledge of the Hard Arrests trial programme, or of any other programme of development, testing or training in the use of such equipment in this country.

Chief officers of police, with their police authorities, are responsible for deciding what equipment to obtain for their officers, either for testing or for introduction. A number of forces have electric-shock shields and cattle prods for use against ferocious dogs, but no force has such equipment for use against people.

In 1990, the Forensic Science Service published a theoretical assessment of the effects of electric shock weapons.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the special advisers in his Department, the minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in his Department in the year up to 1 May. [5362]

Mr. Straw: I have two special advisers, Mr. Ed Owen and Mr. Norman Warner. They are employed under terms and conditions based on the model contract for special advisers, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. Mr. Owen and Mr. Warner are advising me on all subjects relevant to the Department, save those of a confidential nature, in accordance with Schedule 1 (Part 1) of the Model Contract.

In the year to 1 May 1997, there were two special advisers.

Protection from Harassment Act

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the definition of violence his Department uses in interpreting section 4(1) (4) (2) of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997. [4846]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 20 June 1997]: Section 4 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 makes it a criminal offence for a person to pursue a course of conduct which they know, or ought to know, causes another to fear that violence will be used against him or her. The offence is intended to catch the most serious cases of stalking, where the stalker's conduct is so threatening that the victim fears for his or her safety.

The Act does not define "violence", nor is there any guidance on the meaning of the term in the circular issued by the Home Office to the courts and police for the implementation of the Act on 16 June. The courts already have long experience of interpreting the term and should continue to exercise that judgment in cases arising under section 4 of the 1997 Act. Violence does not need to be established to prove an offence under section 4: fear of violence will suffice.

Under the 1997 Act there will be scope for early intervention, in the form of the offence of causing harassment and a restraining order on conviction to prevent further harm being caused, which is designed to prevent the harassment escalating any further.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Sustainable Development

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on how his plans for (a) employment, (b) training and (c) education will incorporate the principles of sustainable development. [3581]

Dr. Howells: Although few of DfEE's policies have any significant impact on the environment, DfEE is committed to the principles of sustainable development.

We are currently setting up the Environmental Task Force (ETF), as part of the New Deal which will provide valuable work experience and training for unemployed young people. The ETF will provide a range of placements to help the local community, such as tree planting, energy efficiency measures and landscaping.

We have an environmental National Vocational Qualification (NVQ) framework and a Modern Apprenticeship NVQ Level 3 in Environmental Conservation.

We issue guidance to schools to enable them to monitor their own energy use as well as provide opportunities for pupils to learn about the environment. We are also considering the establishment of a national panel to co-ordinate environmental education and will announce our intentions in due course.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much each training and enterprise council has spent on special needs training in each of the last three years. [4168]

Dr. Howells: The information requested is not available. Separate accounts for TEC expenditure on those with special needs are not maintained. The Department's contract with TECs does however specify a number of targets which ensures that special needs are given prominence.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the comparative performance of individual TECs; and if he will make a statement. [4620]

Dr. Howells: The performance of individual TECs varies across the range of activities in which they are involved. The Department intends to work with the TEC National Council and the wider TEC network to improve the performance of all TECs through, for example, benchmarking and the sharing of best practice more effectively.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what external audits have been carried out since 1 January 1995 into the use of public money by Sussex Enterprise. [5195]

Dr. Howells: Sussex Enterprise, like other Training and Enterprise Councils, is subject to audit by the FAM (Financial Management) team of the relevant Government Office, at least annually.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what balances were held by Sussex Enterprise and its predecessor Sussex TEC at the end of each of the last five financial years; what this figure represents as a percentage of turnover for each year; and if he will make a statement. [5194]

Dr. Howells: These figures are available from the published annual reports, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what safeguards exist to ensure the proper and effective use of public money by Sussex Enterprise. [5193]

Dr. Howells: Sussex Enterprise, like all other TECs, is under a general/contractual obligation from the Secretary of State to have sound financial controls and to provide value for money on all expenditure on government programmes.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make it his policy to require representation at member level for local authorities on the boards of TECs; and if he will make a statement. [5192]

Dr. Howells: The contract the Department has with TECs requires that at least two-thirds of the Directors hold the office of chairman, or chief executive, or top level operational manager at local level of a company, or senior partner of a professional partnership in the private sector. The remaining Directors must be senior figures within the local community, which includes members of local authorities. I will be reviewing the arrangements with the TEC National Council over the coming months to decide whether any changes are appropriate.

University Degrees

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans his Department has to control the quality of university degrees delivered on-line (a) in part or (b) in full. [4734]

Dr. Howells: The quality of degrees is a matter for universities and other institutions with degree-awarding powers. The Secretary of State expects to ask the newly established Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education to address issues relating to the quality and standards of degrees, taking into account the forthcoming report of the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to increase awareness among students in higher education of the dangers of drug abuse. [5082]

Mr. Howells: Higher Education Institutions are independent autonomous bodies. They contribute to the effort to tackle drug misuse by individually adopting rules governing the prohibition of drugs from college premises and disciplinary sanctions. They also provide welfare and counselling services for their students. The Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals and the Standing Conference of Principals were invited to encourage the higher education sector to provide appropriate prevention, counselling and support services for their students and to put in hand whatever further action they considered to be necessary.

The Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals and the Standing Conference of Principals published guidance on 20 June 1997 on information provision and education for students and staff, support infrastructure (internal and external), disciplinary procedures, staff awareness and training, liaison between institutions and local community expertise. The guidance was issued to all higher education institutions in the UK and to all members of the Association of Managers of Student Services in Higher Education.

The Government will be appointing a 'drug czar' to co-ordinate our action against drugs. One of his or her first tasks will be to revise urgently the existing drugs strategy, and put forward proposals for tackling the problem with renewed vigour.

Education Action Zones

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what criteria he will set for the establishment of education action zones. [4890]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 20 June 1997]: We shall set out our plans for education action zones in the Education White Paper, which will be published shortly.

Key Stage 2

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he asked the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority to look into the national curriculum for key stage 2; whether SCAA has been advised to make key stage 2 less prescriptive to allow for greater concentration on numeracy and literacy; and when he expects SCAA to report on this matter. [5353]

Ms Estelle Morris: I wrote to SCAA's Chairman on 9 June asking for his interim report, due in August, to inform my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on how a sharper focus on literacy and numeracy can be achieved in key stages 1 and 2 through non-statutory means.

My letter asked for a range of specific options to be considered, including the place for explicit guidance on the minimum that needs to be done to cover the National Curriculum in non-core subjects.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has to improve the public accountability of colleges of further education. [4621]

Dr. Howells: I refer to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hallam (Mr. Allan), Official Report, 16 June 1997, column 48.

Racial Discrimination

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the level of racial discrimination in the labour market; and if he will make a statement. [4853]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Recent research and industrial tribunal cases show that racial discrimination in the labour market remains a matter of serious concern.

I deplore racial discrimination and racial harassment. I will ensure that my actions and those of the Department play their part in combating unfair treatment. Current action to promote race equality includes: the work of the Race Relations Employment Advisory Service, DfEE booklets on equal opportunities, and conferences in partnership with the Commission for Racial Equality and other key players.

I am pleased that the Department is setting an example to other employers by becoming a Champion of the Race for Opportunity campaign, promoting racial equality to employers.

I will be meeting Sir Herman Ouseley in the near future to discuss further ways in which the Department can work with the CRE to combat discrimination.

Young People

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of the number of 16 and 17-year-olds who are currently not in full-time education, in work or on a training place; and if he will make a statement. [4855]

Dr. Howells: In winter 1996–97 there were 142,000 16 and 17-year-olds not in full-time education, in employment, or in Government Training in the UK, according to the Labour Force Survey.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the use of discretion by jobcentre staff in applying postal signing rules for the jobseeker's allowance for claimants with high travelling costs; and if he will issue guidance. [4872]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Lembit Öpik, dated 24 June 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the postal signing rules. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Under our present rules a person claiming Jobseeker's Allowance whose normal journey to their Jobcentre would take more than one hour in either direction, or would entail an absence from home of four hours or more, is allowed to sign on by post. People whose mobility is affected by a disability may also be allowed to sign on by post.

In addition Jobcentre Managers do have discretion to allow postal signing in other circumstances. The relevant guidance, which is contained within the Employment Service's Jobseeker's Allowance Interventions Guide, chapter 20, paragraph 3, states that:

'Business Managers may also use some discretion in offering the postal facility to other jobseekers, even if their journey is possible within the time limits in paragraph 2, (i.e., their journey time is less than 1 hour in either direction or they would be absent from home for less than 4 hours.) For example, if the jobseeker would have to use a form of transport which they could not be expected to use on a fortnightly basis, for example, an InterCity train, a ferry or a plane'.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many young people are currently receiving the jobseeker's allowance, under the severe hardship provision or receiving a bridging allowance; and if he will make a statement. [4852]

Mr. Howarth: There were 16,000 young people aged 16 and 17 years old receiving jobseeker's allowance (JSA) in February 1997, the latest date for which figures are available. The vast majority of these young people would have been receiving JSA because they would otherwise have faced severe hardship.

There were 5,150 young people receiving a Youth Training Bridging Allowance in May 1997.

Vocational Courses

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the implications of recent changes to the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations 1995 for vocational courses involving work experience and a work placement; and if he will make a statement. [5110]

Dr. Howells: The changes made to the provisions governing sandwich courses in the Regulations will not take effect until 1 September 1997. They were made in order to clarify the provisions in the current Regulations, which were unsatisfactory and unclear. I am aware that certain courses which contain a period of full-time study at an institution that aggregates to less than 19 weeks per academic year may be adversely affected by the changes. I am currently considering the effect of the changes on these courses.

Nursery Education

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will ensure that all nursery providers currently registered under the Nursery Voucher Scheme are eligible for funding under the new arrangements whether or not they are included in a local education authority interim development plan. [5198]

Mr. Byers: It is for education authorities to submit interim early years for development plans. All existing providers in the voucher scheme are eligible, and local authorities have been asked to give convincing reasons fornotincludingthem.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Social Chapter

Sir Richard Body: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the implementation of the social chapter through European Union legislation. [4460]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Agreement was reached at the Amsterdam summit to incorporate the agreement on social policy into the treaty and to give the UK an immediate seat at the negotiating table, before the new treaty comes into force.

The Government said at Amsterdam that they will implement the two directives already adopted under the social agreement. The details of how the directives, on European Works Councils and Parental Leave, are to apply to the UK will be agreed before the signature of the new treaty.

"Britain: The Preferred Location in Europe"

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the document "Britain: The Preferred Location in Europe" was published. [4745]

Mrs. Roche: The document, "Britain: The Preferred Location in Europe" was published on 23 May 1997.

National Physical Laboratory (Land Disposal)

Dr. Cable: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the compliance of her policy in disposing of surplus land on the National Physical Laboratory site at Teddington with the unitary development plan of the local planning authority. [4588]

Mr. Battle: Final bids under the public private partnership for the redevelopment of the National Physical Laboratory site will not be available for assessment until the beginning of July. We have made tenderers aware of the need to take account of land planning policies in completing their bids.

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many export licences were granted in each year since 1990 for the export of police or paramilitary training equipment to Indonesia; what public funds were involved in such transactions; and if she will make a statement. [1832]

Mrs. Roche: There is no category within the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994 from which police or paramilitary training equipment can be readily identified. To search export licence records for this purpose would entail disproportionate cost.

As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary announced on 22 May, Official Report, column 135, the Government have initiated an urgent review of the criteria used in considering licence applications for the export of conventional arms. The new criteria will be made available to the House when the review is complete. In the meantime, officials will consult Ministers whenever there are export licence applications which may raise concerns about human rights or international stability.

Chemical Weapons Convention

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of Britain's progress in implementing the chemical weapons convention 1996; and if she will make a statement regarding the identification and recording of manufacture, holdings and transfer of law enforcement and riot control agents and chemical irritants. [3583]

Mrs. Roche: The United Kingdom has made substantial progress in implementing the chemical weapons convention which entered into force on 29 April. The Chemical Weapons Act 1996 provides the legislative framework to implement the convention. All the necessary secondary legislation has been made to enable my Department to license the production, possession and use of the most toxic chemicals and to implement the convention's trade controls. The United Kingdom submitted its initial declaration to the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) on 27 May and preparations are well advanced to receive the first inspection under the convention.

The holding of riot control agents for law enforcement purposes is permitted under the convention and the United Kingdom has declared to the OPCW the chemicals which are held for this purpose. There is no requirement under the convention to declare information concerning the manufacture and transfer of such agents.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps are being taken to advise small businesses of the problems likely to occur with their computer systems as a result of the year 2000 problem. [5317]

Mr. Battle: My Department is working closely with Taskforce 2000, a body set up by the CBI and the IT industry, with our financial support, to spread awareness of the century date change problem to all levels of industry and co-ordinate action. A senior DTI official is seconded to the Taskforce, working through Business Link and their counterparts in Scotland and Wales, specifically to focus on alerting SMEs.

In March 1997, DTI wrote to 120,000 UK Chief Executives drawing their attention to the issue and offering a DTI information pack containing advice and sources of help. To date, over 15,000 information packs have been distributed.

Officials are also working with the accounting and auditing professions to ensure that, as far as possible, all business in the UK are aware of the implications.

Fuel Poverty

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals she has to eliminate fuel poverty; and if she will make a statement. [4395]

Mr. Battle: We have made a commitment in our Manifesto to reduce poverty and welfare dependency: this commitment cuts across a number of policy areas, including energy. We are considering how to achieve that overall Manifesto commitment. In the energy field, competition is already bringing lower prices to many consumers; and we aim to ensure that these benefits are shared by all consumers, including those on low incomes. To inform our future policies, I have asked the gas and electricity regulators for a report on how competition will impact on people taking their supply via a prepayment meter.

Auditors

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals for the reform of audit regulation will accompany her proposals for limited liability partnerships for auditing work. [4288]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade will be considering the content of the draft legislation on limited liability partnership in the light of all the representations received.

Atomic Energy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her Department's policy on the duration of contracts (a) British Nuclear Fuels and (b) the Atomic Energy Authority may sign with foreign companies for the storage of spent nuclear fuel at (i) Sellafield and (ii) Dounreay. [4304]

Mr. Battle: British Nuclear Fuel's contracts with foreign companies are only for reprocessing spent nuclear fuel at Sellafield. The fuel is stored awaiting reprocessing in Thorp. The duration of storage is a commercial matter for the company involved. Similarly, UKAEA imports spent nuclear fuel only for reprocessing and not for storage. It should be noted that there is only a limited capacity for the temporary storage of nuclear fuels prior to reprocessing so it is in the commercial interests of both organisations to make optimum use of this.

Cash Limits

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes will be made to cash and running cost limits within her responsibility for 1997–98. [5548]

Mrs. Beckett: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class IV, vote 1—programmes and administration—will be increased by a token amount of £1,000. This increase results from:

(i) the transfer of responsibility for the Competitiveness Unit to the Department of Trade and Industry from the Cabinet Office: Office of Public Service (Class XVII, Vote 1) resulting in an increase of £1,694,000 to vote section C (Departmental capital and administration) offset by a payment of £1,693,000 from the Cabinet Office under a new vote section M of class IV, vote 1; and,

(ii) an increase of £270,000 to the Iron and Steel Employees Readaptation Benefits Scheme offset by a corresponding increase in individual industry receipts under section B of the Vote.

Within this total, the gross running cost limit for the Department of Trade and Industry is being increased by £1,692,000 from £365,001,000 to £366,693,000 as a result of the Competitiveness Unit transfer.

Also, subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class IV, vote 9—Office of Gas Supply—will be increased by £1,975,000 from £8,100,000 to £10,075,000 and the running cost limit by £1,975,000 from £9,437,000 to £11,412,000. The requirement for an increase results from an increase in running costs associated with the introduction of domestic competition.

The DTI token increase will be offset by savings, and the OFGAS increase will be charged to the Reserve. Neither will therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Kenya

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the current level of trade between Britain and Kenya; and what is the current balance of imports and exports between Britain and Kenya. [4910]

Mrs. Roche: In 1996, the value of UK exports of goods to Kenya was £241 million, a slight decrease on 1995. UK imports increased, by 18 per cent., to £191 million. The crude balance of trade in goods decreased, from a surplus of £82 million in 1995, to £50 million in 1996.

Post Office

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to amend the legal immunities of the Post Office in respect of the services it provides. [4981]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Post Office's immunity from contractual liability for ordinary post was granted by Parliament in the Post Office Act 1969 because of the very high volumes of mail handled and essentially unrestricted access to posting at over 100,000 pillar boxes and over 19,000 post offices.

In view of the fact that individual recording of each letter would be impracticable and would give rise both to substantial delays and large increases in costs, Parliament took the view that the acceptance of liability by the Post Office, without proof of posting or delivery, could give rise to an escalating level of fraudulent claims and to high costs which could be met only by a substantial increase in the standard letter tariffs. It is the Government's view that the vast majority of mail users would not wish to see much higher tariffs or to obtain proof of posting for all items posted as the price for abolishing the Post Office's immunity. We therefore have no plans to introduce legislation to do so.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list for each operating nuclear power station in Britain (i) its year of construction, (ii) the year it began supplying electricity to the national grid, (iii) its anticipated decommissioning date at year of construction, (iv) its actual decommissioning date, if now decommissioned and (v) its expected decommissioning date at the present time. [4638]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 20 June 1997]: Dates for the start of construction, first commercial operation and date of shutdown, where applicable, for nuclear power stations operating in Britain are given in the 1997 World Nuclear Industry Handbook extracts of which are reproduced in the following table.

Nuclear stations are subject to constant review by the regulatory authorities through a closely monitored licencing system, which ensures that the companies owning these power stations can only operate them for as long as it is safe to do so. Anticipated lifetimes when these stations were first built were based on the technological and economic estimates made at that time and typically ranged between 20 and 30 years.

The decommissioning of nuclear power stations is undertaken by agreement with the regulatory authorities, the Nuclear Industries Inspectorate and the Environment Agency, to ensure that environmental, safety and economic concerns are fully taken into account.

Political Parties (Donations)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will introduce legislation requiring companies to undertake a ballot of all (a) shareholders and (b) employees before making donations to political parties. [4816]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 23 June 1997]: The Government gave a commitment in the Queen's Speech that they would consider how the funding of political parties should be regulated and reformed.

Social Chapter

Mr. Rooney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to introduce legislation incorporating the social chapter into British law. [4926]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 23 June 1997]: Following signature of the new treaty, which incorporates the agreement on social policy, the Government expect to introduce in the autumn a Bill to amend as necessary the European Communities Act 1972.

The Government have undertaken to implement the two directives which have been adopted under the agreement on social policy within two years of the signature of the new treaty or when it enters into force if that is later.

Oil Exploration

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment her Department has made of the environmental impact of drilling for oil in the Atlantic. [4402]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 23 June 1997]: In deciding which blocks to offer for licenee in the 17th round, the Department of Trade and Industry took account of advice from the Joint Nature Conservation Committee, its principal adviser on environmental matters, relevant Government Departments and environmental groups. Blocks awarded for licence in the round are subject to conditions which seek to mitigate any possible adverse environmental impact of petroleum activities. The conditions were agreed with the Joint Nature Conservation Committee.

Defence-related Jobs

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate she has made of the total number of people employed on defence-related jobs in British manufacturing industry. [4753]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 23 June 1997]: In 1994–95, 360,000 jobs in UK industry were estimated to be dependent on defence expenditure and equipment exports.

TREASURY

Bank of England

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to answer the question tabled on 2 June by the right hon. Member for Llanelli relating to the proposed legislation transferring to the Bank of England operational responsibilities for the setting of interest rates. [5339]

Mrs. Liddell: I did so on 20 June.

Gini Coefficient

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the current Gini coefficient for each member state of the European Union. [3442]

Mrs. Liddell: International comparisons of income distribution are difficult to make and there are no officially recognised current estimates of Gini coefficients for each member state of the European Union. Estimates of Gini coefficients for the early 1990's, using data from the Luxembourg Income Survey, have recently been published in an article "Poverty in the UK: A Comparison with Nineteen Other Countries" by Jonathan Bradshaw and Jun-Rong Chen. This can be found in the January 1997 issue of "Benefits", a journal published by Nottingham University, which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Income Support

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer at what stage in the annual public expenditure cycle it is appropriate for him to discuss openly the resources of households with children above income support levels. [3964]

Mr. Darling: There is not going to be a Public Expenditure Survey in 1997. If the hon. Member wants to make representations to my right hon. Friend then he is free to do so.

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what use he plans to make of the Internet to make Government more open. [5098]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury's Internet site (http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk) has received various commendations and awards, and has been warmly received by the public. The site offers a wide range of information and documentation, which we are committed to expanding the scope of further. Some of the information already published on the site includes all Treasury news releases, speeches, consultation documents, and Treasury occasional papers. Next week, shortly after the Chancellor finishes his statement, we shall be making the speech and the related Budget documentation available on the site. In the 1996 Budget week the site was accessed almost 400,000 times, up from 250,000 accesses in 1995. We expect even greater levels of interest next week.

Personal Pensions (Misselling)

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what responses the Treasury has received in reply to the initiative on misselling of personal pensions announced by the Economic Secretary to the Treasury on 14 May. [5472]

Mrs. Liddell: On 14 May I spoke to senior representatives of the 24 firms which are together responsible for nearly three-quarters of the cases requiring review under the terms of the guidance issued by the Securities and Investments Board (SIB). I told them of the Government's concern about the delays in completing these case reviews and challenged them to perform to better standards than those expected in the targets set by SIB and the Personal Investment Authority (PIA) for each firm. I also made clear that, in the public interest, I plan to publish regular information about each firm's progress.

I am placing copies of my letters to these firms in the Library of the House. In them I asked for information about their strategies for case reviews and for monthly information about progress with cases. In the letters, I set out my intention to publish the information provided, firm by firm, in the spirit of open government, and in the interests of the investors and the investing public generally. I now have replies from all 24 firms. I am placing copies in the Library of the House and making them available to the press.

Most of these replies suggest a willingness to deliver the targets for completion of case reviews set by the regulators. A number of companies claim to have adopted practices which will hasten the conclusion of case reviews. These include providing additional staff, placing responsibility with a director and outsourcing expertise where there are resource constraints. I regret that some firms place more emphasis on the impediments to progress such as information flows and the scarcity of appropriate expertise. It is important that case reviews are treated as a matter of priority so that investors can be reassured that their pensions are secure.

There are also some indications that firms are adopting, or considering, accelerated case management techniques which will improve the speed of case handling without prejudicing investors' rights. Such methods include waiving consideration of whether sales procedures were strictly at fault; use of automatic formulae to top up certain smaller cases; and potentially guarantees which will ensure that investors will either get reinstatement into occupational schemes or equivalent treatment where that proves impossible. I shall be looking for evidence that firms are showing their sincerity and commitment to customer service while moving quickly to adopt such streamlined procedures.

While most of the policy statements sent to me showed a businesslike sense of purpose, I regret that there are two which appear to misunderstand the Government's determination that this matter must be resolved with dispatch. The Sedgwick Group is quite wrong to assert that the Government's initiative on 14 May was in any way under-researched. And I am not convinced by the objections of the board of Legal and General to well merited criticisms of the industry's performance so far.

When I met these firms on 14 May I made clear that, in the public interest, I would review progress each month and publish information monthly about the progress being made by each firm toward delivery of the regulators' targets. Some firms have already demonstrated that the pace of their reviews is quickening. I trust that this trend will accelerate over the months to come. But progress must not be made through shortcuts achieved to the detriment of investors' rights. Any attempt of this nature will quickly be picked up by the quality control process which the regulators will carry out at my request.

When I review the progress made by each of the 24 firms each month, I will consider what further action may be called for if I am not convinced of their good intentions. I wish the first reports to be available to me by 3 July, and each month thereafter. It is now urgent that the pensions industry honours its commitments and puts its house in order. Only in that way can it assure its customers, and indeed the general public, of its ability to look after their interests responsibly.

Interest Rates

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each year since 1970 (a) the nominal and real rate of interest and (b) the change in the nominal and real rate of exchange based on relative unit values for manufactures based on the second half of 1973 equals 100. [2025]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Austin Mitchell, dated 24 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question (2025) on the nominal and real rate of interest.

The attached table shows nominal and real rates of interest for the dates requested. The real rate of interest is the nominal rate of interest deflated by a measure of price change over 12 months. There are many different interest rates and price indices and therefore many ways of calculating real interest rates. However, interest rates move in line and thus overall movements provide an accurate indication of general movements.

The retail banks' base rate was used to represent the interest rate. This is the rate of interest retail banks lend to each other and can be considered the market interest rate for the UK economy. It moves in line with the Bank of England's Minimum Lending Rate (the minimum rate the Bank discounted bills to relieve money market shortages), which represents the cost of borrowing for retail banks from the Bank.

The nominal rate of interest was deflated by the average annual change in the retail prices index excluding mortgage interest payments (RPIX), except between 1970–1976 where the headline retail price index (RPI) was used. RPIX was used in preference to RPI, since i) the nominal interest rate is a priori sensitive to changes in mortgage rates and ii) the real interest rate is compatible with the Government's chosen inflation target measure. Data for RPIX between 1970 and 1976 was not available.

For the second part of the question, refer to Export unit value index for the United Kingdom published in table 2.16 of ONS monthly publication Economic Trends. This data is supplied to us from the Department of Trade and Industry. For methodology for the derivation of the export unit value index, refer to Competitiveness in Manufactures article on page 43 of June 1997 edition of ONS publication Economic Trends. The Department of the Environment can give more detail on international comparisons.

Year	Nominal rate of interest percentage per annum	Real rate of interest percentage per annum
1970	7.25	1.25
1971	5.50	0.75
1972	6.00	1.00
1973	9.25	1.00
1974	12.25	0.75
1975	10.50	0.50
1976	11.00	0.75
1977	9.50	0.50
1978	9.50	1.00
1979	13.75	1.00
1980	15.50	1.00
1981	14.25	1.25
1982	11.25	1.25
1983	10.00	2.00
1984	10.00	2.25
1985	12.50	2.50
1986	11.00	3.00
1987	9.50	2.50
1988	9.00	2.00
1989	14.50	2.50
1990	14.00	1.75
1991	12.00	1.75
1992	9.25	2.00
1993	5.75	2.00
1994	5.75	2.50
1995	6.50	2.25
1996	6.00	2.00

The nominal rate of interest is an average over the year. The price index used is the rate of change in prices over the year.
All figures were rounded to the nearest 0.25 percentage point.

Dependent Children

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the mean average number of dependent children for each year since 1971 following the form of table 2.6 of "Living in Britain" for the family type whose head of household is (a) married, (b) cohabiting, (c) a lone mother and (d) a lone father. [4792]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Edward Leigh, dated 24 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your recent question about the average number of dependent children.

The analysis requested is not currently available from published or unpublished tables produced from the General Household Survey (GHS). Table 2.6 in Living in Britain (SO, 1997) is the only breakdown of mean (average) number of dependent children by family type available for each year since 1971. Unpublished information on the average number of dependent children for lone mother families and lone father families is available for the 1994 and 1995 surveys. The figures are:

Families with dependent children: Mean average number of dependent children

Family type	1994	1995
Married/cohabiting couples	1.9 (2,442)	1.9 (2,358)
Lone mothers	1.7 (660)	1.7 (607)
Lone fathers	1.3 (48)	1.5 (51)
All lone parents	1.7 (708)	1.7 (658)
All families with dependent children	1.8 (3,150)	1.8 (3,016)

Base numbers are in brackets, and correspond to the number of respondents in the survey within each group.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the age of the youngest dependent child by family type following the form of table 2.9 of "Living in Britain", indicating the percentages of children living in a household headed by a person who is (a) married, (b) cohabiting, (c) a lone mother, (d) a lone father and (e) a lone parent. [4844]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Edward Leigh, dated 24 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your recent question about the age of youngest dependent children.

The analysis requested is not currently available from published or unpublished tables produced from the General Household Survey (GHS). Table 2.9 in Living in Britain 1995 (SO, 1997) is the only breakdown of age of youngest dependent child by family type available. The unit of analysis (ie the base for calculating percentages) is 'all families with dependent children' rather than 'all children'.

The forthcoming Office for National Statistics publication 'Social Focus on Families', to be published by the Stationery Office in August 1997, will include a table (based on 1995 data) showing the age of the youngest dependent child by family type using the categories a) married couples b) cohabiting couples c) all couples d) lone mothers e) lone fathers f) lone parents g) all families with dependent children. As with Table 2.9, the unit of analysis is 'all families with dependent children' rather than 'all children'.

Average Earnings

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made (a) of the contribution of wage drift to the recent increase in average earnings and (b) of the current methods employed by the ONS in its seasonal adjustments. [4577]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Ruth Kelly, dated 24 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the contributions of wage drift to the recent increase in average earnings and the current methods of seasonal adjustment employed by the ONS.

It is difficult to decompose reliably whole economy average earnings into wage drift and pay settlements because we do not have adequate information on whole economy settlements. Consequently, ONS does not estimate the contribution wage drift makes to increases in average earnings. We monitor the general level of settlements in the economy, which have been relatively stable over the last year or so. This suggests that recent increases in average earnings have been, in part, due to wage drift and particularly larger bonus payments, especially in the financial services sector.

The ONS currently publishes a seasonally adjusted series of average earnings growth and an underlying rate, which attempts to adjust for temporary influences such as arrears of pay and variations in the timing of bonus payments. A recent review of the monthly wages and salaries survey, from which earnings statistics are derived, recommended that ONS should consider moving to X-11 ARIMA seasonal adjustment software for earnings data; this is currently being evaluated. X-11 ARIMA is one ONS's standard method of seasonally adjusting time series.

Unemployment

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure that the true level of unemployment at ward level in Rotherham will be reflected under the proposed new method of measuring employment. [5006]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Dennis MacShane, dated 24 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the introduction of a monthly version of the Labour Force Survey.

I am responsible for deciding the form, coverage and timing of release of statistics issued by ONS, taking into account the views of customers. ONS consulted on the future presentation of labour market statistics; the consultation exercise was launched through an article in the Labour Market Trends published on 8 May. Comments on the proposals should have been sent to ONS by 14 June.

The proposals set out for consultation reflect the House of Commons Employment Select Committee recommendation that more prominence should be given to the measure of unemployment which is based on the internationally agreed ILO definition.

ONS is committed to providing the statistics that users need and will maintain existing outputs wherever possible.

Low Pay

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in the Colchester parliamentary constituency were paid at rates below (a) £4, (b) £3.50 and (c) £3 per hour, at the latest date for which figures are available. [5001]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Bob Russell, dated 24 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on earnings in the Colchester parliamentary constituency.

The latest information, from the New Earrings Survey (NES) April 1996, precedes the creation of Colchester parliamentary constituency. Data for the areas prior to the last General Election are given in the table below.

Spending Review

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list categories of assets which will form part of the proposed Government inventory in the comprehensive spending review; what method of valuation is to be employed; if the national gold reserves will be included; and what method will be employed for their valuation. [4216]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 19 June 1997]: The Government has not yet finalised which categories of assets to include in the national asset registers or what basis of valuation will be employed. An announcement will be made in due course.

However, information on the amount held in the national gold reserves is already available. It is published monthly in the Bank of England's "Monetary and Financial Statistics" and in the International monetary fund's publication "International Financial Statistics". A conservative basis is adopted for the valuation of the gold reserves: the reserves are revalued at the end of March each year on the basis of 75 per cent. of the average London fixing price for the three months up to the end of March or at 75 per cent. of its final fixing price on the last working day in March whichever gives the lower price.

Privatisation

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the policy of Her Majesty's Government on privatisation. [675]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 5 June 1997]: Privatisation will be considered, on its merits, where it is in the public interest to do so.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Amsterdam Treaty

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those articles and Protocols of the provisional treaty of Amsterdam for whose implementation primary legislation will be required; and when he expects to publish the necessary Bill. [5011]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The draft Treaty of Amsterdam is not yet in final form, and needs further technical work before it can be submitted for signature by all Member States. After signature of the Treaty, which is planned for October, primary legislation will be required before the United Kingdom ratifies it. We anticipate that such legislation would need to add to the list of Community Treaties in the European Communities Act 1972 all parts of the new Treaty, including Protocols, except those relating to the intergovernmental pillars. However, it is too soon to say when a Bill might be published or what its precise contents will be.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for parliamentary scrutiny of the Treaty of Amsterdam.[5094]

Mr. Henderson: A Bill will be required before the UK ratifies the Treaty of Amsterdam. In the meantime we have deposited for parliamentary scrutiny and placed in the libraries of the House a provisional version of the draft Treaty circulated by the Netherlands Presidency. As indicated in the conclusions of the Amsterdam European Council, the necessary final legal editing and harmonisation of the texts must now be completed, with a view to signature of the Treaty in October.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list under the treaty of Amsterdam the (a) areas in and (b) articles under which a group of member states of the European Union may proceed with any description of common arrangements or legislation, which currently would require unanimous assent; and what representations Her Majesty's Government made in respect of those articles at the conference. [5012]

Mr. Henderson: The conditions and limitations on the scope of flexibility are as set out in general clauses inserted into the Treaty of European Union: Article 5a of the European Community Treaty; and Article K12 of the Treaty on European Union. Article J13a of the Treaty on European Union establishes a constructive abstention mechanism in the Common Foreign and Security Policy.

We made clear in the Intergovernmental Conference that we accepted the need for enhanced flexibility provisions but we believed the scope of such provisions in the Community pillar should be limited, and that any Member State should, in all pillars, where its key national interests were affected, be able to prevent flexible actions taking place. We achieved those objectives.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which areas currently resolved under unanimity are to be transferred to qualified majority voting under the final Amsterdam treaty text. [4997]

Mr. Henderson: The following areas currently resolved under unanimity are to be transferred to Qualified Majority Voting under the Amsterdam treaty:

Article 45 (3): Compensatory aid for imports of raw materials.

Article 56 (2): Coordination of provisions laid down by law, regulation or administrative action for special treatment for foreign nationals (right of establishment).

Article 130i (1): Adoption of the research framework programme.

Article 130i (2): Adapting or supplementing the research framework programme.

Article 130o: Setting up of joint undertakings in R&T development.

There will also be QMV for implementing decisions and decisions on the basis of the Common Foreign and Security Policy as provided for by Article J13. However, a Member State may prevent a vote from being taken for important and stated reasons of national interest, whereupon the decision may be referred to the European Council for decision by unanimity.

The flexibility provisions in Articles 5a (Community Pillar) and K12 (Justice and Home Affairs) are also subject to qualified majority voting. However a similar national veto mechanism applies.

The new Articles B (2) (b) (i) and (iii) (some visa questions) in the new chapter on free movement of persons, asylum and immigration shall also be subject to QMV. The UK will not be obliged to take part in co-operation under this chapter.

European Commission (School Packs)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria determine the material included in school packs sent out by the European Commission Office in London; and in what circumstances external bodies may submit material for distribution via the European Commission Office. [4908]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This is a matter for the European Commission.

European Union (Public Image)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much money was spent on programmes designed to improve the public image of (a) the European Union and (b) the Single Currency in 1996; and if he will list the projects involved. [4909]

Mr. Doug Henderson: On the basis that the question is referring to expenditure from the EC budget, a total of 113 million ecu was committed in 1996 for information and communication activities under Title B3-3. Of this, 50 million ecu was spent on Budget line B3-306, which covers a number of specific information programmes, including to publicise the euro.

The EC Budget sets out Commission spending on information activities by broad categories (or Budget lines) within Title B3-3. Details of the individual projects funded from these lines are not published in consolidated form by the Commission.

Montevideo Convention

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the cases at the International Court of Justice to which the United Kingdom has been a party since 1967, to which the Montevideo convention on the Rights and Duties of States applied. [5007]

Mr. Doug Henderson: There have been no such cases.

Former Prisoners of War (Japan)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which representatives he has met of former prisoners of war of the Japanese; and what discussions he has had with representatives of the Japanese Government in regard to compensation to such former prisoners of war; and if he will make a statement. [5078]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 2 June at column 86 to the hon. Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew) by the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

The Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs invited representatives of the former prisoners of war and civilian internees to a meeting which took place on 3 June.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed the strong feelings held by many in this country about the former prisoners of war with the Japanese Foreign Minister when they met on 21 June. We will continue to maintain close contact with the Japanese Government on this issue.

Indonesia (Arms Exports)

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the export of arms to Indonesia. [4996]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary announced on 22 May at column 135 an urgent review of the detailed criteria used in considering licence applications for the export of conventional arms worldwide. Countries will be judged against the new criteria.

Saudi Arabia

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held with the government of Saudi Arabia concerning human rights; and if he will make a statement. [4765]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs discussed human rights, among other matters, with the Saudi Ambassador on 21 May. We look forward to having a more thorough discussion with the Government of Saudi Arabia at the earliest opportunity on this and a wide range of other issues of interest to us.

Diplomatic Immunity

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many serious offences were committed in the United Kingdom in 1996

by persons entitled to immunity; and how many foreign diplomats or members of their families were withdrawn from their posts in the United Kingdom in the past year as a result of alleged offences. [5551]

Mr. Doug Henderson: From a diplomatic community of over 17,000 persons, thirty four alleged serious offences by persons entitled to immunity were drawn to the attention of this Department in 1996. "Serious Offences" are defined in accordance with the Report to the Foreign Affairs Committee "The Abuse of Diplomatic Immunities and Privileges (1985)" as offences which fall into the category which in certain circumstances attract a maximum penalty of 6 months imprisonment or more: the majority involved drinking and driving and shoplifting.

Six diplomats or members of their families were withdrawn at this Department's request from posts in the United Kingdom as a result of alleged offences, compared with five the previous year.

Cash Limits

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes he proposes to make in his Department's cash limits and running cost limits for 1997–98. [5552]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate the following changes will be made.

The cash limit for Class II, Vote 1 (Overseas Representation) will be increased by £225,000 from £619,601,00 to £619,826,000. The increase is required to take in a transfer of £225,000 (Other Current Expenditure) from the Cabinet Office for costs incurred on their behalf.

The gross running costs limit on Class II, Vote 1 will be increased by £3,250,000 from £524,020,000 to £527,270,000.

There is a requirement to provide for new costs and income associated with the Hong Kong Ethnic Minorities Citizens Unit and increased visa costs and income associated with new regimes in Colombia and Ecuador. All increases in provision will be fully offset by extra receipts, and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Malawi

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the projects supported by Britain in Malawi in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement on aid to Malawi. [5016]

Mr. Foulkes: I am placing in the Library of the House a list of projects supported under the bilateral aid programme to Malawi between 1992–93 and 1996–97. A Country Aid Policy Statement for Malawi was produced in 1995. In 1995 Britain provided to Malawi about £30 million in bilateral aid and £8 million through the European Community. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development has recently approved £15 million in programme aid to help Malawi pay teachers' salaries.

Internation Development White Paper

Mr. Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress is being made with the White Paper on International Development. [5554]

Ms Short: It remains our intention to publish a White Paper on International Development in the Autumn. A process of widespread consultation is underway. I am delighted that there is to be a debate on International Development policies on Tuesday 1 July, during which hon. Members will have an opportunity to feed their thoughts and ideas into the Paper.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Church of England Pensions Board

Mr. Flynn: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will take measures to ensure that the Church of England Pensions Board responds to the letter from the Parish Protection Board, dated 7 November 1996; if he will place a copy of the reply in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [4496]

Mr. Stuart Bell: This is not a matter for the Church Commissioners; it is a matter for the Church of England Pensions Board. I understand, however, that a reply was sent to the Parishes Protection Group on 18 February 1997, after consideration at a meeting of the full Pensions Board (No. 4496 in the Order Paper dated 17 June).

SCOTLAND

Cigarette Smokers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of adult (a) men and (b) women in Scotland are cigarette smokers in each 10 year age band; and if he will make a statement. [4761]

Mr. Galbraith: The estimated number and percentage of adult men and women cigarette smokers in Scotland in 1994 are provided below.

Age group	Percentage of cigarette smokers	Estimated number of cigarette smokers
Male smokers
16–24	31	99,000
25–34	30	125,000
35–44	32	112,000
45–54	31	96,000
55–64	39	99,000
65–74	25	50,000
75+	18	19,000

Age group	Percentage of cigarette smokers	Estimated number of cigarette smokers
Female smokers
16–24	25	77,000
25–34	36	148,000
35–44	32	113,000
45–54	30	96,000
55–64	30	84,000
65–74	21	54,000
75+	14	30,000

1. The percentage of cigarette smokers has been calculated from the 1994 General Household Survey conducted by the Office for National Statistics.

2. The number of smokers has been estimated using Registrar General for Scotland mid-year population estimates as at 30 June 1994, and the percentage of smokers.

3. Percentages have been rounded to the nearest whole figure. The estimates of the number of smokers have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Pensions Agency

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the key performance targets he has set for the Scottish Office Pensions Agency for 1997–98. [5546]

Mr. Dewar: I have set the Scottish Office Pensions Agency the following key performance targets for 1997–98:

To ensure that all awards and transfer payments are accurate to within 0.5 per cent. of their value.

To pay on time 99.5 per cent. of all pensions and lump sums where the target date for receipt of claims is met.

To make transfer payments within 16 working days of members' final instructions to transfer pensions rights.

To ensure that 96 per cent. of contributions due from employers of teachers are received within 15 days of the end of the month to which they relate.

To reduce total identified operating costs per member/beneficiary by 6 per cent.

Prison Service

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what targets he has set for the Scottish Prison Service for 1997–98. [5547]

Mr. Dewar: I have set the Chief Executive of the Scottish Prison Service the following targets:

Performance measures	Key targets
The number of prisoners unlawfully at large.	No A Category prisoners should escape. The number of escapes by B Category prisoners should be no higher than 1.7 per 1,000 prisoners. The number of escapes by C Category prisoners should be no higher than 2 per 1,000 prisoners.
The number of serious assaults on staff and prisoners.	The number of serious assaults on staff should be no higher than 3 per 1,000 staff. The number of serious assaults on other prisoners should be less than the 1996–97 outturn.
Basic quality of life for prisoners	By end March 1998 70 per cent. of prisoners will have access to forms of night sanitation.
The amount of available opportunities for prisoners' self development.	To ensure that 450 prisoners have completed a cognitive skills programme and 70 prisoners have completed a sex offender programme during 1997–98.
Average annual cost per prisoner place.	To keep costs within £28,317 per place available for use.
The level of absence through staff sickness.	To reduce the average number of days lost per person per year through staff sickness to 15.

Capital Receipts

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each local authority the actual annual capital receipts for 1996–97, indicating in each case receipts from (a) right to buy, (b) stock transfer and (c) land sales; and if he will indicate for each authority and for each category of receipts the annual targets set out in the estimates at the start of the year. [3308]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 17 June 1997]: Information on local authority housing capital receipts in 1996–97 is set out in the table. A target of £22 million was set for receipts from stock transfer, but no receipts were achieved.

Schools

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the total value of balances held by state schools in Scotland. [5068]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 23 June 1997]: The information sought is not held centrally.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Low Pay

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time employees at her Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4.00 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (iii) less than £3.00 an hour. [4195]

Mr. Murphy: The information requested from the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments is listed:

1. The year in which the provision became available is not available for all schools and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

2. The information is for nursery units only.

3. Expenditure details are only available from 1991–92 (when formula funding was introduced) to 1994–95. Expenditure statements for 1995–96 and 1996–97 are not yet available. The figures relate to the total expenditure at each school as it is not possible to disaggregate expenditure on a nursery unit from expenditure on the rest of the school.

4. Not all of the new provision will be available in September: it will come onstream over the course of the year. There are likely to be further approvals under these programmes.

Government Training Centres

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which Government training centres have (a) achieved and (b) not been awarded the job skills quality management status. [4240]

Mr. Worthington: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 19 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question about the number of Training Centres which have reached the standards required under the Jobskills Quality Management System (JQMS).

There are ten Training Centres in Northern Ireland and to date three, Dundonald, Lisburn and Omagh, have been awarded JQMS. The remaining Centres at Ballymena, Craigavon, Enniskillen, Felden, Maydown, Newry and Springtown are on line to achieve JQMS before 31 December 1997 in line with a staged implementation of this new standard.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Southern Area Health Board Headquarters

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals there are for the future use of the former headquarters of the Southern Area Health Board at Carn, Craigavon; and if she will make a statement. [4241]

Mr. Worthington: The former Southern Health and Social Services Board Headquarters at 20 Seagoe Industrial Estate, Portadown was vacated and became surplus to requirements at the end of 1996. In accordance with Government procedures for the disposal of surplus land and property, the site and the portable buildings were advertised for sale on the open market in January 1997. A sale was agreed and the legal formalities were concluded on 21 March 1997.

Health Centres

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the names of health centres (a) owned by the Southern Area Health Board, (b) for which the Southern Area Health Board contributes a loan towards capital expenditure and (c) for which the Southern Area Health Board contributed a grant towards capital expenditure. [4245]

Mr. Worthington: Health Centres are either in the ownership of the Department of Health and Social Services or the relevant Health and Social Services Trust. Details are provided in the table. The Southern Health and Social Services Board does not contribute loans or grants towards the capital expenditure of any health centre. At present a board may only provide financial support in relation to Health Centre premises which have been sold to general medical practitioners.

Arts Policy

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she plans to review policy on the arts; and if she will make a statement. [4418]

Mr. Worthington: I have no plans at present for a review of arts policy in Northern Ireland. However, in conjunction with the Arts Council, I wish to promote the widest possible access to the arts, particularly for young people, and to increase the impact of the cultural sector on the economy.

Council for Voluntary Action

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to meet representatives of the Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action; and if she will make a statement. [4419]

Marjorie Mowlam: I met representatives of the Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action on Friday 20 June when I opened their annual conference in Belfast.

Targeting Social Need Policy

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to review the Targeting Social Need policy; and if she will make a statement. [4422]

Mr. Worthington: It is anticipated that recommendations on Targeting Social Need will be included in the forthcoming report by the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights on employment equality in Northern Ireland. The Government will give the fullest consideration to the Commission's recommendations, including its implications for the Targeting Social Need initiative.

Unemployment

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she plans to issue a statement concerning the consultation on long-term unemployment; and if she will make a statement. [4423]

Mr. Worthington: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter form Ian Walters to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 24 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question about the current consultation on long-term unemployment in Northern Ireland.

The initial stage of the consultation process has been completed with the publication of a consultative document and a series of public seminars across Northern Ireland. Those attending the seminars had the chance to discuss long-term unemployment with Agency officials and indeed with each other. In addition, we have received over 80 written submissions on the document and are currently in the process of reviewing each of them.

As we continue the review we will take full account of the Government's Welfare to Work proposals and the priority attached to them.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Courts (Essex)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the future of the county court in Chelmsford. [4897]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 24 June 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the future of Chelmsford County Court.

I can confirm that there are no plans to move or close Chelmsford County Court.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on plans to reorganise the (a) county courts and (b) magistrates' courts in Essex, with special reference to the Chelmsford area. [4894]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor is currently considering a proposal to close the Braintree and Bishop Stortford County Courts. If these courts are closed, some work previously dealt with at the Braintree court might be dealt with in Chelmsford.

Responsibility for the civil and higher criminal courts network falls to the Court Service which must constantly monitor and review the viability of its resources in the light of changing business needs and workload trends. Decisions on any proposals for change will be made by the Lord Chancellor taking account of all the relevant factors.

Turning to the question of magistrates' courts in Essex, there are no current plans for closures in the area. Essex Magistrates' Courts Committee has, however, issued a consultation paper setting out a number of options for the reorganisation of petty sessional divisions in the County. The consultation period closes on 30 June. One of these options is that the current Chelmsford and Maldon and Witham PSDs should be amalgamated, together with some or all of the Braintree and Halstead and Brentwood PSDs, into a single PSD.

The MCC has indicated that this new PSD could be served by one courthouse to be centred at Chelmsford or possibly at Witham.

Decisions concerning the future and number of magistrates' courts in their area are for the relevant MCC to determine. A local authority that contributes financially may appeal to the Lord Chancellor against a proposed closure. The procedure for such appeals is set out in section 56 of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997. In the absence of an appeal, however, the Lord Chancellor plays no part in the process.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals he has to move the (a) county court and (b) magistrates' court from Chelmsford to elsewhere in Essex, indicating the place; and if he will make a statement. [4895]

Mr. Hoon: I have no proposals to move either the county court or the magistrates' court from Chelmsford.

Responsibility for the civil and higher criminal courts network falls to the Court Service which must constantly monitor and review the viability of its resources in the light of changing business needs and workload trends. Decisions on any proposals for change will be made by the Lord Chancellor taking account of all the relevant factors.

A local authority that contributes financially may appeal to the lord chancellor against a proposed closure. The procedure for such appeals is set out in section 56 of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997. In the absence of an appeal, however, the Lord Chancellor plays no part in the process.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the future of the magistrates' court in Chelmsford. [4896]

Mr. Hoon: I have no proposals to move either the county court or the magistrates' court from Chelmsford. Decisions concerning the future and number of magistrates' court in its area are for the relevant MCC to determine. A local authority that contributes financially may appeal to the Lord Chancellor against a proposed closure. The procedure for such appeals is set out in section 56 of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997. In the absence of an appeal, however, the Lord Chancellor plays no part in the process.

Running Costs

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make changes to the running costs limit for Class VIII Vote 1 for 1997–98. [5473]

Mr. Hoon: The running costs limit for Class VIII Vote 1 has been reduced by £73,000 from £427,754,000 to £427,681,000 to reflect a transfer to the Cabinet Office for editorial support for the hard copy publications functions of the Statutory Publications Office.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Town Centre Management Schemes

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to encourage town centre management schemes. [4010]

Mr. Raynsford: PPG 6 (Town Centres and Retail Developments) actively encourages local authorities to prepare town centre management initiatives. To help facilitate this the Government provide core funding for the Association of Town Centre Management (ATCM), which has a lead role in the promotion of town centre management. The Government have also provided financial support for the ATCM research reports on "Town Improvement Zones" (undertaken by KPMG), "Managing urban open spaces", undertaken by Chesterton's, and "Town Centre Partnerships: a survey of good practice", undertaken by Hillier Parker and URBED.

Unfit Homes (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) when he proposes to publish targets for the reduction in the number of unfit homes in Portsmouth; [4294]

(2) what representations he has received from Portsmouth City Council concerning the number of unfit homes in Portsmouth; [4295]

(3) how many unfit homes there are in Portsmouth; and what plans he has to reduce their number. [4293]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department has received no representations from Portsmouth city council concerning the number of unfit homes in Portsmouth. Local authorities in England are asked to provide estimates of dwellings in their area which are unfit on the annual housing investment programme returns. Portsmouth's latest HIP return reported that, on 1 April 1996, 340 of its own dwellings and 5,300 private sector dwellings were unfit. Figures for other public sector bodies and housing associations were not provided. Local authorities are responsible for taking action to tackle unfit homes within their area, including the setting and publishing of any targets for reduction, within the context of their housing strategy and investment programmes.

Environmental Taskforce

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what consultation he will undertake on his proposals for an environmental taskforce; and if he will consult with non-Governmental environmental organisations. [4480]

Angela Eagle: The Government are committed to delivering the New Deal programme in partnership with other organisations in the voluntary, private and public sectors, including non-governmental environmental organisations, and will consult those organisations shortly.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the time scale for the creation of regional development agencies. [4789]

Angela Eagle: We propose to bring forward legislation in the autumn with a view to the agencies beginning operation on 1 April 1999.

Sex Offenders

Ms Hewitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will issue guidelines to local authorities on how they should handle applications for local authority tenancies from individuals who have been convicted of sex offences against children; [4815]

(2) if he will review the responsibilities and powers of local authorities where an individual who has been convicted of sex offences against children (a) moves into the authority's area and (b) applies for a local authority tenancy; and if he will make a statement. [4814]

Mr. Raynsford: We recognise that this is a matter of great concern. It is being actively considered by my Department in close co-operation with other relevant Government Departments and the representatives of local authorities and housing professionals. Local housing authorities already have the power to decide which classes of person qualify or do not qualify to be included in their housing registers and whether to allocate tenancies to such persons. The Home Office is consulting other Government Departments, the police and other practitioners about guidance to be issued to the police on the management of the information acquired under the Sex Offenders Act 1997. The guidance will cover the disclosure of information to third parties. The representatives of local authorities and the housing profession are considering whether to issue separate advice on this matter to local authorities and will discuss this with my Department.

Housing Estates (Pavements)

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to lay down guidelines to ensure that housing estates are not built without pavements. [4611]

Mr. Raynsford: General guidance relating to the design of residential roads and footpaths is set out in my Department's "Design Bulletin 32", issued in revised form in 1992. This advises that, when designing the layouts for new housing development, appropriate provision should be made for pedestrians. It will be a matter for local judgment about how this might best be achieved, taking account of local circumstances. The bulletin recognises that in some cases surfaces shared by pedestrians, cyclists and motorists may be appropriate provided they allow for safe use by all users.

Environment Agency

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the estimated total staffing level for the Environment Agency in 1996; what are his estimates for (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and

(c) 1999; and what additional responsibilities the Environment Agency will be taking on during this period. [4729]

Angela Eagle: The staffing level of the Environment Agency is a matter for the Agency. The Agency's 1997–98 Corporate Plan shows the following total staffing figures: 1996–97 budget 9,450; 1997–98 plan 9,300; 1998–99 plan 9,100; and 1999–2000 plan 8,950. The 1998–99 Corporate Plan is in the course of preparation. The Government would discuss any changes in responsibilities with the Agency and would expect to announce any major additions.

Composting Sites

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the results of research commissioned by the Environment Agency on bio-aerosol production of commercial composting sites will be available. [4598]

Angela Eagle: The results of the research on bio-aerosol production at commercial composting sites, originally commissioned by the Department and now managed by the Environment Agency, are expected to be available early in the autumn.

Solar Homes

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide incentives to local authorities to examine the buildings of solar homes. [4597]

Angela Eagle: Local planning authorities are required by "Planning Policy Guidance Note 22" to have regard to renewable energy—including solar energy. Detailed technical guidance is freely available from the DTI and my own Department on how to make the most of this energy source.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide Government funding for solar homes. [4600]

Angela Eagle: In line with its manifesto commitment to undertake a new and strong drive to develop renewable energy sources, including solar energy, the Government have announced a review of policy in this area. The review includes considerations of what would be necessary and practicable to achieve 10 per cent. of UK's electricity needs from renewables by the year 2010 and how renewables can make an effective contribution to meeting requirements for future greenhouse gas reduction commitments. In the meantime, the Government's new and renewable energy programme, currently under way, will continue.

Oil Extraction (Atlantic Ocean)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what procedures are in place to ensure that proposals for future oil extraction in the Atlantic are compatible with the requirements of the European Habitats directive. [4727]

Angela Eagle: The DTI carries out a full consultation with the Joint Nature Conservation Committee before offering any licences for oil extraction. Indeed, as a result of advice received from JNCC on the 17th licensing round that the Flannan Isles could be affected by certain blocks of licences, DTI withdrew those blocks from the round. Offers of licences are usually conditional upon the acceptance of special conditions to protect environmental sensitivities and the interests of users of the sea. This process is analogous to the requirements of article 6(2) and 6(3) of the Habitats Directive.

Zoo Licensing Act 1981

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to review the Zoo Licensing Act 1981; and what arrangements he will make for consultation on that review. [4606]

Angela Eagle: We are currently considering how best to take forward our commitment to aim for the highest standards of care for animals in zoos. We shall be looking shortly at the operation of the Zoo Licensing Act and considering what changes may be required. As part of this process, we will consult the relevant organisations representing zoo operators, veterinary and animal welfare interests.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list examples of best value arrangements that he is using as models to replace CCT. [4884]

Mr. Raynsford: Although a number of local authorities and others have put forward their ideas, we do not have preconceived models of best value arrangements. We intend to work with local government and other interested parties over the coming months to develop a practicable and effective best value framework which will apply the principles which we announced on 2 June. Pilot projects, which will include a variety of approaches, will play an important part in this. We will shortly be inviting local authorities to bid to undertake pilot work.

Footpaths and Bridleways

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what initiatives he proposes to assist local authorities to maintain public footpaths and bridleways. [4999]

Angela Eagle: We attach great importance to the maintenance of footpaths and bridleways. We propose to look closely at the adequacy of existing measures to see whether further initiatives are needed.

Highway authorities already have a statutory duty to maintain most footpaths, bridleways and byways. The Countryside Commission is assisting them through the Parish Paths Partnership scheme, which gives grants and advice to parishes to encourage them to participate in the better management of footpaths and bridleways in their areas. The Commission also provides authorities with grants of up to 75 per cent. of the maintenance costs of footpaths of bridleways which form part of National Trails.

Energy Efficiency

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he plans to take to ensure that the majority of energy efficiency works are carried out in those homes which are most in need of improvement. [5151]

Angela Eagle: Local authorities have to draw up strategies for improving the energy efficiency of all the residential accommodation in their areas under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995. In assessing them my right hon. Friend will expect an approach which targets those properties where the need is greatest, and he will, where necessary, require authorities to modify their strategies. Energy efficiency will also be a factor taken into account when assessing authorities as part of the housing investment programme.

Leghold Traps

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what is his policy on the use of leghold traps (a) on land and (b) in water; [4527]

(2) what representations he has received concerning the United Kingdom's position on leghold traps and fur imports; and if he will make a statement. [4528]

Angela Eagle: Leghold traps have been banned in the United Kingdom for more than 40 years. The Government fully support efforts to improve the welfare of trapped animals in general and believes that the phasing out of leghold traps is an essential element of this.

The Government received representations from the European Commission and the Government of Canada on the United Kingdom's position on the Commission's proposed "framework agreement on humane trapping standards". Representations were also received from a number of animal welfare bodies—including the RSPCA and the International Fund for Animal Welfare—and from the British Fur Trade Association. We received more than 20,000 letters and postcards from the public urging the Government to reject the agreement.

The Government made clear its intention before the Environment Council meeting that we would vote against the agreement since we believed that it did not go far enough in banning the use of leghold traps. Several other member states shared our reservations but no decision was taken on the Commission's proposal at the meeting.

Council Tax (Carer's Discount)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate his Department has made of the proportion of eligible people who are currently claiming the carer's discount for council tax bills. [4297]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department has not made such an estimate. Local authorities are under a duty to ensure that discounts are granted to the right households.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps his Department has taken to ensure that eligible people on (a) disability living allowance and (b) the higher rate of attendance allowance are aware of their entitlement to (i) the carer's discount for council tax bills and (ii) the facility to backdate claims to April 1993. [4307]

Mr. Raynsford: The council tax regulations require local authorities to include with council tax bills information on the circumstances when a bill may be subject to discount. Local authorities are also under a duty to make sure that discounts are being granted to the right households. If somebody is entitled to a discount but has not received one, local authorities must backdate the discount to the date when entitlement first arose. The Department has also produced a leaflet "Council Tax: A Guide to your Bill" which explains the council tax and the circumstances when a carer may be disregarded for the purposes of a discount. The leaflet is made available to the general public and has been distributed to local authorities and voluntary organisations.

Police Wildlife Liaison Officers

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many wildlife liaison officers are currently in post for each police force. [4623]

Angela Eagle: A definitive list of Police Wildlife Liaison Officers (PWLOs) is not held centrally, but I understand that most forces have at least one full or part-time PWLO, and that the total number of officers who deal with wildlife enquiries is about 350. These officers mainly carry out their wildlife responsibilities voluntarily and in addition to their day-to-day police duties.

The allocation of responsibilities within forces is for each chief constable to decide, having regard to all their policing obligations, including the investigation of wildlife offences.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what training, guidance and expert advice is made available to police wildlife liaison officers. [4625]

Angela Eagle: Training and guidance is provided within forces, and is also available from Government Departments and agencies and non-Government sources.

The annual Police Wildlife Liaison Officer' conference provides an important opportunity for training. Speakers cover a wide range of issues and subject areas and Police officers have an unparalleled opportunity to share experience and expertise.

The Partnership for Action Against Wildlife Crime supports the network of Police Wildlife Liaison Officers. It published a handbook "Wildlife Crime: A Guide to Wildlife Law Enforcement in the UK" at the end of last year, and will publish guidance on the use of DNA evidence in wildlife investigations shortly.

Work on identifying training needs is being carried out by the Partnership, and many of its members, including my Department, contribute actively to investigations by providing advice and expertise. Separate work is also underway in the Police Service, under the direction of the Wildlife Advisor to the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 (Police)

Mr. Hincliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to review the policing aspects of the operation of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. [4626]

Angela Eagle: The Partnership for Action Against Wildlife Crime submitted recommendations for changes to the enforcement provisions of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 earlier this year. Eleven recommendations were made including giving the courts the option of imprisoning wildlife criminals, and facilitating the use of DNA evidence in wildlife investigations.

The recommendations were circulated for consultation in March 1997. The Department is considering the comments received and the Government's response will be published shortly.

Housing, London

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made for each London borough of (a) the current year's capital expenditure, (b) the capital requirement for urgent repair and refurbishment and (c) capital spending required on new building to house all homeless people for which the authority is responsible. [4411]

Mr Raynsford [holding answer 23 June 1997]: Local authorities are allocated resources for capital investment in housing under the housing investment programme (HIP). A table showing allocations to London boroughs for 1997–98 is as follows. In addition local authorities received resources for capital expenditure on housing via the single regeneration budget and the capital challenge pilot and can also use their own resources, such as useable capital receipts.

As part of the HIP round local authorities are asked to submit expenditure plans and information on need for capital works. The relevant HIP forms for each authority for 1997–98 are available in the Library.

The Government are committed to increased investment through the capital receipts initiative, and has recently issued a consultation paper to all local authorities. Under this initiative local authorities will be expected to consider appropriate schemes to meet needs including the repair and refurbishment of existing stock and the provision of new homes to meet the needs of homeless households.

OECD Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions by which procedures the House will be able to scrutinise the OECD Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [3972]

Mrs. Roche: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has primary responsibility for the OECD Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI). Two Explanatory Memoranda on the MAI have already been put before Select Committees by this Department—dated 31 March 1995 and 6 March 1997—copies of which are available in the Library. My Department will continue to follow the scrutiny procedures for international treaties that the UK and the EC are negotiating.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the dates, routes and nature of aircraft flights transporting nuclear waste which have taken place in United Kingdom air space to date. [4802]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

Since January 1990 there have been six flights carrying small amounts of nuclear waste into the United Kingdom. Five of these shipments were in 1993 and the other was in 1994, and involved UK waste arising from fabrication of fuel pins as part of the European Fast Reactor programme. The pins were fabricated in France and the associated waste was returned to the UK on these flights. Since 1994 there have been no flights involving the transport of nuclear waste in the UK. All shipments of nuclear material comply fully with national and international regulations with regard to safety and security and are in accordance with IAEA recommendations.

Information on any such flights prior to 1990 is not easily available and would incur disproportionate costs.

Road Accidents

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures his Department plans to take to reduce the number of road accidents; and if he will make a statement. [4532]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department is committed to giving road safety a high priority and is currently reviewing its road safety strategy. We shall be announcing new measures from time to time. Road and other transport safety issues will be among the important subjects covered in our fundamental policy review leading to a White Paper on an integrated transport policy.

Cones Hotline

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 9 June, Official Report, column 315, if he will provide a breakdown of the cost of the Cones Hotline between April to September 1995. [4847]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The cost of operating the Cones Hotline in the period April to September 1995 is estimated at £20,000, broken down as follows:

Call-handling company's set-up costs	7,000
Call-handling company's operating costs	8,000
Highways Agency staff costs	5,000
Total	20,000

The figure for Highways Agency staff costs covers the transition from a contracted-out service to the in-house Highways Agency information line which began operation in September 1995.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place a copy of the Cones Hotline telephone log in the Library. [4848]

Ms Jackson: The records of calls to the Cones Hotline contain the names of callers and, in most cases, their addresses and telephone numbers. Personal information given in confidence is exempt from the commitment to provide information in the Code of Practice on Access to Government information.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 9 June, Official Report, column 315, how many calls to the Cones Hotline resulted in action by the Department or others to (a) alter the layout of road traffic cones, (b) improve signposting at roadworks, (c) review diversion routes, (d) re-paint road markings and (e) investigate road lighting at roadworks. [4806]

Ms Jackson: The records are not sufficiently detailed to give an accurate answer to this question.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 9 June, Official Report, column 315, (a) how many and (b) what percentage of telephone calls made to the Cones Hotline between June 1992 and September 1995 were specifically about traffic cones. [4849]

Ms Jackson: This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. In its first year of operation (September 1995 to August 1996) the Highways Agency information line, which replaced the Cones Hotline, received 319 calls specifically about road traffic cones about 4 per cent. of all calls.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 9 June, Official Report, column 315, how many staff were employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time to run the Cones Hotline between March 1994 and September 1995. [4860]

Ms Jackson: From March 1994 to March 1995 one member of staff worked full-time on the Cones Hotline during normal office hours. Weekend and out of hours cover was provided by the Department of Transport's duty officer. From April 1995 to September 1995 the Cones Hotline was staffed by an external contractor. From July to September 1995 transitional arrangements were managed by three staff in the Highways Agency.

Variable Speed Limiters

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will estimate the (a) number and (b) percentage of vehicles licensed in the United Kingdom currently equipped with variable speed limiters; and if he will make a statement; [4529]

(2) if he will list the (a) dates, (b) locations, (c) duration and (d) results of trials undertaken by his Department into the use of variable speed limiters in vehicles; and if he will make a statement; [4530]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of the relationship between variable speed limiters and the total number of (a) road accidents and (b) fatalities recorded; and if he will make a statement. [4531]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Several different makes of vehicle speed limiter are available. All are designed to limit a vehicle's maximum speed and are required by law to be fitted to large goods vehicles and coaches. Some makers of speed limiter allow the driver to set a lower limit than the maximum but it is not possible to give an estimate of the number or percentage of vehicles fitted with speed limiters which have this additional feature.

Research has been commissioned by my Department to examine the feasibility of equipping vehicles with speed limiters which may be controlled by devices outside the vehicle, for example, by roadside transponders. It is too early to draw any conclusions from this work. In addition, we are monitoring trails taking place in other countries but at present no specific plans exist to trial externally controlled variable speed limiting equipment on public roads in the UK.

We have made no assessment of the relationship between existing variable speed limiters and numbers of road accidents in the UK.

Cycling (London)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the total expenditure in the current year by each London borough on cycling measures; and what proportion of this is borne by central Government. [4762]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Central Government are providing £4 million to London authorities in the current financial year, to support their expenditure on the development of the London cycle network and the Thames cycle route. The following table of figures, copies of which are being placed in the Library of the House, gives the breakdown of this sum by authority. The London authorities are able to incur additional expenditure on such measures by drawing on their own resources, but they are not required to declare to what extent, if any, they will be doing so.

A27 Polegate Bypass

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy in respect of the construction of the A27 Polegate bypass; and if he will make a statement. [5196]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Transport announced last week that he would be taking forward our manifesto commitment to carry out a strategic review of the roads programme. The A27 Polegate bypass scheme is part of the Weald and Downland design, build, finance and operate (DBFO) project which is one of 12 cases in which there are urgent decisions pending. These will be considered in an accelerated review. Decisions will be announced in July.

Air Services (London)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to (a) maintain and (b) improve access by air to London from regional United Kingdom airports. [4400]

Ms Glenda Jackson: A wide range of services connect regional airports to London in a flourishing market. Ministers are considering what options might be available and appropriate to support and develop regional services.

Cycling

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what additional financial support is available to assist local authorities to encourage cycling within local integrated transport strategies. [5384]

Dr. Gavin Strang: It is Government policy to encourage cycling. The sum of £79 million has been allocated to local authorities in 1997–98 for their integrated transport packages. Virtually all the packages include measures to promote cycling. The Department will continue to support these initiatives in future, as far as resources allow. It is not possible at this stage to predict the levels of funding that will be available in 1998–99 and later years.

Integrated Transport Policy

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the White Paper on the long-term strategy for an integrated transport policy to be published; and if he will make a statement. [5162]

Dr. Strang: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 5 June 1997, Official Report, column 226.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the (a) desirability and (b) feasibility of internalising social and environmental externalities within each transport mode. [4882]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government welcome the principle of internalising the external costs of transport which encourages more environmentally friendly, fairer and more efficient use of transport. However, the Government also recognise the uncertainties and difficulties of implementation, and supports the need for further study and debate on the issues raised. For example, the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions is at the forefront of research trying to place monetary values on the environmental impact of transport and other activities.

Warsaw Convention Compensation

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which airlines flying into and out of the United Kingdom have (a) fully waived, (b) partially waived and (c) not waived their right under the Warsaw convention to limit compensation payable in respect of passengers injured or killed whilst travelling with them. [5122]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have placed a copy of the information required in the Library.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Warsaw convention limits on compensation for death or personal injury. [5121]

Ms Jackson: The United Kingdom has long recognised that the limit of liability for death or personal injury to passengers contained in the 1929 Warsaw convention was inadequate, and has adopted for the purposes of national law the higher limits set out in the Hague and Montreal protocols. Consequently, airlines registered in the UK are currently required to accept a liability limit of not less than 100,000 special drawing rights—approximately £85,000.

Earlier this year the UK supported the European Commission's proposals for a regulation on air carrier liability in case of accidents. This will require airlines to accept strict liability for passenger death or injury up to the ECU equivalent of 100,000 SDRs, with a fault-based regime for higher claims, subject to no upper limit. The new regulation, which also places obligations on both EU and non-EU carriers to make more prominent disclosure of their liability arrangements, is expected to come into force during 1998.

An United Nations specialised agency, the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO), which has responsibility for these matters, is currently preparing a new convention which will replace the 1929 Warsaw convention and introduce much more realistic limits of liability which will not be restricted to passenger death or injury. The UK participated fully in the recent meeting of the Legal Committee and a diplomatic conference is expected to take place next year during which ICAO members will vote to adopt the new convention.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Birmingham Northern Relief Road is subject to a penalty clause if the scheme is not approved. [4982]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The risk of the public inquiry outcome rests with the concessionaire.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he intends to review the proposed Birmingham Northern Relief Road in the context of the Government's integrated approach to transport environmental planning; [4983]

(2) if the Birmingham Northern Relief Road will be included in the moratorium on road building. [4994]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We announced a comprehensive roads review on 19 June. The Birmingham Northern Relief Road is one of the 12 cases that will be the subject of an accelerated review.

Traffic Control

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment his Department has made of the impact on traffic control of (a) mini roundabouts and (b) road humps; and if he will make a statement. [5080]

Ms Jackson: The Transport Research Laboratory has recently completed for the Department a major study of the safety aspects of mini roundabouts in relation to traffic flow. The results will be published later this year.

The Department has a programme of research into the effect of road humps and other traffic calming measures on traffic. Road humps have been found to be effective in reducing vehicle speeds and hence accidents in residential areas. The results of this research are published in the form of research reports and traffic advisory leaflets. A selection of leaflets relevant to road humps have been placed in the library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mr. McCall

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will set aside the decision of the disability appeal tribunal held at Chester on 22 April concerning Mr. McCall of Broughton, near Chester, and if she will make a statement. [1115]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Neither I, nor any other Minister, has the power to intervene in the decision of independent adjudicating authorities. However, it is open to an appellant who is dissatisfied with the decision of a Disability Appeal Tribunal either to apply to have that decision set aside or to seek leave to appeal against it on a point of law to a Social Security Commissioner. Statutory provisions, including time limits, apply to either course.

Absent Parents

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the maximum percentage of net income that an absent parent may be liable to pay; and if she will make a statement. [4628]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Child support assessments made under the maintenance formula are generally restricted to 30 per cent. of an absent parent's net income. Most absent parents pay significantly lower amounts, although higher percentages can apply, for example where an interim maintenance assessment has been imposed in an effort to secure the absent parent's co-operation or the absent parent is in arrears with his payments.

We will be looking closely at all aspects of child support policy over the forthcoming months.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the total number of people removed from benefit as a result of a jobseeker's allowance interview for each month since its inception. [4766]

Mr. Keith Bradley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 18 June, Official Report, columns 213–14 .

Domestic Fuel (VAT)

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the effect on (a) the average family on benefit, (b) a single pensioner and (c) a pensioner couple of the introduction of VAT on fuel at 8 per cent., taking into account (i) VAT fuel subsidy added to their benefits and (ii) the impact on the annual uprating of benefits of the inflationary effect of increasing domestic fuel prices by 8 per cent. [5200]

Mr. Keith Bradley: As part of our commitment to reducing poverty we will cut VAT on fuel from 8 to 5 per cent. the lowest possible level.

The net effect of the introduction of VAT on fuel at 8 per cent. is given in the following table:

Family type	Net effect of VAT on fuel at 8 per cent. (1997–98 prices and benefit levels)
Average family on income support (assumed to be a couple with two children aged under 11)	15p per week worse off
Single retirement pensioner	No net effect
Couple retirement pensioner	5p per week better off

1. Expenditure estimates based on the 1994–95 Family Expenditure Survey, uprated to 1997–98 levels using the fuel and light component of the Retail Prices Index.

2. Effect of VAT on domestic fuel and power on the uprating indices estimated using the 1997 weight of the fuel and light component of the Retail Prices Index.

Fraud

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she will commence provisions of the Social Security Administration (Fraud) Act 1997; and if she will make a statement. [5452]

Mr. Denham: The Government aims to rebuild confidence in a Social Security system which will support work, savings and honesty. We are developing a range of measures in order to prevent fraud from occurring in the Social Security system. We will take effective action against fraudsters.

Fraud within a system designed to help those in need is anti-social behaviour which has no place in a society where the right to benefit goes hand in hand with responsible citizenship.

We have today made a commencement order for Sections 1 to 4, 5 to 10, 12, 13, 14, 17 and 18 and most of the Schedules 1 and 2 of the Social Security Administration (Fraud) Act 1997, to come into effect on Tuesday 1 July.

This is an important step towards achieving a secure and fair system. These measures will strengthen action against Housing Benefit fraud, particularly fraud by landlords, which for too long has been allowed to go unchecked.

WALES

Class Sizes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many classes of five, six and seven-year-olds in each local education authority had more than 30 children on 1 January 1997 based on returns from the All Schools Census; and what this is as a percentage of the total number of classes of five, six, and seven-year-olds in each case. [3166]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is not collected centrally. The Schools' Census in Wales collects information on the number of classes by size of class but does not distinguish classes by age of pupils.

Nursery Education

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make a statement about the future of nursery provision in the Ponthir area of Torfaen; [3570]

(2) if he will make a statement about the future of nursery provision in Monmouthshire. [3569]

Mr. Hain: The provision of nursery education is at the discretion of local education authorities. Our aim is to ensure a free, at least part-time, place for every four-year-old whose parents want one, with targets for extending provision to three-year-olds. We shall be consulting shortly with the local authority sector and interested organisations about arrangements for early years education from April 1998.

I understand that nursery age children from Ponthir are currently receiving education in the Newport county borough council area under an arrangement with Torfaen county borough council. Torfaen will be reviewing the position for the 1997–98 school year.

Ponthir Primary School

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what applications she has received relating to Ponthir Primary School, Torfaen, under the Popular Schools Initiative. [3576]

Mr. Hain: The Department has received no applications.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about overcrowding at Ponthir Primary School. [3577]

Mr. Hain: The Department has received three representations. The responsibility for the matter rests with Torfaen county borough council.

Monnow Bridge

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the need for an additional bridge over the Monnow River in Monmouth. [3572]

Mr. Hain: The main access to the town is by the Monnow bridge on the local road network. Any proposals for an additional bridge are therefore a matter for Monmouthshire county council as local highway authority. As far as the trunk road network is concerned my present assessment is that there is no requirement for any additional crossing.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from CADW about the physical condition of Monnow Bridge, Monmouth. [3571]

Mr. Ron Davies: Monnow Bridge is a scheduled ancient monument under the provisions of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979 although it remains in use as a crossing of the River Monnow, Monmouth. Cadw: Welsh Historic Monuments is a part of my Department, and monitors the bridge on my behalf. Incidents of damage such as that recently caused by a motor vehicle are reviewed by Cadw with the county council which owns the bridge.

School Transport

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what guidance he plans to issue to local education authorities in Wales about their statutory obligations to provide transport to and from school; [3960]

(2) how many local education authorities in Wales have curtailed spending on school transport in the present year to date; by how much they have done so; and if he will make a statement; [3936]

(3) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of spending by local education authorities in Wales on school transport; [3935]

(4) what is the statutory duty on local education authorities in Wales concerning the provision of free school transport; and what representations he has received from them about their difficulties in carrying out that duty. [3934]

Mr. Hain: Although, home to school transport is the responsibility of individual local education authorities (LEAs) Welsh Office Circular 19/95, issued in May 1995, gives guidance on the statutory obligations of LEAs in their provision of home to school transport, and their discretionary powers. A copy is in the Library of the House. My right hon. Friend has not received any representations from LEAs in respect of their statutory duties. LEAs may operate more generous transport policies than statutorily required but this is at their discretion, in the light of their assessment of local priorities. Details of spending by LEAs in Wales on school transport are not held centrally.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the names of schools in Wales with pupils on the assisted places scheme; and in each case what is the number of pupils and the income which the school recovers from the scheme. [4133]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is shown in the following table:

School	Number of APS pupils in scheme 1996–97	Income from APS in financial year 1996–97
Christ College	101	490,854
Ffynone House[1]	7	15,075

Speech Therapists

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many qualified speech therapists there are in each of the health authorities in Wales. [4458]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The information is given in the following table:

Qualified speech and language therapists

Health Authority area[1]	Whole-time equivalent number of staff in post at 31 December 1996[2]
Bro Taf	53
Dyfed Powys	36
Gwent	32
Morgannwg	42
North Wales	60

[1] Staff are employed by NHS Trusts but are shown here under the Health Authority area in which the Trust is situated.
[2] Provisional.

Smoke Detectors

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which housing associations in Wales have not installed smoke detectors in their housing stock. [4779]

Mr. Win Griffiths: As this is an operational matter for Tai Cymru, I have asked the Chief Executive to collect the data from the housing associations and to write to my hon. Friend direct. A copy of this letter will be placed in the Library.

Hip Replacements

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what reports he has received of the failure rates of operations involving replacement hips using biomet protheses and boneloc cement in (a) Rhydlafar hospital and (b) other hospitals in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [4491]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The failure rates of operations is a matter for NHS Trusts to address, in liaison with health authorities and GP fundholders. However, the NHS is immediately informed of any particular product that gives rise for concern via various hazard notices issued by the Department on the advice of the Medical Devices Agency. One such notice on Boneloc was issued in 1995 and I understand that this product was subsequently withdrawn from use.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his plans in respect of the level of expenditure on the NHS. [4856]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Provision for the NHS in Wales in 1997–98 was £2,368 million. My right hon. Friend will announce provision for 1998–99 in due course.

NHS Service Provision

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the areas of service provision in the NHS which are currently under review by the Welsh Office; and if he will make a statement. [4851]

Mr. Win Griffiths: It is primarily for health authorities to plan for and review service provision in the light of local circumstances and strategic priorities. Currently, the Welsh Office is separately leading reviews of the configuration of NHS trusts, critical care and occupational health services for NHS staff in Wales.

Exports and Imports

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to the statement of the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Neath (Mr. Hain), of 18 June, Official Report, column 245–48, what, for the latest available year, was the total value (a) of Welsh exports and (b) of Welsh imports. [5130]

Mr. Hain: Export and import statistics are only collected on a UK basis and I am afraid my statement on 18 June was based on a misinterpretation. I intend to write to the hon. Member with an explanation as soon as possible and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Teacher:Pupil Ratios

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average teacher:pupil ratio for (a) all schools, (b) primary and junior schools and (c) secondary schools in Wales for each of the last five years for which figures are available, based on planned expenditure; what is the expected teacher:pupil ratio for (i) all schools, (ii) primary and junior schools and (iii) secondary schools in Wales, in each of the next two years; and if he will make a statement. [4871]

Mr. Hain: The following table shows figures for the last five years derived from returns to the Schools' Census. Projections of pupil:teacher ratios are not prepared centrally.

Pupil:teacher ratios within schools[1]

	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
All schools[2]	18.2	18.2	18.4	18.7	18.7
Primary[3]	22.3	22.1	22.3	22.5	22.5
Secondary	15.6	15.7	15.9	16.1	16.0

[1] At January each year. The pupil:teacher ratio shown is the ratio of the total number of full-time equivalent pupils within the sector concerned to the total number of full-time equivalent qualified teachers.
[2] Includes all maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools, and independent schools.
[3] Includes all infant, junior with infant, and junior without infant, schools.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the ambulance service provision; and if he will make a statement. [4850]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Latest figures for the year to March 1997 show that on an all Wales basis ambulance trusts have met the patient's charter requirement for responding to emergency calls. The Department has written to the Dyfed Powys and Bro Taf health authorities, where the standard has not been achieved. In addition, a review by ambulance trusts in Wales, which is expected to include reconfiguration options with a view to improving patient services, will be submitted to me next month for consideration.

Cigarette Smokers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many and what percentage of adult (a) men and (b) women in Wales are cigarette smokers in each 10 year age band; and if he will make a statement. [4770]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The estimated numbers and percentages of adults in Wales who smoke cigarettes at least occasionally are given in the following table. They are based on data from the 1996 Health in Wales Survey carried out by Health Promotion Wales. The survey results are provisional pending publication later in the year.

Percentage and number of adults smoking at least occasionally

Age in years	18–24		25–34		35–44		45–54		55–64		18–64

HEALTH

Hospital Performance Ratings

3. Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals achieved five-star performance ratings in the last year for which figures are available. [3468]

Mr. Milburn: The last year for which figures are available is the period ended 31 March 1996, when 397 out of a total of 400 trusts achieved five stars for at least one indicator in the Tables, 42 achieved five stars in all categories. I plan to publish the figures for the period to 31 March 1997 in the NHS Performance Tables on 9 July 1997.

Surrogacy

5. Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to review the law relating to surrogacy. [3470]

Ms Jowell: As I announced on 11 June, at columns 478–79, following public concern, UK health ministers have invited a small team to carry out a review of the existing law on surrogacy. The terms of reference and membership of this review were set out in the Official Report, and are as follows:

To consider whether payments, including expenses, to surrogate mothers should continue to be allowed, and if so, on what basis; to examine whether there is a case for the regulation of surrogacy arrangements through a recognised body or bodies; and if so to advise on the scope and operation of such arrangements;

in the light of the above, to advise whether changes are needed to the Surrogacy Arrangements Act 1985 and/or section 30 of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990.

The review team is lead by Margaret Brazier, Professor of Law at Manchester University. The other team members are Susan Golombok, Professor of Psychology at the City University, London and Alastair Campbell, Professor of Ethics in Medicine, University of Bristol.

Accident and Emergency Services

9. Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the accident and emergency services in the Leigh and Greater Manchester area. [3474]

Mr. Milburn: The proposed change in opening hours of the minor injuries unit at Leigh Infirmary has now been referred to Ministers who will be considering this in the near future. The issue of accident and emergency services across Greater Manchester is a matter for individual health authorities.

Social Service Funding

17. Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the overall funding made by his Department for social services. [3483]

Mr. Boateng: The Government's aim is to ensure that social services is fairly funded, and that those people who require services receive appropriate, good quality, cost-effective services.

Children (Domestic Violence)

21. Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to protect children from domestic violence. [3487]

Mr. Boateng: The Government are firmly committed to ensuring that women and children are better protected against the impact of all forms of violence. We recognise that exposure to domestic violence can have a profoundly damaging impact on the health and development of children, as well as on women. Over the coming months, we shall be launching the Department's strategy for making domestic violence a higher priority for health and social services.

Life Expectancy

22. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to increase life expectancy. [3488]

Ms Jowell: We will fulfil our manifesto commitments to tackle the root causes of ill-health and we shall set new goals for improving health which recognise the impact of poverty, unemployment, poor housing and a polluted environment.

Locality Commissioning Projects

23. Ms Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to encourage general practitioners to work together in locality commissioning projects. [3490]

Mr. Milburn: We mean to work with all in the NHS to develop new arrangements which best meet our objectives of providing high quality care to all on the basis of need. We wish to develop local commissioning and have already begun to meet the GP representative groups to explore how best to build on good practice wherever we may find it.

NHS Pharmacists Bill

24. Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to introduce the NHS Pharmacists Bill. [3491]

Mr. Milburn: We have no immediate plans to introduce an NHS Pharmacists Bill.

Bureaucracy

25. Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to reduce waste in the national health service. [3492]

Mr. Milburn: On 22 May we announced a programme of measures to remove the bureaucratic processes of the internal market and reduce management costs by £100 million this year. We will be looking for further reductions in 1998–99 and beyond.

Dental Services

26. Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role of community dental services. [3493]

Mr. Milburn: The Community Dental Service has an important role in providing a range of services to help improve and maintain the oral health of the population.

Redbridge and Waltham Forest

27. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next plans to visit Redbridge and Waltham Forest to discuss the financial deficits of local trusts and the health authority. [3494]

Mr. Milburn: My Ministerial colleagues and I will be visiting as many NHS organisations as we can over the coming months, and this may include Redbridge and Waltham Forest. We recognise the difficulties faced by health authorities and trusts, particularly the many who entered the financial year in deficit, and will be working with the service to rebuild the NHS.

NHS Trusts (Deficits)

28. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he proposes to take to avoid (a) reductions in the level of service and (b) asset sales by health service trusts which are expecting a financial deficit in the current year. [3495]

Mr. Milburn: Health Authorities and Trusts must work together to return to financial stability. For their part, the Government are committed to raising spending on the NHS in real terms every year and to ensuring that more of every pound spent goes on patient care, not bureaucracy. Proceeds from the disposal of trust assets are available to finance capital investments to improve patient care.

Consultation

29. Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review NHS guidelines on consultation. [3496]

Mr. Milburn: We shall be considering the current arrangements for consultation on major service changes in due course.

Hospital Ward Closures (North Thames Region)

30. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he has made in reversing ward closures in hospitals in the North Thames region of the NHS. [3497]

Mr. Milburn: We have inherited a difficult legacy in terms of pressure on the health service, in the North Thames region as elsewhere. The National Health Service Chief Executive has asked health authorities and NHS trusts to ensure that the current resources of the NHS are used to maximum effect.

Breast Cancer Services

31. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve breast cancer services for women. [3499]

Mr. Boateng: The Government have signalled their commitment to make cancer a priority and will direct savings achieved from cuts in the costs of the National Health Service internal market into patient care. As a first step, £10 million has been made available for breast cancer services to speed access to diagnosis, reduce waiting times for treatment and support networks of specialist teams.

Silicone Breast Implants

32. Mr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the safety of silicone breast implants. [3500]

Mr. Boateng: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 16 June at column 26-27.

Elderly People (Care)

33. Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of the eligibility criteria on continuing care for the elderly. [3501]

Mr. Boateng: The National Health Service Executive issued an Executive Letter (EL(96)89) in October 1996 which reported on an evaluation of the early impact of the continuing health care guidance and set out issues which health authorities and social services departments should address. We will be considering the implications of a more recent evaluation for the development of continuing health care services. Copies of EL(96)89 are available in the Library.

GP Fundholders (Croydon)

34. Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of NHS patients are covered by GP fundholders in Croydon. [3502]

Mr. Milburn: 37 per cent. of the registered population of Croydon Health Authority is served by a General Practitioner fundholding practice.

NHS Funding (Northern England)

35. Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to review the funding allocations to the north of England with particular reference to the role of the market forces factor. [3503]

Mr. Milburn: We shall honour the health authority revenue allocations agreed in 1997–98 by the previous Government.

We will look at how resources are distributed across both secondary and primary care, to ensure that these fully reflect local population needs and operate as fairly as possible.

Public Health Minister

36. Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the role and work of the Minister with responsibility for public health. [3504]

Ms Jowell: I will be working to take forward our manifesto commitments to improve the overall health of the nation, setting targets which recognise the impact on health of poverty, poor housing, unemployment and a polluted environment.

I will be working closely with colleagues in other Government Departments on issues such as food safety and use of Lottery funds for health projects. Work has already been put in train to address some of the crucial issues on the public health agenda. For instance:

- a White Paper on tobacco and a draft Bill to ban tobacco advertising are both in preparation for the summer;

work is in hand to enable midweek Lottery funds to be used to create a network of Healthy Living Centres.

the Ministerial Group on Food Safety, of which both my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I are members, have started work on developing the new Food Standards Agency.

We plan to outline our new health strategy at a conference on 7 July.

Hospital Closures (Mental and Psychiatric Care)

37. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans Her Majesty's Government have to review the policy of the closure of the larger hospitals providing mental and psychiatric care; and if he will make a statement. [3505]

Mr. Boateng: We are concerned to ensure that a high standard of mental and psychiatric care is available to those who require it in an appropriate setting; planned closure of the larger hospitals will take place in that context as part of the development of a comprehensive mental health service offering a range of inpatient and community provision.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for compensation for haemophiliacs infected with Hepatitis C as a result of treatment by the national health service. [1905]

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to pay compensation to people infected with Hepatitis C contracted through blood transfusions in NHS hospitals. [3633]

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received since 2 May with regard to people with haemophilia who have been infected with Hepatitis C via contaminated blood products; and what plans he has to review their claim for financial recompense. [4180]

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his proposals to set up a hardship fund for the haemophiliacs who may have been infected with Hepatitis C through blood supplied by the national health service. [5125]

Ms Jowell: Since 2 May, in addition to these Parliamentary Questions, Ministers have received 19 letters on the subject of financial recompense for patients, both haemophiliacs and others, infected with hepatitis C through National Health Service treatment.

We have agreed to give this matter our most careful consideration.

Adoption

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the rule concerning the age of adopting parents as a criterion for approving overseas adoption; and how many and what proportion of applicants with a prospective parent over 60 years of age have been (a) approved and (b) rejected (i) in 1996–97 and (ii) in each of the last five years. [4234]

Mr. Boateng: The minimum age for prospective adopters in England and Wales is 21 years. There is no legal upper age limit. However, age is just one factor among many which must be taken into account when assessing the suitability of applicants. Figures on the acceptability of prospective adopters are not held centrally.

Radiotherapy

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to compensate female patients who have suffered serious physical damage following post-operative radiotherapy to treat breast cancer; and if he will make a statement. [4836]

Ms Jowell: The Government have every sympathy with women who have suffered adverse side-effects as a consequence of radiotherapy treatment. However, it is a longstanding principle that compensation should be paid by the National Health Service only when there is evidence that negligence has been involved.

The following action has been taken to help women with damage as a result of radiotherapy for breast cancer:

In May 1994 the Department issued guidance entitled "Quality Assurance in Radiotherapy—A Quality Management System for Radiotherapy".

The Royal College of Radiologists at the Department's request, convened a small group of professionals and lay people in autumn 1994 to consider guidelines for care of women who have suffered tissue damage following radiotherapy for breast cancer. This report was issued to the NHS by the Department in October 1995.

The Royal College of Radiologists carried out a confidential clinical review of 126 women who had suffered injury following radiotherapy treatment for breast cancer at 15 centres in the period 1980–1993. The report makes recommendations on the management of breast cancer, particularly on radiotherapy, and for further research.

With regard to those suffering adverse effects following pelvic radiotherapy for gynaecological cancers, in 1996, a Working Group, which includes representatives from a number of Royal Colleges, voluntary organisations and the Department, was set up to consider the preparation of patient information leaflets concerning possible adverse effects following pelvic radiotherapy and to raise awareness generally. A sub-group is also considering issuing guidelines for health professionals on the care of women suffering adverse effects as a result of pelvic radiotherapy.

Hernias

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the use of homeopathy for the treatment of patients, before and after undergoing a surgical hernia operation; and if he will make a statement; [4781]

(2) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on complementary and alternative medicine for the treatment of (i) a hernia and (ii) patients before and after undergoing a surgical hernia operation; and if he will make a statement; [4780]

(3) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on alternatives to surgery for the treatment of hernias; and if he will make a statement. [4725]

Ms Jowell: We have not commissioned research, nor are we aware of any published studies, relating to alternative and complementary treatments in groin hernia surgery. The Department of Health does, however, support the Surgical Epidemiology and Audit Unit at the Royal College of Surgeons which is engaged in a systematic review of previous research literature on groin hernia surgery. Additionally, the Department of Health is supporting work by the Research Council for Complementary Medicine to develop clinical audit methodologies for use by practitioners of complementary medicine. This includes homeopathy, but is not related to the management of groin hernia.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hernias have been diagnosed in each of the last 10 years, how many required surgery; and if he will make a statement. [4728]

Ms Jowell: We are unable to provide the information in the form requested. The information that is available is set out in the table. It shows those cases admitted to hospital where the primary diagnosis was hernia of the abdominal cavity and covers the years 1989–90 to 1994–95. We are unable to provide information about the number of patients who have their hernias diagnosed and/or treated outside National Health Service hospitals.

Year	1989–90	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Finished Consultant episodes with primary diagnosis of hernia abdominal cavity	128,732	128,798	135,031	135,289	145,430	154,503

Alternative and Complementary Medicine

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many practitioners of (i) alternative and (ii) complementary medicine (a) are registered in England currently, (b) were registered in 1992 and (c) were registered in 1987. [4596]

Ms Jowell: The information requested is not available. Some complementary and alternative medicine organisations maintain, on a voluntary basis, a register of their membership. It is not necessary for a practitioner to register with any organisation in order to practise.

When the Osteopaths Act 1993 and Chiropractors Act 1994 are fully implemented, statutory registers will exist for these two professions.

Drugs

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total amount (a) spent and (b) allocated by his Department on tackling the problems relating to drugs in respect of (i) developing prevention publicity, education and community action and (ii) improving treatment and rehabilitation, for (1) 1994, (2) 1995, (3) 1996 and (4) 1997. [4796]

Ms Jowell: Information on total Government and individual departments' expenditure on tackling drug misuse is not recorded on an annual basis. The most recently available estimates were published in the White Paper "Tackling Drugs Together" in May 1995. They show that at least £526 million of expenditure in 1993–94 could be directly attributable to drug programmes and activities across the United Kingdom.

The Government will be appointing a "drug czar" to co-ordinate action against drugs, working to the President of the Council as Chair of the Cabinet's coordinating committee on drug misuse. One of his or her first tasks will be to review urgently the existing drugs strategy, and put forward proposals for tackling the problem with renewed vigour. This review will include current Government expenditure.

Asthma

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children are recognised as suffering from asthma currently; and how many were registered (a) in 1992 and (b) in 1987. [4595]

Ms Jowell: There are no comprehensive data on the number of children with asthma. It is estimated to affect between 4 and 6 per cent. of children in England sufficiently severely to require regular medical supervision.

According to data collected by the Royal College of General Practitioners, the mean weekly incidence of new general practitioner episodes of asthma in children per 100,000 population in England in selected years was as follows:

	Age group
	0–4	5–14
1987	74.4	58.9
1992	147.8	84.2
1996[1]	104.7	63.7

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the conclusions of the review into cystic fibrosis screening commissioned by the NHS Executive Research and Development Health Technology Assessment Programme will be announced. [5000]

Ms Jowell: The findings of the research undertaken in the National Health Service Executive Research and Development Health Technology Assessment's project on screening for cystic fibrosis are expected to be available publicly by the end of 1997.

Prescription Charges

Ms Hewitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the system of prescription charges for hormone replacement therapy with special reference to the requirement to pay two prescription charges for certain courses of treatment. [5063]

Mr. Milburn: We will be examining the whole question of prescription charges, as part of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review. The Government remains committed to the historic principle of the National Health Service that health services will be available to all and access will be based on need, not on ability to pay.

Sight Testing Scheme

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of administering the NHS sight testing scheme in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [5253]

Mr. Milburn: It would involve disproportionate cost to identify this information from within health authorities' overall expenditure on the administration of the family health services.

Cash Limits

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes will be made to the cash limits of his Department in 1997–98. [5468]

Mr. Dobson: The cash limit for Class XI, Vote 1 (Hospital, community health, family health and related services, England) will be reduced by £13,000,000 (from £29,362,456,000 to £29,349,456,000). This allows for a transfer to Class IX, Vote 1 (Department for Education and Employment: programmes and central services) as part of the funding for the merger of the Imperial College and the West London Medical School.

The decrease will be offset by an increase to another Vote and will not therefore change the planned total of Public expenditure.

Radiotherapy Overdoses (Compensation)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has for a compensation plan for those suffering as a result of receiving the wrong dosage of radiotherapy; and if he will make a statement. [4764]

Ms Jowell: The Government have every sympathy with women who have suffered adverse side-effects as a consequence of radiotherapy treatment. Where people have been harmed by clinical treatment and negligence can be shown to have caused this, compensation may be sought through the courts. However, it is a longstanding principle that compensation should only be paid by the NHS when there is evidence that negligence has been involved.

The following action has been taken to help women with damage as a result of radiotherapy for breast cancer:

In May 1994 the Department issued guidance entitled "Quality Assurance in Radiotherapy—A Quality Management System for Radiotherapy".

The Royal College of Radiologists at the Department's request, convened a small group of professionals and lay people in Autumn 1994 to consider guidelines for care of women who have suffered tissue damage following radiotherapy for breast cancer. This report was issued to the NHS by the Department in October 1995.

The Royal College of Radiologists carried out a confidential clinical review of 126 women who had suffered injury following radiotherapy treatment for breast cancer at 15 centres in the period 1980–93. The report makes recommendations on the management of breast cancer, particularly on radiotherapy, and for further research.

With regard to those suffering adverse effects following pelvic radiotherapy for gynaecological cancers, in 1996, a Working Group, which includes representatives from a number of Royal Colleges, voluntary organisations and the Department, was set up to consider the preparation of patient information leaflets concerning possible adverse effects following pelvic radiotherapy and to raise awareness generally. A sub-group is also considering issuing guidelines for health professionals on the care of women suffering adverse effects as a result of pelvic radiotherapy.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with representatives of those suffering as a result of radiotherapy overdoses; and if he will make a statement. [4763]

Ms Jowell: Representatives of those suffering as a result of radiotherapy treatment-both RAGE BREAST and RAGE NATIONAL have asked to meet Ministers to outline their aims and concerns. I am glad to report that my Noble Friend the Minister of State, Baroness Jay has agreed to see a joint representation from both these organisations.

Occupational Health Services

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to review the guidelines for occupational health services for NHS staff. [3489]

Mr. Milburn: Following detailed consultation with professional bodies, Health Service Guidelines for Occupational Health (HSG(94)51) were issued in December 1994. This guidance took into account the recommendations of the "Clothier" report on former nurse Beverley Allitt. In the light of the publication of the "Bullock Report" (the inquiry into the events surrounding the conviction of Amanda Jenkinson) we are considering whether the existing guidance can be further improved.

Regional Health Authorities

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost to the NHS of the reinstatement of regional health authorities. [3479]

Mr. Milburn: We have no plans to reinstate regional health authorities, and no estimates of the cost of doing so have been made.

Speech Impediments

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on NHS provision for those with stammers or other speech impediments. [3498]

Mr. Boateng: We are well aware of the importance of providing speech and language therapy for people where there is evidence that they can benefit from the service. Decisions about the amount of funding available for these services are the responsibility of health commissioners, who have to take account of the resources needed for the other services to the local population for which they are responsible.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Landfill Sites (BSE Waste)

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Ministers of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) when the Environment Agency investigations into landfill sites which have accommodated BSE waste will be (a) completed (b) published; [2828]

(2) when the Spongiform Encephalitis Advisory Committee will report on safe ways of disposing of BSE-infected material; and when that report will be published. [2829]

Mr. Rooker: The Environment Agency's assessment of landfill sites which took cattle affected, or suspected of being affected, with BSE before sufficient carcase incineration capacity came on stream in 1991 to process the number of cases that were coming forward is now completed.

The Agency is considering how best to publish the assessment, and related work, and aims to do so shortly. The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee (SEAC) has noted the methodology used by the Environment Agency in assessing the various disposal routes for cattle derived waste and is content with the conclusions of the reports.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime Prevention

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to give local authorities a statutory obligation to co-ordinate local initiatives to prevent crime and develop plans to make them more effective. [4811]

Mr. Michael: We intend to place a new responsibility on local authorities and the police service jointly to develop statutory local partnerships for crime prevention and community safety and to agree, with the key partners, local community safety targets. Our proposals will be developed on the basis of full consultation with all interested parties. This will be included in the forthcoming Crime and Disorder Bill.

Prisoners (Conditions)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions he has given to the Prison Service to ensure that wherever possible convicted prisoners should serve their sentences in prisons within reasonable travelling distance of close relatives. [4610]

Ms Joyce Quin: Prison Rule 31 provides that special attention should be paid to the maintenance of such relationships between a prisoner and his family as are desirable in the best interests of both. Circular Instruction 7/1988, a copy of which is available in the Library, sets out the principles governing the allocation of convicted adult male prisoners. Similar instructions exist for women and males under 21 years of age. The needs of the individual prisoner, including the facilitating of visits, is one of four priorities governing allocation.

Wherever possible, prisoners are located close to their home and family. However, security is the primary consideration in a prisoner's allocation and account must also be taken of the need to maintain good order and control and, particularly because of the current population pressures, the need to make best use of the estate.

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his Department's estimate of the percentage of content providers on the Internet who publish material unsuitable for children but are currently taking part in voluntary self-certification. [4902]

Mr. Michael: Information is not available in the form requested. However, I understand from figures compiled in April by the Internet Watch Foundation (IWF), the independent industry body set up last year, that some 7 per cent. (1,419) if sites which are rated with the Recreational Software Advisory Council (RSAC), the voluntary content ratings system developed by the RSAC in the United States of America, are in the United Kingdom. There is no United Kingdom rating system available, although the IWF hope to report shortly on their recommendations for the development of a self-rating system suitable for the United Kingdom, to which major Internet Service Providers would subscribe.

Patrick Nichols

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the tariff recommended by (a) the trial judge, (b) the Lord Chief Justice and (c) the Home Secretary in the case of Patrick Nichols; what length of sentence he has already served; and what are the reasons for his continued detention. [3517]

Ms Joyce Quin: The trial judge and the Lord Chief Justice both recommended 13 years, and that was the period set by the then Home Secretary.

Mr. Nichols has served 22 years in custody. For reasons which have been explained to him, the Parole Board has not considered it appropriate to recommend release. Without such a recommendation, my right hon. Friend has no power to release Mr. Nichols.

Treason and Piracy (Maximum Penalties)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many years have elapsed since the maximum penalties in force on the statute book for (a) treason and (b) piracy were applied. [4647]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 20 June 1997]: The last execution for the offence of treason was 41 years ago in 1946. In 1945 there were three persons sentenced to death for treason. One of the sentences was commuted to penal servitude. William Joyce (Lord Haw Haw) was executed in 1946 for treason. The other offender, Thomas Cooper, who had joined the German army at the age of twenty (his mother was of German origin) was reprieved in 1946 and ended up with a life sentence, of which he served seven years.

Historical records indicate that the last two executions for the offence of piracy took place 167 years ago in 1830.

Immigration Offences

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of prosecutions that have been undertaken against foreign nationals for immigration offices, indicating (a) the offence, (b) the outcomes and (c) the maximum sentences passed for the last 12 months for which figures are available. [5340]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 24 June 1997]: Court data for prosecutions of foreign nationals by the type of immigration offence committed are given in the tables:

Information given is for 1995 (latest available).

Entry Clearance

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will initiate a fast track system for those who have been refused admission under the primary purpose rule to apply for entry clearance. [4008]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

In cases where an application has been refused solely on primary purpose grounds and an appeal is pending the Home Office will remit the papers to the Entry Clearance Officer for issue of entry clearance, subject to there being no change of circumstances. Cases which were deferred at posts pending an announcement by the Home Secretary will now be reviewed and where primary purpose would have been the only ground for refusal, again subject to no change of circumstances, entry clearance will be issued. Where no application or appeal is pending, applicants may re-apply for entry clearance in the normal way.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Departmental Staff

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time persons employed by his Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4.00 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (iii) less than £3.00 an hour. [4198]

Mr. Prescott: The number of staff paid less than the levels shown is as follows:

	Staff
£4.00 an hour	1,246
£3.50 an hour	717
£3.00 an hour	35

These estimates reflect current salary levels and staff numbers, which will vary considerably over time. Part-time and full-time staff are paid the same hourly rates.

Environmental Task Force

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to set up the environmental task force. [4479]

Ms Angela Eagle: We are proposing to launch the New Deal Programme shortly, including the Environmental Task Force, which will be one of the four options on offer.

Areas of Outstanding National Beauty

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the process of consulting on the future funding of areas of outstanding natural beauty; and when a consultation document will be made available. [4613]

Ms Angela Eagle: Ministers will shortly be considering these matters with the Countryside Commission, including the question of a consultation document.

Water Charges

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for further consultation on future policy relating to water charges; and if he will make a statement. [5091]

Mr. Meacher: As the Deputy Prime Minister announced at the Water Summit, the Government is to review the system of charging for water in England and Wales. I am launching that review today. The purpose of the review is to ensure that we have a fair and sustainable system of charging for water and sewerage services.

The review will be conducted jointly by my Department and the Welsh Office, in consultation with the Office of Water Services. My Department will be writing today to interested bodies with details of the main issues which the review will address and inviting their representations. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

There is public concern about the system of charging for water. Water and sewerage services have to be paid for, but customers are entitled to expect that the basis on which their charges are levied is a fair one. The method of charging should have the support of customers as well as water companies.

The review will look at the various methods of charging for mains water and sewerage services, including both unmeasured and measured systems. Under Section 145 of the Water Industry Act 1991, water companies must not base their charges on rateable values after 31 March 2000. The review will consider the future use of rateable values and other possible bases for unmeasured charges, such as the use of council tax bands. It will also consider debt recovery arrangements.

We have made clear our opposition to compulsory metering for essential household use of water. We will also want to look very carefully at the issues of disconnection and the use of budget payment meters for household water supplies: no one should be deprived of water because of inability to pay for it. We will consider these issues in the review. But we do want to have views from all the interested parties before we bring forward proposals for changes in the present regime.

The overall level of water charges and the system of price limits set by the water regulator will not be considered in this review.

Telecommunications Masts

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review Planning Policy Guidance Note 8 as it affects the siting and erection of telecommunication masts. [4993]

Mr. Raynsford: We have no immediate plans to review the basic approach of Planning Policy Guidance note 8 to the siting and erection of telecommunication masts. Work is in hand with representatives of local planning authorities and telecommunications code system operators to review the working of the Code of Best Practice for Telecommunications Prior Approval Procedures as applied to Mast/Tower Development, which was published by my Department last year.

House Building

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will establish a review into the methods by which developments in environmentally friendly design and the use of sustainable materials can be incorporated into future house building programmes; and if he will make a statement. [4878]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department is supporting research on a wide range of projects aimed at increasing understanding and awareness of, and promoting, more sustainable construction. I shall be launching new construction innovation and research business plans on 4 July. Sustainable construction will be a major theme. We are also examining how dissemination and take up of research and best practice can be improved and made more effective.

Organophosphates

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review the effects on the environment of the use of organophosphates. [4913]

Ms Angela Eagle: The Environment Agency keeps the environmental effects of organophosphates under review through its monitoring programmes. I have arranged for a copy of its recently published report "Pesticides in the Aquatic Environment 1995" to be placed in the Library. The Wildlife Incident Investigation Scheme, run by the Agriculture Departments, monitors the impact of agricultural pesticides, including organophosphates, on wildlife. Approvals of organophosphate pesticides and veterinary medicines are reviewed by the Advisory Committee on Pesticides and the Veterinary Products Committee. Agricultural pesticides including organophosphates are also subject to the European Community rolling review programme under Council Directive 91/414. The Veterinary Products Committee reviewed organophosphate sheep-dips earlier this year and its recommendations are currently being put into place. There are also many research projects addressing the effects of organophosphates on the environment including those funded by the Natural Environment Research Council. The Government is considering whether any further action to reduce the effects of organophosphates on the environment is necessary.

Mine Water

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review progress made to date in cleaning contaminated mine water; and what plans he has to enhance the current clean-up programme. [4919]

Ms Angela Eagle: Last year, the Environment Agency and the Coal Authority identified for further study a priority list of 35 serious mine water discharges from abandoned coal mines in England and Wales which need remedial pollution treatment, and which are being monitored by the Environment Agency during 1997. Following discussions with the Environment Agency and the Scottish Environmental Protection Agency, the Coal Authority has undertaken 14 detailed feasibility studies on the most environmentally damaging discharges and allocated over £2 million principally to tackle four priority sites during 1997–98. I am reviewing the need for further action to clean-up contaminated mine water sites.

Local Authority Changes

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to revise the current list of charges which local authorities can make. [5074]

Mr. Raynsford: We are currently consulting local authority and business interests on draft Regulations allowing local authorities to recover costs for certain highway and transport services. I have placed a copy of the consultation version of the Regulations in the Library of the House. We hope to lay the Regulations before the summer recess.

Council Tax

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to create new council tax bands below the current band A and above band E. [4885]

Mr. Raynsford: The question of whether any changes should be made to the structure of the council tax valuation bands is one that the Government will wish to discuss with the Local Government Association and others before reaching a view.

Organic Production

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will examine occasions in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Germany where water companies have (i) encouraged organic agriculture and (ii) promoted the marketing of organic produce from farmers within their watersheds with a view to promoting examples of best practice within the industry; and if he will make a statement. [4887]

Ms Angela Eagle: Water suppliers have an interest in any initiatives which prevent pollution of drinking water sources and work closely with the farming community to protect catchments. My right hon. Friend, the Minister of Agriculture has general responsibility for organic farming; it would be interesting to learn of any specific initiatives by water suppliers either here or in Germany to encourage organic farming and the promotion of organic produce.

Rat Control

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) who has the responsibility for rat control in public sewers; and what steps he has taken to monitor performance in this area; [5156]

(2) what plans he has to review the duties and responsibilities of the sewerage undertakings with respect to the funding of sewer baiting programmes to control the rat population. [5155]

Ms Angela Eagle: No one body has overall responsibility for rodent control because of the diverse factors involved in dealing with both the causes and effects of rodent infestations. Sewerage undertakers have programmes to control and reduce the number of rats entering sewers and the funding of these programmes is a matter for each undertaker. All undertakers monitor the level of rat infestation in their sewers and I understand that the water industry will be undertaking some research in this area early next year. Local authorities have the power to take action if the drainage systems in their area pose a threat to public health and this helps to ensure that sewerage undertakers maintain a sufficient programme to control the rat population. I have no plans to review the duties or monitor the performance of sewerage undertakers in this field.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when it is proposed to review the approved document to part H of the Building Regulations; and what plans he has to strengthen the advice on the prevention of damage (a) by rates and (b) from high pressure water jetting for cleaning drains. [5158]

Mr. Raynsford: We propose to begin a review of the Approved Document to Part H of the Building Regulations next year, when we will consider whether the advice on prevention of damage by rats and from high pressure water jetting needs to be strengthened.

Water Abstraction

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to discourage water companies from abstracting water from rivers. [5270]

Ms Angela Eagle: Abstraction of water from rivers is subject to licensing requirements, set out in Chapter II of the Water Resources Act 1991 and administered by the Environment Agency. At the Water Summit we held in May, we made it clear to water companies that they must make stringent efforts to improve their management of the demand for water. We also said that we would review the water abstraction licensing system, with a key aim of ensuring that the needs of the environment are given due weight in licensing decisions. That review is currently underway.

Cash Limits

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to change the cash and running cost limits and external financing limits within his responsibility for 1997–98. [5592]

Mr. Prescott: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the following changes will be made.

The cash limit for Class VI, Vote 2—Regeneration and Countryside and Wildlife–will be increased by £27,000,000 from £1,453,168,000 to £1,480,168,000. The increase, which will be met by a call on the Reserve, is required for the Urban Regeneration Agency (English Partnerships) to continue with the clearing and preparation of the Greenwich Peninsula site for the Millennium Exhibition.

The external financing limit for the Urban Regeneration Agency (English Partnerships) will be increased by £27,000,000 from £177,779,000 to £204,779,000.

The cash limit for Class VI, Vote 5 (Administration) covering sections A to J of that Vote, will be increased by £1,146,000 from £393,455,000 to £394,601,000. This change reflects: a new Section (G) for payments of £50,000 in respect of the sale of the Housing Corporation Loan Portfolio; a new Section (H) for payments of £61,000 in respect of the privatisation costs of the Building Research Establishment; a new Section (I) to make a payment of £1,085,000 to the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre in respect of client deposits; a new Section (J) with a net provision of £1,000 in order to allow short term loans to be made to the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre; a reduction of £51,000 to provision for Section A in order to find the increases sought for Sections G and J.

A part payment of £500,000 from the £1,085,000 for client deposits to the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre, for which provision is being sought in the new Section I, is required urgently. Pending approval of the Supplementary Estimate for Class VI, Vote 5, expenditure on this new service will therefore be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies fund.

All the increases will be offset by savings, transfers or will be charged to the reserve and will therefore not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Bus Regulation

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to pursue his commitment to the proper regulation of buses. [5632]

Dr. Strang: As part of the fundamental review of transport policy announced by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister on 5 June at column 226. I announced in a speech to the Confederation of Passenger Transport earlier today a wide ranging bus review. Its purpose is to examine how buses can best play their part in an integrated transport policy. Our aim is to see increased use of the bus as a means of reducing congestion and pollution, particularly by attracting motorists from their cars.

The review will look at all aspects of buses including: the scope for more effective use of bus priority measures, coupled as necessary with traffic restraint; better arrangements for passenger information and ticketing, including inter-modal travel; and regulatory and other measures to improve the quality of bus services, notably through the "quality partnership" approach between operators and local authorities. In addition, it will address financial issues such as costs and support for the industry.

I intend to consult fully with the industry, local authorities, bus users and other interest groups, building on the joint work that has previously been done in this area. The results of the review will form part of the proposed White Paper next Spring on integrated transport policy.

EU Transport Council

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the result of the Transport Council held in Luxembourg on 17 and 18 June. [5794]

Dr. Strang: The Transport Council met in Luxembourg on 17 and 18 June. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister and I represented the United Kingdom.

My right hon. Friend made a statement emphasising the importance the Government attaches to Europe and stressing the constructive approach the United Kingdom would seek to take.

The Council reached political agreement on a Directive to co-ordinate and improve Member States' arrangements for safety inspection of third country aircraft using EU airports. The United Kingdom, supported by Germany, asked for a statement to be entered in the Council minutes making clear that we would have preferred the Directive to apply also to EU aircraft.

The Council agreed conclusions on Community involvement in the EUROCONTROL organisation, which co-ordinates air traffic management arrangements within Europe, and on work towards the creation of a new European aviation safety organisation.

The Council held a further discussion on a draft directive on the levels of heavy goods vehicle taxation and of road user charges for those Member States which levy a specific charge for the use of their motorways. By qualified majority (with Germany opposing) the Council agreed a Regulation which will require new commercial vehicles to be fitted with electronic tachographs when such instruments have been type approved. This was the only item on which the Council took a vote. The United Kingdom secured an amendment intended to ensure that the security of new electronic tachograph products will be properly tested before they are approved for use.

The Council debated road safety, and agreed conclusions which, in particular, encouraged the Commission to take forward ideas on exchange of best practice. The Council also agreed conclusions endorsing a Commission report by the Commission on road transport telematics and inviting further work in this area.

The Council agreed conclusions welcoming a Commission communication on trans-European rail freight freeways, whose aim is to encourage the transfer of freight from road to rail by allowing greater freedom of access by train operators to the Community's rail network.

The Council reached political agreement on a Directive requiring counting of passengers on all sea voyages and the registration of the name, gender and other details of passengers on voyages over 20 miles, subject to certain exemptions and derogations. The Council also reached political agreement on a Directive bringing Community rules on seafarer training into line with the 1995 revision of International Maritime Organisation Convention on Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Seafarers.

The Council held a general debate on a Commission communication on maritime external relations, and agreed conclusions welcoming a Commission report on short sea shipping.

Among other issues raised at the Council were the growth of weekend lorry bans, the Community's aviation negotiations with the US and with central and Eastern European countries, and duty-free sales on travel within the European Union. On this a number of Member States sought an independent study of the effects of abolition: no undertaking was, however, given by the Commission.

Dial-a-Ride Schemes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much in each of the last three financial years his Department has provided in financial support to London Transport for dial-a-ride schemes operating in London, and how much London Transport paid to the dial-a-ride companies in each of the same years. [4424]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The answer is as follows:

£million

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Payments to London Transport for Dial-a-Ride	12.6	9.3	10.1
Payments by London Transport to the Dial-a-Ride companies	9.3	8.8	8.5

The difference between the two figures is London Transport's own salary and staff costs in support of Dial-a-Ride, and certain costs which London Transport met on behalf of the Dial-a-Ride companies such as vehicles and computer equipment.

M20

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will use the M20 between junctions 3 and 5 to test the new quieter road surfaces developed by his Department. [5136]

Ms Glenda Jackson: When the M20 between junctions 3 and 5 needs attention as part of planned maintenance, the possibility of using it to test novel forms of quieter road surface developed by the industry will be considered.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide noise barriers on the M20 between junction 3 and 5. [5135]

Ms Jackson: It is not possible to justify the expenditure of public funds on providing noise barriers along this section of the M20. As this would mainly be of benefit to people who either bought property in the vicinity of the M20 in full knowledge of the noise from traffic, or were compensated for the loss of value of their property when the road was first built, in anticipation of the growth of traffic on it.

Noise Barriers

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will adopt a discretionary policy of providing noise barriers on motorways that were opened to traffic after 17 October 1969. [5134]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The current policy is aimed at reducing the adverse effects that road construction or improvement would have on the surrounding area and applying similar principles to those roads which were built before the operative date specified in the Land Compensation Act.

Diesel Fuel (Pollution)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the impact on pollutant emissions of introducing a tax differential between diesel fuel products based on the level of pollution they generate. [4864]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Provision has been made for a duty differential of 1p per litre between ultra low sulphur diesel and conventional diesel fuel and this will be introduced when we have completed the procedure of obtaining the necessary EU derogation. This is imminent. It is expected that the effect of this differential on pollutant emissions will increase as supplies of ultra low sulphur diesel become more readily available. It is still too early to judge what the final impact of the existing differential might be.

Radioactive Materials (Transportation)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will assess the advantages of reconstituting the Advisory Committee on the Safe Transport of Radioactive Materials. [4911]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Advisory Committee on the Safe Transport of Radioactive Material (ACTRAM) was wound up in January 1989 after the Secretary of State for Transport and the Chairman of the Health and Safety Commission had agreed that its work had been satisfactorily completed. I am satisfied that ACTRAM's conclusions remain valid and that there is no need to reconstitute the Committee.

Motorway Lighting

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the stretches of motorway which are currently unlit; what his Department's policy is in relation to lighting these parts of the motorway; and if he will make a statement. [5079]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Peter Pike, dated 25 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your recent question about the sections of unlit motorway and the Department's policy for lighting these parts of motorway.

Road Lighting is provided over 30% of the motorway network in England. A list and a map illustrating the lit sections of motorway is attached for your information. Copies of the attached map will be placed in the Library. All other sections of motorway are currently unlit.

Lighting is provided in high accident risk areas. The decision on whether to provide lighting is based on an economic assessment of the capital, maintenance and energy costs set against the potential savings as a result of the reduction in night time personal injury accidents. A full environmental assessment is also incorporated.

New motorway lighting is being provided in conjunction with motorway widening schemes currently under construction. Apart from this, there is no programme to extend road lighting to unlit sections of motorway. The situation is however kept under review in light of historic accident rates and availability of funds.

Fuel Duty

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received against the abolition of vehicle excise duty and the replacement of the lost revenue by the introduction of an additional fuel duty. [5382]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Representation has been received from a range of individuals and organisations on vehicle and fuel taxation, including the suggestion of abolishing vehicle excise duty and increasing fuel duty.

Port of Tyne

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received about the privatisation of the Port of Tyne; and if he will make a statement. [5257]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend is currently considering a request from the Port of Tyne Authority that the compulsory privatisation of the port should not proceed. Six other letters about the port have also been received.

River Cruise Licences

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will consider renegotiating river cruise licences with a view to safety. [4022]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This is not a question which necessarily falls to my Department as the description of "river cruise licences" does not conform to any particular licence or certificate which is currently issued.

Local authorities issue licences allowing the operation of vessels which carry passengers and these licences would seem to be the most similar to those referred to in the question. There is an administrative charge relating to such licences and limited safety implications are involved.

The Marine Safety Agency (MSA) is responsible for issuing Passenger Certificates to vessels operating on inland waterways and the Environment Agency (EA) formally the National Rivers Authority (NRA) operates a Boat Safety Scheme with the emphasis for both being safety.

If you have any questions relating to either of these areas, I am sure that the Chief Executives of the MSA or EA will be able to help.

War Pensioners

Mr. Richard Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for a national scheme of disregards for war pensioners in respect of council tax and housing benefit to replace the current local discretionary schemes. [4128]

Mr. Bradley: I have been asked to reply.

The present disregard aims to strike a balance between acknowledging the special reasons for payment of the pension and the proper use of public funds. War pensioners already receive preferential treatment and benefit from many advantages over their Social Security counterparts.

To increase the disregard of the special treatment already afforded to war pensioners and war widows could be done only at the expense of other deserving groups.

We therefore have no plans to change the current disregards for war pensioners.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Chartered Accountants

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what visitorial rights he has in respect of disputes between the officials of the Association of Chartered Certified Accountants and its members. [5391]

Mr. Hoon: I have none. Her Majesty The Queen has directed the Lord Chancellor to exercise Her visitorial jurisdiction in connection with one dispute involving the Association.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Cranston: To ask the Attorney-General what progress has been made on the appointment of an organisational expert as part of the Crown Prosecution Service review. [5795]

The Attorney-General: I have appointed Mr. Robert McFarland, formerly Chief Executive of BOC Gases (South Asia, Middle East and Africa). He is a Chartered Accountant who has recently completed a successful international career in industry and will bring considerable organisational/management expertise to the Review team.

CABINET OFFICE

Minister without Portfolio

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will list the (a) meetings and (b) telephone conversations he has held since 2 May in his official capacity with members of the media, and the subjects discussed. [5417]

Mr. Mandelson: No.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Post Office

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will extend the complaint and redress provisions of the citizens charter to the Post Office.[4989]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Both Royal Mail and Post Office Counters Ltd. already produce documents under the Charter which set out what customers can expect when they use the Post Office's services and what to do if something goes wrong, including details of available compensation. We are, however, committed to re-launching the programme of charters and, in this context, officials will be meeting the Post Office next month.

Departmental Salaries

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish a list of those persons who were not established civil servants on 2 May whose salaries are currently being paid by his Departments, identifying the current salaries and position held by each of these persons and giving a summary of their provisions careers. [5420]

Dr. David Clark: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Mr. Forth) on 6 June 1997, Official Report, columns 262–63.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Women in Sport

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals he has to increase the involvement of women in traditionally male-dominated sports; and if he will make a statement. [2709]

Mr. Banks: The Government is keen to improve opportunities for women at all levels in sport, whether as participants, competitors, coaches or administrators.

The four Home Country Sports Councils, which are funded by central Government, actively encourage the involvement of women in all sports. Other sporting agencies, such as the Womens Sports Foundation are also doing much to underline the significant achievement of women in sport and help improve levels of participation.

Organisations are required to include ways of encouraging the participation of women when applying for monies from the National Lottery Sports Fund. This is helping to increase participation levels, particularly in those sports that have traditionally been male-dominated. These sports will be carefully monitored to ensure that the increased access is delivered.

The Government will explore ways to build on this and further extend opportunities through a national strategy for sport which will embrace all sections of the community regardless of where they live, social background, age or ability.

Millennium Events

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has for supporting Millennium events in the regions. [3210]

Mr. Chris Smith: It is the Government's intention to support Millennium events throughout the UK through the Millennium Commission. In announcing his support for the Millennium Exhibition on 19 June the Prime Minister said that the Exhibition must be a truly national event, with links across the whole of the UK.

The addition to the Exhibition in Greenwich the Millennium Commission has to date awarded grants totalling £994 million to 112 capital projects on 2,036 sites across the UK. These range from landmark projects, such as the Lowry Centre in Salford, to small local projects. The Commission is also funding a number of nationwide umbrella projects, such as "Woods on your doorstep" and "21st Century Halls".

Playing Fields

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many acres of school playing fields have been sold off in the last 10 years; and what is the policy of the Government towards the sale of (a) playing fields and (b) school playing fields. [3189]

Mr. Banks [holding answer Monday 23 June 1997]: Local Education Authorities are not required to report their disposals of playing fields to Central Government and consequently no central record of playing field sales exist. Provided their schools continue to comply with the requirements for minimum playing field area in the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1996, Local Education Authorities may dispose of land belonging to them without reference to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment.

The Government intends to make sure that those playing fields which schools and their local communities need are not sold in the future. The Government is considering, urgently, a wide range of options to ensure that all school pupils and communities will have access to proper sports facilities.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on the selling of playing fields. [5386]

Mr. Banks: The Government intends to make sure that those playing fields which schools and their local communities need are not sold in the future. The Government is considering, urgently, a wide range of options to ensure that all school pupils and communities will have access to proper sports facilities.

Tourist Accommodation (Bed Space)

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action he proposes to take to ensure the registration of all businesses supplying bed spaces for tourists; and if he will make a statement.[5138]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The Government is determined to see improvements in accommodation standards. The AA, RAC and ETB announced in February plans for a new harmonised scheme which for the first time would give a single rating for hotels according to both the quality of their service and the facilities they offer. They will be consulting the industry on the details of this and on a scheme covering non-hotel accommodation such as guest-houses, B and Bs, farmhouses and inns. The introduction of these voluntary measures will be an important first step in raising standards.

Sign Language

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to introduce secondary legislation to increase the minimum requirement for sign language on digital terrestrial television. [4777]

Mr. Fisher: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no current plans to use the powers in the Broadcasting Act 1996 to amend the minimum requirements for sign language on digital terrestrial television. The Government will, however, monitor this issue closely taking into account, in particular, any technological advances which would make on screen signing easier for the broadcasters to provide. The Independent Television Commission has undertaken that it will regularly review all aspects of its Code on Subtitling, Sign Language and Audio Description on Digital Terrestrial Television. The Government welcomes this and will maintain close liaison with the Commission.

Kick Boxing

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement about his Department's policy towards kick boxing. [4086]

Mr. Banks [holding answer Monday 23 June 1997]: The Government does not regulate kick boxing—or indeed any other sport in this country. This is a matter for the relevant governing body, or bodies, acting within the bounds of the law. However, I believe that those in charge of such sports have a duty to ensure they are conducted safely, particularly where there is a risk of injury, and that governing bodies of sport should have the appropriate medical and safety regulations in place. The tragic death of Sean McBride, following his participation in a kick boxing bout in Northern Ireland, highlights the need for governing bodies to take urgent and appropriate action.

Tobacco Companies (Sponsorship)

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 19 May, Official Report, column 361, if he will list the alternative sponsors he has identified to replace existing funding provided by tobacco companies for each sport in the event of the proposed ban on tobacco sponsorship of sport. [4289]

Mr. Banks: I will be looking very carefully at how best to achieve an end to the advertising and promotion of tobacco at sports events in a way that will minimise any damage to the sports concerned. Clearly we will do all we can to help the sports concerned identify alternative sponsors.

Tourism Industry

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment he has made of the effect of VAT and the VAT threshold on the international competitiveness of the British tourism industry. [5137]

Mr. Tom Clarke: Issues concerning VAT and the VAT threshold are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer. I am aware of the tourism industry's concerns about VAT-related issues, as is he.

TREASURY

National Savings Accommodation Review

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to receive the results of the National Savings Accommodation Review. [3370]

Mrs. Liddell: The review of National Savings, future accommodation needs has now been subsumed into the exploration of a possible Private Finance Initiative (PFI) project. A shortlist of three property firms are being consulted, and the Agency hopes to issue an Invitation to Negotiate next month.

European Single Currency

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what respects the Bank of England would need to be reformed to meet all the requirements for central bank independence in the Maastricht treaty; and when legislation would need to be passed if the United Kingdom wished to join a European single currency at the beginning of 1999. [4243]

Mrs. Liddell: The proposed changes to the Bank of England will not make it compatible with the requirements in the EC Treaty which would apply if the United Kingdom were to adopt the single currency. In particular, the Governor would need to be fully independent when carrying out his tasks in the Governing Council of the European Central Bank, and the Bank of England would need to be able to play a full role in the European System of Central Banks and the formulation and implementation of the single monetary policy.

The Treaty provides for the ECB to take responsibility for the monetary policy of the single currency on 1 January 1999. The legislative framework enabling the Bank of England to play its part would need to be in place by 1 January 1999 at the latest if the United Kingdom were to adopt the single currency. Progress towards making the Bank of England compatible with the Treaty will be assessed by the Commission and the European Monetary Institute as part of their reports made in accordance with the procedure under Article 109j(1) of the Treaty probably in spring 1998.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) in whose name the deeds for the gold reserves for the Euro will be held; [4463]

(2) what action would be taken against a participant in the single currency which was found to have gold reserves less than its planned contribution to the central reserves; [4461]

(3) where the gold reserves for the Euro will be held; [4464]

(4) what estimate he has made of the quantity of gold and foreign currency reserves which this country would contribute to the Euro's central reserves in the event of participation in the single currency. [4462]

Mrs. Liddell: The foreign reserve assets to be held and managed by the European Central Bank (ECB) will be provided by the national central banks of countries which adopt the single currency in accordance with Article 30 of the Statute of the European System of Central Banks (ESCB) annexed to the EC Treaty. The amount to be provided by each national central bank will depend on the size of its country's population and national income. It is not possible at this stage to say precisely how much the Bank of England would need to provide if the United Kingdom were to join. The amount required in total by the ECB and its precise composition will be decided by its Governing Council, within a ceiling provided by the Treaty.

Foreign reserve assets held and managed by the ECB will be "pooled", in the sense that the central banks which provide them will have in turn a proportionate claim on the assets of the ECB. The Governing Council will decide the degree of decentralisation of the activities of the ESCB. There are likely to be good reasons for some or all foreign reserve assets to remain in individual national central banks, so that they can be used more effectively in local financial markets for example.

The Treaty provides no mechanism or sanction specifically for use against a national central bank which fails to provide the required amount of foreign reserve assets.

Unemployment Benefit (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people aged 17 to 25 years were claiming unemployment benefit in Portsmouth in June of (a) 1974, (b) 1979, (c) 1988, (d) 1992, (e) 1993, (f) 1994, (g) 1995 and (h) 1996; and what percentage of the total number of those in this age group these figures represent. [4743]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Michael Hancock, dated 25 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the numbers of 17 to 25 year olds claiming unemployment benefit in Portsmouth in June of (a) 1974, (b) 1979, (c) 1988, (d) 1992, (e) 1993, (f) 1994, (g) 1995 and (h) 1996; and what percentage of the total number of those in this age group these figures represent.

The data you have requested can only be derived from the monthly count of people claiming unemployment-related benefits (i.e. Unemployment Benefit and Income Support which were replaced by Jobseeker's Allowance in October 1996, or National Insurance credits). Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign on the designated day are counted.

These figures by broad age group for Local Authority Districts have been available quarterly since 1983. The corresponding figures by age are only available quarterly and not seasonally adjusted, and are based on particular age bands. The data given in the attached table, relating to claimants aged 17 to 24 inclusive in July each year, correspond as closely as possible to your request.

Portsmouth authority district

	Claimant unemployed aged 17–24	Resident population aged 17–24[1]	Claimant unemployed aged 17–24 as a percentage of population
July 1988	2,300	31,400	7.3
July 1992	3,200	28,300	11.2
July 1993	3,300	26,400	12.6
July 1994	2,700	25,600	10.7
July 1995	2,500	25,600	9.9
July 1996	2,300	n/a	[2]8.9

Unemployment

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people aged 18 to 24 years have come off unemployment benefits in each of the past five years; and what were the alternative activities to which they moved. [4995]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. David Willetts, dated 25 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on how many people aged 18 to 24 years have come off unemployment benefits in each of the past five years; and what were the alternative activities to which they moved.

Total numbers leaving the claimant count from 1992 to 1996 are shown in the attached tables 1 to 3 but information on the destination of leavers from the claimant count is not available for 1992 to 1994.

For 1995 and 1996, numbers of leavers from the claimant count are shown in tables 2 and 3 according to the claim end reason categories identified in those years. The percentages shown in these tables are expressed in terms of leavers with a known destination.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons aged 18 to 24 years in the Colchester parliamentary constituency who are currently registered unemployed have never been employed. [5003]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tom Holt to Mr. Bob Russell, dated 25 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question asking how many persons aged 18 to 24 years in the Colchester parliamentary constituency who are currently unemployed have been employed.

The only source which provides information about whether or not a person has ever been employed (other than in casual and holiday jobs) is the Labour Force Survey. Because this is a sample survey no information is available below county level.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of households (a) in each region and (b) in total have no one in full-time employment; and if he will make a statement. [4854]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 24 June 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tom Holt to Mr. Lembit Öpik, dated 25 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on what percentage of households have no one in full-time employment.

Estimates available from the Labour Force Survey for non-pensioner households are shown in the attached table using the new Government Office Region (GOR) geography.

It is widely accepted that analyses of households with no one in employment or, in this case, no one in full-time employment, should exclude pensioner households. This area of analysis is relatively new for the LFS and the definition of non-pensioner or working age households is not yet firmly established. The table provided is based on the same definition of non-pensioner household as previous responses to parliamentary questions to this topic. The ONS has been assessing the various alternative definitions and expects to publish its recommendations in the September issue of Labour Market Trends.

Debt Relief

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the economic reform programmes agreed between low-income countries and the IMF as a condition for debt relief; what plans he has to press for a review of these requirements; and if will make a statement. [3877]

Mrs. Liddell: It is essential that countries which benefit from debt relief should have a track record of economic reform, and a commitment to continue with sound economic policies, as part of a wider commitment by debtors to balanced transparent economic reform programmes which encourage economic and social development and thus create the conditions in which poverty can be alleviated. We review the suitability of each country's proposed economic reform programme as a prerequisite for debt relief prior to participating in decisions on each case.

Windfall Tax

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the windfall tax will be a one-off levy. [5656]

Mr. Gordon Brown: As I explained to the House, the legislation will be for a one-off levy. The intention is that the legislation will enact this financial year, in one Bill and will not form a recurring part of the legislative programme.

Expenditure Control

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has for improving co-operation between the European Commission and Government Departments in the United Kingdom in the control of expenditure by United Kingdom Government Departments which is financed by the EC Budget. [5655]

Mrs. Liddell: I am very pleased to announce that agreement has been reached between the European Commission and the Government on the signature of Protocols between the Financial Controller of the European Commission and the Accounting Officer and Heads of Internal Audit of UK Departments with responsibilities for Structural Fund expenditure. These Protocols provide for an enhanced level of co-operation between the Commission's Financial Control and the Internal Audit Units of UK Departments in the control and auditing of Structural Fund expenditure. This will lead to a better use of the resources available for this purpose, agreement on common standards, and the exchange of relevant reports, without prejudicing the independence or statutory responsibilities of either party.

This is an important contribution to the improvement of the Community's financial management systems within the context of the Commission's strategy for improving and modernising financial management, Sound and Efficiency Management (SEM) 2000, which the Government strongly supports. Similar Protocols have already been agreed between the Commission and a number of other Member States, and I understand that discussions are under way between the Commission and further Member States.

Child Cash Allowance

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to announce changes in the level of the child cash allowance for under 16s. [3965]

Mr. Bradley: I have been asked to reply.

Modernising the Social Security system to reduce poverty and strengthen family life is one of our key priorities. We are committed to retaining universal Child Benefit from birth to age 16, and to uprate it at least in line with prices. The rates of Child Benefit are reviewed and announced annually.

HEALTH

St. Bartholomew's Hospital

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place an immediate moratorium on the downgrading, reduction and loss of services provided by St. Bartholomew's hospital. [3040]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 20 June 1997 the establishment of a review of London's health services to be conducted by an independent advisory panel chaired by Sir Leslie Turnberg, President of the Royal College of Physicians. During the review there is a moratorium on all hospital closures in London. The review panel will be advising in particular on the future of St. Bartholomew's hospital.

Hospitals (Capital Charges)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the calculation and implementation of capital charges on hospitals will be included in his review of the funding of the NHS. [4899]

Mr. Milburn: The comprehensive spending review announced on 11 June will look at all areas of spending. The Government's election manifesto made clear our commitment to a national health service based on need not on ability to pay. Every aspect of the Department of Health's comprehensive spending review will be judged against that commitment.

Devonshire Royal Hospital, Buxton

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the terms of reference of the current review of the Devonshire Royal hospital, Buxton, currently being carried out by NHS Estates, Leeds. [4900]

Mr. Milburn: The terms of reference for the review of the Devonshire Royal hospital, Buxton are:

to explore, with English Heritage, the possibility that the Devonshire Royal hospital be transferred to a heritage trust, and if so what arrangements would need to be put in place, and if this would enable the building to remain in continued National Health Service use; and to explore, with English Heritage and the local planning authority, what alternative uses the Devonshire Royal hospital might be put to if it becomes surplus to NHS requirements, and if early steps can be taken to identify a purchaser.

Vaccines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements exist for the long-term safety monitoring of MMR vaccines. [4920]

Ms Jowell: Before measles, mumps and rubella (MMR) vaccination was introduced into the United Kingdom immunisation programme in 1988, there was extensive experience of its use in many other industrialised countries. The United States had been using MMR routinely since the early 1970s and around 100 million doses have been administered. By the time a two dose programme was introduced in the UK, in 1996, there was extensive experience of two dose programmes in many other countries. For example, a two dose programme of MMR in place in Finland since 1982 has led to the elimination of these diseases from that country. The vaccine was reported to have an excellent safety record.

In the UK the Medicines Control Agency (MCA) collects information from many different sources to monitor the safety of all medicines, including vaccines, in clinical practice worldwide. Spontaneous reports of suspected adverse drug reactions are submitted to the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) and MCA by doctors, pharmacists, coroners and dentists under the voluntary 'yellow card' scheme in the UK. There is a statutory requirement for pharmaceutical companies to report reactions to their products on a world-wide basis. Companies also provide regular safety updates for their products to the MCA. The number and pattern of suspected adverse reactions reports from all data sources are regularly reviewed, and appropriate action initiated if there is any indication of a safety hazard. The safety of vaccines is carefully monitored both by the CSM and the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation which advise UK Health Ministers.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress made in work, funded by his Department, by the Public Health Laboratory Service in respect of vaccine safety. [4924]

Ms Jowell: The Public Health Laboratory Service is investigating adverse events associated with immunisation in children under two years of age, using hospital admissions data and child health immunisation records. Pilot studies in single districts have been published and copies of this paper have been placed in the Library. Their latest work, using regional data, will shortly be submitted for publication. Unfortunately, the results from studies using general practitioners' records do not so far suggest that this will be a useful source of data for identifying adverse reactions to vaccines.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out the criteria used for the testing of vaccines for immunogenicity and reactogenicity; what discussions his Department has had with the National Institute for Biological Standards and Control over the product licensing of vaccines; and when he next plans to meet the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation to discuss the administration of the MMR vaccine. [4921]

Ms Jowell: Before a new vaccine is licensed in the United Kingdom all of the information on its safety, quality and efficacy is evaluated by the Government's Medicines Control Agency and by the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM), an independent advisory committee. For a vaccine this will include assessment of clinical trials investigating the immunogenicity and reactogenicity of the product. There are no specific criteria laid out for the clinical testing of vaccines and each application for licensing by the MCA is taken on a case by case basis, depending on the type of vaccine.

The National Institute for Biological Standards and Control (NIBSC), as a European Official Medicines Control Laboratory, carries out the batch release testing for certain biologicals, including vaccines, which is required as a condition of the European or United Kingdom licence granted for the product in question. Such testing is aimed at assessing the purity and potency of each batch of the product against specifications defined in the product licence. NIBSC also reviews manufacturing protocols as part of the evaluation of batch release. NIBSC also provides expert advice on vaccines and some of its staff are members of the biologicals sub-committee of the Committee on Safety of Medicines. The Director of the NIBSC is a member of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI); any concerns NIBSC may have would be brought to the attention of that committee.

We have no plans to meet the JCVI but, as with all vaccines, the JCVI will keep the benefits and risks of MMR vaccination under review. We have asked to be kept informed of any developments.

NHS Trusts (Colchester)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to meet the chairman of the NHS trusts in the Colchester area to discuss the state of the trust's finances. [5002]

Mr. Milburn: We have no plans for a meeting, but Ministers are visiting many national health service organisations and meeting many people involved in the service, and this may well include the chairmen of trusts in the Colchester area. We are aware of the financial position of trusts, which is monitored by the National Health Service Executive.

Mr. Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to make the membership of NHS trusts in the Colchester area more representative and publicly accountable. [5004]

Mr. Milburn: We are introducing a range of measures in the coming weeks to ensure that appointments to the boards of both national health service trusts and health authorities are more democratic and representative of the communities that they serve.

Medicines (Costs)

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the average cost of medicines prescribed per treatment to the NHS in each of the last 10 years. [5075]

Mr. Milburn: The available information is shown in the table.

The average net ingredient cost per prescription for items dispensed, 1986 to 1996

England

Year	Average net ingredient cost per prescription item (£)
	Actual	At 1996 prices
1986	4.21	6.66
1987	4.55	6.84
1988	4.97	7.00
1989	5.29	6.97
1990	5.68	6.93
1991 (a)	6.08	6.98
1991 (b)	6.20	7.11
1992	6.72	7.40
1993	7.09	7.58
1994	7.47	7.85

1995	7.78	7.97
1996	8.26	8.26

1. 1986 to 1991 (a) data are from the PD1 series of forms and based on fees. They cover prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors, and personal administration.
2. 1991 (b) to 1996 data are from the new Prescription Cost Analysis [PCA] system based on items and have the same coverage as Note 1 above.
3. The net ingredient cost refers to the cost of the drug before discounts and does not include any dispensing costs or fees.
4. Figures at 1996 prices are calculated using the GDP Deflator.

Medicines Act (Disclosure of Data)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to amend section 118 of the Medicines Act 1968 to permit wider disclosure of data submitted by pharmaceutical companies to the licensing authority. [4923]

Mr. Milburn: We have no current plans to amend section 118 of the Medicines Act. However, in the light of the forthcoming White Paper on Freedom of Information, we will consider what further steps are necessary to maximise public access to information about their medicines whilst safeguarding genuine commercial confidentiality.

Alcohol Consumption

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how he intends to achieve the "The Health of the Nation" targets to reduce the percentage of women drinking more than 14 units of alcohol a week. [5322]

Ms Jowell: The proportion of women drinking above the previously recommended sensible levels has increased over the last 10 years. It is a trend that is reflected throughout most of Europe which is strongly related to women's changing socioeconomic status.

We are funding a project at the University of Birmingham on why people drink more than recommended sensible levels. This will inform future policy and health education campaigns. Activities targeting women have been encouraged at local level through the Health Education Authority. In addition, a successful new health promotion booklet was launched last year aimed at women over 35 in the lower socioeconomic groups; the booklet includes advice on sensible drinking.

We are considering possible ways of revising alcohol targets for women which reflect the advice in the 1995 inter-departmental report "Sensible Drinking".

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the costs to the national health service of the abuse of alcohol. [5173]

Ms Jowell: Estimates of alcohol-related morbidity and mortality vary widely; the most recent academic estimate of which we are aware is reproduced in the table.

	£ million
Psychiatric hospitals, inpatient costs	26.51
Non-psychiatric hospitals, inpatient costs	10.64
Other alcohol-related inpatient costs	109.41
General practice costs	2.79
Total	149.35

Resource Allocations

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the allocation of resources to health authorities will be based on a wholly-weighted formula from 1998–99. [5286]

Mr. Milburn: We are committed to an objective, needs-based approach to resource allocation. We are investigating the possibility of introducing further refinements to the weighted capitation formula in time for 1998–99 allocations.

Eye Tests

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the cost benefit analysis of reintroducing free eye tests with particular reference to people aged 60 years and over; [4425]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 10 June to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock), Official Report, column 421, on eye tests, what will be the terms of reference for the review of eye tests charges; what is its expected timetable; and if it will include an examination of the costs to other Departments of the reported increase in intervals between eye tests. [4427]

Mr. Milburn: We have yet to decide the terms of reference and timing of the review. No research has yet been commissioned.

Children in Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to provide every child in residential care with an independent visitor; and what is the expected timetable for implementation of this policy. [4773]

Mr. Boateng: Local authorities have a statutory duty to appoint an independent visitor for any child they are looking after if they believe that it would be in the child's best interest and communication between the child and his parents is infrequent.

A report is expected this summer from Sir William Utting on safeguards for children living away from home, including those in residential care. Government will consider any recommendations arising from the report on the need to extend the role of the independent visitor to all children in residential care.

EU Citizens (Residence Test)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if European Union citizens who have failed the habitual residence test and are being denied social security benefits will become the responsibility of social service authorities. [4426]

Mr. Boateng: It is for each local authority to determine in any particular case, and taking into account all relevant information, whether a person is in need of community care services and whether such services should be provided.

Creutzfeldt Jakob Disease

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the legal costs to date incurred by his Department and the Treasury Solicitor acting on behalf of the Medical Research Council, indicating separately disbursements and counsel fees, of the defence from claims brought against his Department and the Medical Research Council in respect of Creutzfeldt Jakob Disease litigation. [5111]

Ms Jowell: Identifiable legal costs to the Department of Health to date are approximately £500,000. These figures do not include the legal costs of the plaintiffs who were successful in their legal action in April–May 1996, since claims have not been received. Counsel costs are £320,000 and disbursements are £130,000.

In addition, numerous staff at various levels and for various periods of time have been involved in matters related to the litigation and their costs cannot be separately identified.

For the details of the costs incurred by the Treasury Solicitor on behalf of the Medical Research Council, I refer my hon. Friend to my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fishing Quota

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimated total purchase price at current market value of all fishing vessels in non-United Kingdom ownership eligible to catch fish under the fishing quota allocated to the United Kingdom. [4723]

Mr. Morley: The Department does not hold this information.

Genedically Modified Food

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans his Department has to regulate the supply of genetically modified food. [5087]

Mr. Rooker: The EC novel foods and novel food ingredients regulation 258/97, which came into force on 15 May, lays down an EU wide pre-market approval system and labelling requirements for novel foods and novel food ingredients including those containing, or produced from, genetically modified organisms (GMOs). All applications for approval will be considered by the UK's independent Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies he has authorised into the consumer safety aspects of genetically modified maize. [5167]

Mr. Rooker: While no specific studies have been commissioned on genetically modified (GM) maize, the Department is currently spending around £1 million a year on work to underpin the safety assessments undertaken by the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes on GM materials such as this.

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what use he plans to make of the Internet to make Government more open. [5105]

Mr. Morley: MAFF takes a positive view of the Internet as a medium for making its work more open and accessible. The introduction of a dedicated MAFF World Wide Web service (http://www.maff.gov.uk) in October 1996 has seen an expansion in the range of information available to Internet users. The Department is considering how to further develop electronic services to the public.

Regional Panels

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what mechanisms for consultation with farmers he intends to introduce to replace the MAFF regional panels. [4925]

Mr. Rooker: We have arrangements for consulting formally with a wide range of interests, including farmers, about a wide range of issues. These will continue. Ministers have begun a new system of regular regional consultations with a wider representation of those involved in the countryside, including farmers, consumers, environmentalists, and from the food industry. Ministers will also be available and accessible to those who use, live and work in the countryside on their regular regional visits.

Horticulture

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to promote horticulture; and if he will make a statement. [4877]

Mr. Rooker: The Government is determined to see a flourishing horticulture industry in the United Kingdom. We will therefore be spending some £12.7 million in 1997–98 under our research programme, directed at improving the competitiveness and market responsiveness of the sector. Priority areas are those showing the greatest potential for growth and added value, especially where there is a clear trade gap opportunity such as extending our own growing seasons.

The financial assistance available to recognised producer groups under the reformed regime for fresh fruit and vegetables will also enable growers in the sector to improve their competitive edge. We are seeking to ensure that growers in the UK benefit fully from EU funds available under these new arrangements.

Antibiotics (Livestock Production)

Mr. Martyn Jones: to ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will establish a comprehensive review of the issues relating to the use of antibiotics in livestock production. [4879]

Mr. Rooker: The use of antibiotics in livestock production is kept under review. The independent scientific Veterinary Products Committee (VPC) advises the government on the safety, quality and efficacy of veterinary medicines and medicinal feed additives, including the possible development of antibiotic resistance in humans. The Advisory Committee on Microbiological Safety of Food has set up a Working Group to examine the issues of antibiotic resistance, including the possible effects of the use of veterinary products. The Working Group is due to report its findings by the end of 1997.

A European Commission expert Working Group is preparing a monitoring programme, and the Committee for Veterinary Medicinal Products, the European body responsible for scientific advice on veterinary medicinal products, has set up an ad hoc group to investigate the current status of antimicrobial resistance in animals and the potential for its transfer to man.

Forestry Commission Land

Mr. John Cryer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to halt the sale of Forestry Commission land in England; and if he will make a statement. [5223]

Mr. Morley: Our election manifesto stated that we favoured a moratorium on the large-scale sale of Forestry Commission land. Sales of all Commission land have been halted since the election was called.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his plans for the countryside stewardship scheme. [5185]

Mr. Morley: Countryside Stewardship is the main environmental land management scheme providing incentives for farmers and land managers in England outside the Environmentally Sensitive Areas. It provides a very important mechanism for helping to fulfil our Biodiversity Strategy commitments as well as offering benefits for landscape, history and public enjoyment of the countryside.

The scheme will continue to expand with £5 million available for approval of new agreements in 1997–98 and a further £5 million 1998–99 when the total annual expenditure on the scheme will have risen to £21 million.

In addition we now propose a further expansion of the scheme. We wish to test a series of new options to enhance bio-diversity of arable areas through the introduction of a pilot scheme in 1998 to be called Arable Stewardship. One of the two proposed pilot areas is in the south Cambridgeshire/Suffolk area with the other being in the West Midlands.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the potential implications of the release of genetically modified organisms into the environment; and if he will make a statement. [5300]

Mr. Rooker: (a) MAFF has commissioned new research on possible risks to the agricultural environment from the release of herbicide tolerant crops. The research, with a total budget of over £500,000, will start this year and the results will be available from about 2000.

(b) MAFF began a programme of research to look at the possible risks to the agricultural environment from the release of genetically modified organisms (GMOs) in 1990. Over £3.5 million has been committed to the programme and to date, results have not indicated any risks to the agricultural environment from the release of GMOs.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans his Department has to increase levels of surveillance for scrapie in sheep; and if he will make a statement. [4492]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 24 June 1997]: SEAC reviewed the options for scrapie surveillance and in their advice to Government on 23 May recommended a three part strategy consisting of (1) a survey of sheeps' brains from abattoirs, (2) a postal survey of farmers, (3) introduction of compulsory slaughter measures together with compensation and powers to conduct veterinary investigation of cases of scrapie.

The Government intends to implement these recommendations. The first survey has been commissioned with the Veterinary Laboratory Agency, Weybridge and a number of approaches are being examined by MAFF to take forward the second. Work for this survey will be commissioned shortly. The Agriculture Departments are consulting interested parties on the draft measures for the compulsory slaughter and compensation scheme.

Scrapie

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many cases of scrapie have been recorded in each of the last five years; [4493]

(2) what assessment his Department had made of the reported number of scrapie cases in sheep prior to his commitment to compensate affected farmers; and if he will make a statement. [4495]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 24 June 1997]: Scrapie became a notifiable disease on 1 January 1993. The confirmed cases in Great Britain year by year since the disease became notifiable were:

Year	Number
1993	328
1994	235
1995	254
1996	453
1997[1] (until end May)	213

[1] Until end May.

The Government's independent advisory committee, SEAC, has concluded that there is a probably a problem with under-reporting. Other countries face similar problems with this disease. The French Government has recently introduced compulsory slaughter and compensation measures, similar to our own proposals. It is likely that the increase in notifications in Great Britain over the last 18 months has been due to payments being made to farmers by research workers for material from scrapie affected sheep, as in the early 1990s when a research project in force led to a number of cases brought to the attention of the authorities, though at that time the disease was not notifiable.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what date his Department plans to introduce compensation for farmers whose sheep are suspected of having scrapie; and if he will make a statement. [4494]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 24 June 1997]: Agriculture Departments are consulting interested parties on draft measures for the Compulsory Slaughter and Compensation Scheme for sheep and goats affected by Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies (TSEs). The consultation period ends on 30 June and we will then carefully consider all the comments received.

Quarantine

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 11 June, Official Report, column 508, what representations he has received concerning the benefits of reforming current quarantine legislation; and if he will make a statement. [4808]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 24 June 1997]: Since 2 May, the Department has received 326 letters on this subject. The great majority are in favour of changing existing rabies control policy.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 11 June, Official Report, column 508, what plans he has to produce a consultative document on quarantine reform; and if he will make a statement. [4807]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 24 June 1997]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend, the Minister, to the hon. Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 19 June, Official Report, column 288.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 11 June, Official Report, column 508, what plans he has to meet organisations campaigning for reforms to quarantine legislation, to discuss alternatives to the current system; and if he will make a statement. [4809]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 24 June 1997]: I will be meeting the RSPCA and Passports for Pets on Thursday 3 July.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Qualified Majority Voting

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent measures affecting the United Kingdom's energy (a) sources and (b) supply will be subject to the qualified majority vote of all the members of the European Union. [5285]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Article 130s (2), which covers energy sources and supply, will remain subject to unanimity.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent qualified majority voting over regional policy was extended at the Inter-Governmental Conference at Amsterdam; and which countries (a) supported and (b) approved its extension. [5247]

Mr. Henderson: The voting rules for regional policy—articles 130 a–e—were not changed at Amsterdam. We cannot agree to publish the detailed views expressed by Heads of State and Government in a closed meeting.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent qualified majority voting was extended in respect of industrial policy at the Inter-Governmental Conference at Amsterdam. [5252]

Mr. Henderson: Article 130, the Industry title will remain subject to unanimity. However, it was agreed at Amsterdam that QMV should apply in respect of research and development policy.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent measures concerning (a) town and country planning, (b) land use and (c) management of United Kingdom water resources are subject to the qualified majority vote of all the members of the European Union. [5290]

Mr. Henderson: Article 130s(2), which covers town and country planning, land use, and management of water resources, will remain subject to unanimity.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent qualified majority voting over environmental policy at the Amsterdam Conference was extended. [5289]

Mr. Henderson: Qualified majority voting in the Environment Title was not extended at Amsterdam.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent qualified majority voting over social policy was extended at the Inter-Governmental Conference at Amsterdam. [5248]

Mr. Henderson: Voting arrangements in the current social agreement, now incorporated into the treaty, remain as before. Additions to the draft treaty include articles providing for measures to combat social exclusion (article 118.2), and on equality of opportunity and treatment of men and women (article 119.3). Decisions under these articles are to be taken by QMV.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries (a) opposed and (b) supported the extension of qualified majority voting on environmental policy. [5260]

Mr. Henderson: We cannot agree to publish the detailed views expressed by Heads of State and Government in a closed meeting.

Kenya (Elections)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to monitor elections in Kenya; and if he will make a statement. [5373]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We will seek to contribute to both international and local efforts to monitor the forthcoming elections in Kenya. Our exact plans have yet to be finalised. We are discussing with partners the co-ordination of our joint efforts. Staff from our High Commission in Nairobi are already monitoring voter registration and other preparations for the elections.

Albania

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he is supporting to strengthen the development of democracy in Albania. [5180]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We fully support the process of democratisation in Albania. We have seconded senior experts to assist the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe Mission which is advising the Albanians on the organisation of the 29 June elections. Twenty-one monitors from the UK, including 11 hon. Members, will observe the poll. More widely we are supporting the efforts of the European Union, the Council of Europe, who are providing advice on the judicial system and media training to the Albanians, and the Western European Union which is advising and training the Albanian police.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of nuclear weapons held by parties to international arms control negotiations which are (a) vulnerable to an early strike and (b) currently on alert status; and if he will make a statement. [4738]

Dr. Reid: I have been asked to reply as this matter falls within my area of responsibility. We share the view of the United States that heavy and multiple warheaded ICBMs are the most potentially vulnerable and destabilising strategic weapons. There are currently several thousand warheads deployed on such systems. We support, therefore, the efforts being made by the US to achieve the deactivation and subsequent elimination of these systems through the ratification by Russia of the START II Treaty.

DEFENCE

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the terms of reference for the strategic defence review announced by the Government; and if he will place copies of these in the Library. [4746]

Dr. Reid: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Dr. Jones) on 19 June 1997, Official Report, column 264. All Members of the House should have received a letter from the Secretary of State setting out the scope of the Strategic Defence Review and how we propose it will be undertaken. A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the special advisers in his Department, the Minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in his Department in the year up to 1 May. [5350]

Mr. George Robertson: Mr. Alasdair McGowan is already working as my Special Adviser. I have also invited Mr. Bernard Gray to become my Special Adviser and he will take up his appointment next month. Special Advisers are employed under terms and conditions based on the model contract for Special Advisers, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Mr. McGowan provides me with advice on any matter which I decide to refer to him in accordance with Schedule 1 (Part 1) of the model contract. He is also free to raise matters with me. Mr. Gray's appointment will be on the same basis.

In the year up to 1 May 1997, my predecessor employed one Special Adviser.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what review has been undertaken by NATO of its nuclear strategy in response to the World Court's advisory judgment on the legality of the threat of use of nuclear weapons; and what were its conclusions; [4300]

(2) what assessment he has made of the implications of the International Court of Justice's conclusion on the use of nuclear weapons for national defence for their use in defence of a coalition of nations bound by treaty. [4287]

Dr. Reid: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 22 May 1997 to him by my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), Official Report, column 136.

The Alliance has carefully examined the International Court of Justice's Advisory Opinion. The Court concluded by a large majority that there is in international law no comprehensive and universal prohibition of the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons. Allies agree that NATO's strategy of war prevention, including its nuclear component, is fully compatible with the United Nations Charter and international law.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what quantities and types of chemical weapon agents imported from the United States are held in store by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment; and if he will make a statement on the current safety status of the containers holding these agents. [4303]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Llew Smith, dated 25 June 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the quantities and types of chemical weapon agents imported from the United States held in store by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency.

Two chemicals are recorded as having being imported from the United States and are currently held in store at CBD. They are Methyl phosphonyl (or phosphonic) dichloride and Methyl phosphonous (or phosphinyl) dichloride. The current holding is 215kg and 1.018 tonnes respectively. These chemicals were included in the UK's declaration under the Chemical Weapons Convention. In addition to these transfers there have been a number of others over the years with the US, which fall below the chemical weapons convention threshold and for which it would involve disproportionate costs to identify.

The declared materials were imported in March 1955 and June 1964 and were transferred to CBD Porton from CBDE Nancekuke, Cornwall when it closed in 1980. They are awaiting disposal and are stored in airtight chemical drums in a controlled storage area. The condition of the containers is checked regularly. We anticipate disposal soon.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what landfill locations are used for the disposal of heavy metals extracted from chemical weapons munitions being incinerated at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down. [4299]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Llew Smith, dated 25 June 1997.

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about landfill locations used for the disposal of heavy metals extracted from chemical weapons munitions as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency.

The chemical weapons munitions being disposed of at Porton Down do not contain heavy metals so the question of landfill sites does not arise.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what environmental and safety information has been provided to his Department by those contracted to destroy outstanding British chemical weapon grenades, 9140–M6–CN–DM, held at RAF base Bad Wulfen. [4302]

Mr. Spellar: The destruction of outstanding British chemical weapon grenades at BAD Wulfen, is being conducted in accordance with German environmental legislation. Frequent meetings between my Officials, the German Authorities, selected German Army specialists, and the Contractor, have ensured this to be the case. A safety plan was also agreed following detailed discussions between local German government officials, the Contractor, and ammunition specialists from both the British and German Army. The stringent safety regulations already in force within the Ammunition Depot assisted this process. Whilst no specific information has been received by my Department from the Contractor on matters of environment and safety, the Contractor has, as a matter of course, contributed to the procedures which have been put in place.

Ex-service Affairs Unit

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to create an Ex-service Affairs Unit; and what is the expected timetable for the implementation of such a policy. [4776]

Dr. Reid: The Government is aware of proposals made by The Royal British Legion for the creation of an ex-Service Affairs Unit. This is a matter which needs careful consideration, and the Government will be looking into it in some detail.

NATO

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the revenue and capital costs of the current plans for NATO expansion. [5385]

Dr. Reid: No decisions have been taken on which countries will accede to NATO membership, when and on what terms. The costs of enlargement, which will fall both on the countries which join and on the existing members of the Alliance and which will be incurred over a long period, will depend on those decisions. Subject to that caveat, we expect the costs of enlargement to be manageable.

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what use he plans to make of the Internet to make Government more open. [5107]

Mr. Spellar: My Department is committed to providing information on its activities in accordance with the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. We recognise the potential of the Internet to assist in this process. The MOD Home Page is at:

www.mod.uk,

which provides links to other Defence-related pages, including the three Armed Services, who have Home Pages at:

www.army.mod.uk,

www.royal-navy.mod.uk and www.open.gov.uk/raf.rafhome.htm.

Information on the MOD web-site includes Departmental policy on Open Government and the Departmental complaints procedure, as well as policy developments, Ministerial statements and speeches, procurement and technological matters, and information on MOD organisation. We are currently reviewing the MOD web-site with a view to improving both the presentation and coverage of the information carried on it.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Public Limited Liability Companies

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will introduce measures to ensure that all public limited liability companies are required to file their annual accounts at Companies House within 90 days of the year end. [4822]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I have no plans to do so.

Coal Authority

Ms Cooper: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made in appointing a new chief executive of the Coal Authority to succeed Mr. Neville Washington. [5796]

Mr. Battle: The Coal Authority has announced the appointment, with my agreement, of Mr. Kenneth Fergusson as Chief Executive in succession to Mr. Neville Washington.

Auditors (Regulation)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will assess the advantages of replacing the recognised supervisory bodies responsible for regulating auditors with a single independent regulator. [4824]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government's business manifesto said that we would ensure there is a framework of independent regulation for the accounting profession. I shall bear in mind my hon. Friend's suggestion in that context.

Small Company Audits

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will introduce legislation to raise the threshold for small company audits in order to bring it in line with the definition of small company contained in the Companies Acts. [4819]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has no plans to do so. The threshold for audit exemption was last raised on 15 April 1997, following public consultation.

Companies Acts

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will assess the advantages of introducing powers equivalent to those contained in section 150 of the Financial Services Act 1986, into the Companies Act legislation. [4817]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 23 June 1997]: I have no plans to do so.

Genetically Engineered Food

Mr. Paice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what studies her Department has carried out on the consumer safety aspect of the importation of genetically engineered corn. [5169]

Mr. Rooker: I have been asked to reply.

I take it that the hon. Member is referring to the genetically modified (GM) maize currently being imported into the European Union from the USA, in which case I refer him to the reply given to him about the safety of GM maize earlier today.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Welfare to work

Ms Hewitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what will be the minimum period of unemployment which will qualify lone parents under the age of 25 years for inclusion in the welfare-to-work programme. [4841]

Mr. Alan Howarth: We will offer young people aged 18–24 (including lone parents), who have been unemployed for six months or more, a choice of high quality options designed to help them into work. These include a job, the chance to train, or an opportunity to work in the voluntary sector or on the Environmental Task Force.

We also propose to offer lone parents who are on income support, regardless of age, a package of Employment Service guidance and support in their search for work once their youngest child reaches the second term of full-time education.

Ms Hewitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if, as part of the Welfare to Work programme, he will assess the advantages of introducing, on a pilot basis, social enterprise zones to promote new approaches to generating sustainable employment in disadvantaged communities. [5064]

Mr. Howarth: We are currently working to implement our manifesto commitment to introduce Employment Zones in areas of high unemployment. By encouraging innovative approaches to bringing together and making more coherent different streams of help and funding currently available, Employment Zones will greatly benefit long-term unemployed people and their communities.

Assisted Places

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will publish his criteria for permitting an assisted place to continue to be offered to a child who has reached the age of 11 years. [4721]

Mr. Byers: The Education (Schools) Bill currently before Parliament provides for pupils aged 11 and over at the start of September 1997 to continue to hold their assisted places until the end of their secondary education. The Bill also provides for a discretionary power to allow, in certain circumstances, pupils receiving primary education to continue to hold their assisted places for a further period during which they receive secondary education. Each case will be considered sympathetically and on its own merits, once the Bill has received Royal Assent.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the cost to the Government of all children (a) currently at junior or primary school under the assisted places scheme and (b) expected to start this autumn under the scheme remaining in the scheme until the age of 18 years. [5187]

Mr. Byers: Supporting all primary age pupils in junior departments of participating senior schools—both those who took up assisted places in the current academic year and those who are expected to take up places in September 1997—through to age 18 would have cost in the region of £80 million at current prices in England from academic year 1997–98 onwards.

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what use he plans to make of the Internet to make Government more open. [5106]

Dr. Howells: The Department has a large Internet site which has been progressively developed and extended over the past two years and this will continue. From our new home page we offer signposted information for parents, schools, job seekers and employers. Material is also available on education and training generally and on equal opportunities. Our intention is to extend the site, wherever possible, to ensure that details of all aspects of the Department's policies will be available there.

As the number of people and organisation having access to the Internet increases, the Department plans to make extensive use of it as a medium for consultation on new or planned policy initiatives and to invite and freely exchange views. Later this year, all of the Department's staff will be able to use Internet email to speed communication with outside people and organisations, particularly its "partners" in taking forward improvements in education and training.

Teachers

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to introduce qualified teacher status for teaching staff in universities and colleges. [5356]

Ms Estelle Morris: We shall be considering very carefully what the National Committee of Inquiry has to say about teaching standards in universities and colleges in its report which is expected next month.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many schools in England and Wales currently have grant-maintained status; and what is the total additional budget allocation granted to these schools since 1990 in addition to that which they would have received through their local management of schools funding allocation; [5231]

(2) if he will list the public sources of funding made available to grant-maintained schools and not available to local authority schools indicating the total sums dispensed under each heading since 1990. [5332]

Mr. Byers: Responsibility for education in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. There are currently 1188 grant maintained (GM) schools in England. They receive two types of recurrent grants: annual maintenance grant (AMG) in respect of general school running costs and special purpose grants (SPGs) paid for specific purposes. The AMG that GM schools receive includes elements to cover school meals and the central administration and services provided directly by LEAs to LEA maintained schools. These are additional to the school budget shares which LEA schools receive through their LMS schemes.

Special Purpose Grants (SPGs) are intended to mirror existing funding arrangements operating in the LEA sector and to reflect specific aspects of GM status.

The calculation of grants to individual GM schools is a matter for the Funding Agency for Schools (FAS). I have therefore written to Sir Christopher Benson at the Funding Agency to ask him to provide with the figures and detailed background information requested.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much public money has been allocated to (a) the Grant-maintained Schools Foundation, (b) the Grant-maintained Standing Advisory Committee, (c) the Association of Heads of Grant-maintained Schools, (d) the National Association of Grant-maintained Primary Schools and (e) the Association of Grant-maintained and Aided Schools since the inception of these organisations. [5333]

Mr. Byers: The total grant paid by the Department to the Grant Maintained Schools Foundation since its inception in April 1994 is £2.6 million. Grant to GMSF ceases from 30 June 1997. The Grant Maintained Schools Advisory Committee (GMSAC) has received £0.3 million since April 1994. Prior to that, the Grant Maintained Standing Advisory Committee (the predecessor of GMSAC) was funded from the total grant paid by the Department to the Grant-Maintained Schools Centre (the predecessor of GMSF).

The Department has offered a maximum sum of £15,000 to each of the Association of Heads of Grant Maintained Schools, the National Association of Grant Maintained Primary Schools and the Association of Grant Maintained and Aided Schools to support effective consultation and communication with the GM sector.

Performance League Tables

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans there are to review the present use of performance league tables so as to address the issues of (a) utilising value added data and (b) the inclusion of absent and statemented pupils; and if he will make a statement. [5354]

Ms Estelle Morris: We are committed to the principle of publishing measures of value added alongside information on school performance. It is important that such measures are statistically valid, do not place an undue administrative burden on schools, and can be readily understood by parents. We have asked the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority to undertake feasibility studies into such measures and then to consult widely with schools, with a view to publication in 1998.

The treatment of absent and statemented pupils in primary performance tables is under review. We expect to announce our final decisions in the autumn on the arrangements for the publication of these tables by local education authorities.

Partnership Agreements

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to introduce home-school partnership agreements; what plans he has to promote a wider role for parent governors and parent representatives; what role the local authority will have in these developments; and if he will make a statement. [5355]

Ms Estelle Morris: Our Manifesto promised that we would increase the powers and responsibilities of parents. We are committed to having more parent governors and to parent representatives on LEAs. A major objective is to promote a culture of responsibility for learning within the family, through contracts between all schools and parents, defining the responsibilities of each. LEAs will have a major part to play in raising standards. We will announce our proposals in a White Paper very soon and initiate widespread consultation.

Pre-school Centres

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements are to be made for the inspection of private nurseries and other pre-school centres in order to control their quality. [5334]

Mr. Byers: The Government is committed to improving the quality of pre-school provision. For the time being, the present arrangements for inspection for private and voluntary providers of nursery education will continue.

We have made clear our intention to examine the regulatory and inspection regimes with a view to making them more uniform. A consultation exercise will begin in the Autumn.

Cash Limits

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what changes he has to announce to cash limits and running cost limits on votes within his responsibility for 1997–98. [5793]

Dr. Howells: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for Class IX, Vote 1, Department for Education and Employment programmes and central services, will be increased by £14,693,000 from £9,404,771,000 to £9,419,464,000.

This is the result of a transfer of £1,500,000 to Class X, Vote 1 (the Department of National Heritage) for Dance and Drama students, a transfer of £13,000,000 from Class XI, Vote 1 (the Department of Health) for the merger of Imperial College with the West London Medical School; a decrease of £621,000 in capital expenditure offset by a corresponding increase in the non-Voted DfEE/LACAP cash limit to fund a school capital project, with no overall change to the DfEE's control total, and a switch of £3,814,000 from section G to Section F of the Vote to enable the British Academy to administer the Post Graduate Awards Scheme.

As a result of the changes, the DfEE/LACAP cash limit will be increased by £621,000 from £72,505,000 to £73,126,000.

The running costs provision for Class IX, Vote 1 will be increased by £390,000 from £255,174,000 to £255,564,000. The gross running costs limit for the Department for Education and Employment is increased by £390,000 from £1,056,750,000 to £1,057,140,000.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Aid (Cost-effectiveness)

14. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking further to improve the cost effectiveness of overseas aid. [3868]

Clare Short: The Government will publish a White Paper this autumn which will set out how, through more coherent policies, we will address our prime objective of eliminating poverty and promoting sustainable development.

Yemen

16. Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proposals she has to improve the targeting of development aid programmes to Yemen. [3871]

Mr. Foulkes: The bilateral programme focuses on key priorities agreed with the Yemeni Government. These are support for the World Bank programme to regenerate Aden Port and help to strengthen economic and financial management within Ministries playing a leading role in Yemen's economic recovery. We also contribute to EU assistance to Yemen.

UNESCO

17. Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what consultations she has held on the renewal of United Kingdom membership of UNESCO. [3872]

Clare Short: I met Mr. Mayor, UNESCO's Director-General, in London on 2 June. I will follow this up with a visit to UNESCO on 1 July and take the opportunity to meet the UK staff of the organisation. My officials had an initial meeting with the United Nations Association and the Friends of UNESCO on 18 June.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which programmes will not now proceed as a result of the cost to her Department of the UNESCO subscription. [5263]

Mr. Foulkes: I refer the hon. Member to the replies my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development gave to the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Dr. Tonge), Hansard 2 June 1997, column 26, and to the right hon. and learned Member for Sleaford and North Hykeham (Mr. Hogg), Hansard 20 May 1997, column 37.

Aid (Targeting)

18. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to ensure that the overseas aid budget is targeted for the benefit of the poorest people in less developed countries. [3873]

Clare Short: The Government are committed to eradicating poverty and promoting sustainable development. We are developing coherent policies which promote real and lasting development for poor people.

I am reviewing our existing spending programmes to ensure resources are focused on our central objective of eradicating poverty.

The Government will issue a White Paper in the autumn setting out how we will work with our partners to tackle global poverty and promote sustainable development.

Sustainable Development

19. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she plans following the Prime Minister's announcements at UN General Assembly special session concerning the promoting of sustainable development. [3874]

Clare Short: My Department will follow through the Prime Minister's commitment to sustainable development and combatting poverty in the forthcoming White Paper and play a key role in the initiatives announced on climate change and energy efficiency, forests and fresh water as well as the replenishment of the global environment facility.

Third World Debt

20. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress she has made in implementing her commitment to take steps to reduce third world debt. [3875]

Clare Short: Both my right hon. Friend the Chancellor and I have been working to secure a solution to the debt problems of the poorest countries. Agreement on debt relief for a number of countries is expected from creditors over the next few months.

Poverty and Hardship

21. Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of a possible link between poverty in the poorest countries of the world and poverty and hardship in the industrialised countries. [3876]

Clare Short: The poor face the same hardships across the world: unequal opportunity; homelessness; lack of income, assets and skills. The country made clear in the general election that it wanted an increase in social justice at home and abroad.

United Nations Industrial Development Organisation

22. Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she intends to continue British membership of UNIDO. [3878]

Clare Short: I had a useful meeting with the Director-General of UNIDO, Mr. Maurico de Maria y Campos, on 12 June. UK membership of UNIDO is now under active review.

Human Rights

23. Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what account she takes of human rights issues in deciding her priorities for overseas aid. [3879]

Clare Short: My Department will adopt a human rights based approach to development. Our distinct contribution will be to focus on those rights which are important for the elimination of poverty and the dignity of the disadvantaged. We will seek to establish development partnerships with Governments that share our aim of poverty eradication.

Multilateral Aid Programmes

24. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussion she has had with the heads of multilateral humanitarian agencies about current multilateral aid programmes. [3880]

Clare Short: I attended a Humanitarian Forum in Switzerland on 8–10 June hosted by the International Committee of the Red Cross, and had discussions with heads of humanitarian agencies. This included the difficulties of access to populations affected by armed conflicts, deliberate attacks on humanitarian workers and violations of international humanitarian law.

My Department is reviewing UK policy on humanitarian assistance as part of the overall process of reform in the UN system.

Bilateral Aid

25. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to increase the emphasis in United Kingdom bilateral aid on counteracting poverty. [3881]

Clare Short: The elimination of poverty is at the centre of our agenda. I am currently reviewing all of our programmes to ensure that resources are targeted accordingly. A White Paper will issue in the autumn setting out how, through more coherent policies, we will tackle global poverty and promote sustainable development. I am delighted that there is to be a debate on International development policies on 1 July, during which hon. Members will have an opportunity to feed their thoughts and ideas into the paper.

Kashmir

26. Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department has made available to the refugees displaced by the conflict in Indian-controlled Kashmir to date; and what plans she has for such assistance in the future. [3882]

Clare Short: We have made the following contributions to the Committee of the International Red Cross (ICRC) for its operations in Kashmir and Jammu which include protection, visiting detainees, monitoring and dissemination of International Humanitarian Law.

1994–95: 150,000

1995–96: 150,000

1996–97: 150,000

Future appeals would be sympathetically considered.

Land Mines

27. Valerie Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding her Department is providing for humanitarian mine clearance. [3883]

Clare Short: The UK has committed over £31 million, including our share of European Community activities, to humanitarian demining operations since 1991. We remain committed to an active programme of humanitarian mine clearance.

World Population Growth

28. Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what policies she has to address the issue of world population growth. [3884]

Clare Short: Our priority is for the elimination of poverty through sustainable development. This goal is impossible to achieve without the early stabilisation of world population. More and more people want to plan their families, have fewer children and give them a better start in life. Many millions are unable to do so. Strategies which improve access to family planning and other reproductive health services will be at the forefront of our international development partnerships.

Africa

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on aid to Africa. [3857]

Clare Short: Forty per cent. of people living in Sub Saharan Africa are living in poverty. This is why Africa is a major focus of our programme. As my hon. Friend will have noticed the Prime Minister announced two initiatives at the Denver summit. First, to increase our commitments in the next three years to basic education, health care and the provision of safe drinking water by 50 per cent. Second, we agreed to untie our contribution to the Special Programme for Africa (SPA).

Aid Budget

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is her Department's target for the proportion of GNP which overseas aid will constitute for each year to 2001; and how this target relates to the UN target. [5269]

Mr. Foulkes: For the next two years we will be working within existing departmental ceilings. But our commitment to reverse the decline in spending as a proportion of GNP remains. We are reviewing existing expenditure plans and I am confident that the strategies that are now being put in place to focus our assistance more directly on poverty eradication, will demonstrate the case for additional resources thereafter.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if it is her policy to achieve an increase in real terms year on year in the overseas aid budget. [5274]

Mr. Foulkes: We will work within existing financial ceilings this year and next while putting in place strategies to deliver progress towards the objective of eradicating poverty. As we demonstrate progress, we expect to justify additional resources being made available in line with our Manifesto commitment.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the special advisers in her Department, the minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in her Department in the year up to 1 May. [5358]

Clare Short: The Special Advisers in the Department for International Development are Jessica Crowe and Daniel Harris; both are responsible to me. They are employed under terms and conditions based on the "Model Contract for Special Advisers", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Ms Crowe and Mr. Harris are advising me on the development of Government policy and its effective presentation in accordance with Schedule I (Part I) of the Model Contract.

Afghanistan

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her policy is on the provision of assistance to Afghanistan; and what steps she is taking to ensure the United Kingdom assistance to areas controlled by the Taliban benefit women as well as men. [3810]

Clare Short: Our policy in Afghanistan is to create an environment where all Afghans, men and women will realise basic human rights leading to a more secure and stable social and economic life.

The UK subscribes to the common donor position on gender and human rights issues in Afghanistan that all parties should recognise, protect and promote the equal rights and dignity of men and women, including access to education, employment outside the home, personal security and freedom from intimidation and harassment. The UK works closely with other donors for the adoption of more appropriate humanitarian policies and strategies and it is our policy to deal robustly with human rights concerns and repeated representations are made to all factions in Afghanistan to this effect.

Earth Summit 2

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the contribution of Earth Summit 2 to the elimination of third world debt. [3811]

Mr. Foulkes: I welcome any discussions which draw attention to the need for sustainable development and the need to tackle the debt problems of some developing countries. Debt relief should be part of a wider economic commitment by debtors to balanced economic reforms which encourage sustainable development. Practical solutions need to be implemented in the appropriate fora.

Bosnia

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the United Kingdom's contribution towards reconstruction in Bosnia. [3870]

Clare Short: We have provided funding for reconstruction projects to underpin the Dayton agreement of December 1995. DFID has contributed £383 million since 1991 in aid to the former Yugoslavia: £213 million bilaterally and £170 million through the European Union.

Twinning

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proposals she has to encourage local authorities to develop twinning links with towns and cities in developing countries. [5171]

Mr. Foulkes: We have been supporting local authority technical links schemes in Central and Eastern Europe and Central Asia through the Know How Fund since 1991. We are exploring the case for supporting similar institutional linkages in developing countries as part of our current review of the aid programme in preparation for the White Paper.

Foreign Students

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proposals she has to increase opportunities for appropriately qualified young people from developing countries to attend British universities. [5170]

Mr. Foulkes: In financial year 1995–96, the last year for which we have figures, we spent some £69.8 million on over 9,000 scholars and trainees who studied in the UK. I have no proposals to increase this expenditure at present but we welcome any suggestions from Members and others as part of the White Paper consultation.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Dundonald Training Centre

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Dundonald Training Centre has permission to recruit new trainees; and if she will make a statement. [4244]

Mr. Worthington: Responsibility for this subject has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 24 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question on the recruitment of new trainees to Dundonald Training Centre.

As you know, the Education and Training Minister, Mr Worthington, has announced that Dundonald Training Centre will remain in operation, at a reduced level of activity for a further year. The Centre has been authorised to recruit new trainees for the vocational classes which will be available from September this year. In addition, the Centre will continue to monitor and assess the progress of some 250 trainees who have completed their training at Dundonald and who will continue their NVQ based training and employers.

I hope you find this information useful.

Health and Social Services Staff

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons (a) are employed now and (b) were employed five years ago by the Department of Health and Social Services. [4267]

Mr. Worthington: The information is as follows:

Staff employed by the Department of Health and Social Services

	1992	1997
DHSS (HQ)	1,631	1,081
Social Security Agency	5,743	5,617
Child Support Agency	—	1,205
Health Estates Agency	—	117
Total	7,374	8,020

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons (a) are employed now and (b) were employed five years ago by the Southern area health and social services board, indicating the number of these employed in administration in each case. [4270]

Mr. Worthington: The information requested is as follows:

	1992	1997
Total staff	322	154
Administrative and clerical	157	115

I am currently considering levels of administration in the Health Service throughout Northern Ireland to ensure that the maximum level of resources goers straight into patient care.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons (a) are employed now and (b) were employed five years ago by the Armagh and Dungannon Health and Social Services Trust, indicating the number of these employed in administration in each case. [4271]

Mr. Worthington: The information requested is as follows:

	1992	1997
Total staff	2,800	3,353
Administrative and clerical	290	350

Fair Employment Commission

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) Roman Catholics and (b) Protestants are employed by the Fair Employment Commission. [4269]

Mr. Worthington: The latest available information on numbers and religious composition of staff employed by the Fair Employment Commission for Northern Ireland is contained in the Commission's Seventh Monitoring Report which was published in March 1997. The report shows that at 1 January 1996, the position was as follows:

Protestant: 38 (42.7 per cent.)

Roman Catholic: 51 (57.3 per cent.

Total: 89

Planning

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what factors led to the exclusion of the area plans for the Down and Newry and Mourne district council areas from the Planning Agency's business case for the financial year 1996–97. [4264]

(2) what is the time scale for the commencement and execution of the work required in respect of the Down and Newry and Mourne area plans; [4265]

(3) when the business and corporate plan for the Planning Agency for 1997–98 will be published. [4266]

Mr. Murphy: Responsibility for this subject has been delegated to the Planning Service under its Chief Executive, Mr. T. W. Stewart. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from T. W. Stewart to Eddie McGrady, dated 20 June 1997:

Lord Dubs has asked me to reply to your questions about the Down and Newry and Mourne area plans, and also about the publication of the Planning Service's Corporate and Business Plan 1997–98.

Only Development Plans which were to be adopted in 1996–97 were included in the Agency's Business Plan for that year. The position is the same for the 1997–98 Business Plan, published earlier this month, a copy of which is available in the Library. When drawing up plans for 1998–99 and future years, the programming of work on both plans will be taken into account in accordance with competing priorities and available resources. At present, there is no agreed time-scale for the commencement and execution of the work.

Although the notional end date for the Down Area Plan is late 1997 and for the Newry and Mourne Area Plan late 1999, they will remain material planning considerations in the determination of any planning applications submitted after those dates.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many cases of benefit fraud are currently (a) being investigated and (b) awaiting trial, as a result of people contacting the Benefit Fraud Hotline; and if he will make a statement; [1547]

(2) how many convictions have resulted from evidence gathered from the Benefit Fraud Hotline; and if he will make a statement; [1548]

(3) how many people have rung the Benefit Fraud Hotline in each month since it was introduced; and if she will make a statement. [1546]

Mr. Denham: Modernising the Social Security system is one of our key priorities. Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. We will develop a system that supports work, savings and honesty. We will streamline services to provide better, simpler more efficient services to clients. We will be vigilant in tackling fraud, ensuring value for taxpayers' money and rebuilding confidence in the Social Security system.

The operation of the National Benefit Fraud Hotline is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 24 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions concerning the Benefit Fraud Hotline.

There are 20,090 referrals from the National Benefit Fraud Hotline currently under investigation. The number of cases that have been referred for prosecution to date as a result of calls to the Hotline is 185.

The number of convictions arising from referrals to the Hotline is not collated.

The number of calls to the Hotline is shown in the attached table. Information is not yet available for May 1997.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Number of calls to the national Benefit Fraud Hotline

Month	Duration	Number of calls
1996
August	4 weeks	41,826
September	5 weeks	32,633
October	4 weeks	22,360
November	4 weeks	21,805
December	4 weeks	14,139
1997
January	4 weeks	15,831
February	4 weeks	27,075
March	5 weeks	31,185
April	4 weeks	18,680

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the value of fraudulent claims uncovered by the Benefits Agency in each of the 13 area directorates for each of the last five years for which figures are available (a) in terms of the cash value of benefits saved and (b) as a percentage of total payments made for each of the benefits administered. [3214]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to restore confidence in the benefit system by tackling fraud and ensuring value for taxpayers money. Queries on Benefits Agency operational matters are the responsibility of Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 23 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question requesting the value of fraudulent claims uncovered by the Benefit Agency (BA) in each of the 13 area directorates for each of the last five years for which figures are available (a) in terms of the cash value of benefits saved and (b) as a percentage of total payments made for each of the benefits administered.

The information is not available in the format requested. Fraud savings are derived from more than one source including the Benefit Fraud Investigation Service (BFIS), Organised Fraud Investigations (OFI), Central Benefit Directorates and, from 1995/96, the Security and Control Programme. The differing organisational set up within these sections do not match the Area Directorate structure. However figures are available for total fraud savings for the BA and are shown in the attached Annex.

The savings are shown as Weekly Benefit Savings (WBS) and not in strict cash terms. WBS are calculated by multiplying the actual amount of benefit saved by 32 (32 weeks being the average length of time that benefit would have been paid, if it had not been reduced or withdrawn following the intervention of a fraud officer.)

While this gives an assessment of the amounts of benefit saved by counter fraud activity, it does not show the public expenditure savings accruing in that year from current and previous activity.

Changes were introduced in the 1996 budget to try and refine the way savings are accounted for in the public expenditure plans. Savings are no longer attributed wholly to the year in which the fraud is detected, but spread over the period which the fraud would otherwise on average have continued. Due to changes in accounting methods a direct comparison in cash terms with previous years is not possible.

We do not collate fraud savings separately by benefit type. Therefore fraud savings are expressed as a percentage of the total programme spend on all benefits for the last five years.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Year	BA fraud (WBS) savings (£ billion)	BA programme expenditure (£ billion approximately)	Fraud savings (WBS) as a percentage of programme expenditure
1991–92	0.447	56	0.8
1992–93	0.558	62	0.9
1993–94	0.654	67	0.98
1994–95	0.717	70	1.02
1995–96	1.222	73	1.67

1. Figures are provisional and subject to change.
2. Both BA fraud savings/programme expenditure figures exclude those attributable to local authorities.
3. Savings figures for 1996–97 are not yet available.

Pensions Review

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if it is her policy that the reform of social security currently being considered by the Government should benefit individuals currently in receipt of pensions as well as those who are not yet pensioners. [2295]

Mr. Denham: The Government believes that all pensioners should share fairly in increasing national prosperity. We will set up a review of the central areas of insecurity for elderly people: all aspects of the basic pension and its value, second pensions including SERPS, and community care.

Asylum Seekers

Ms Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to reinstate benefits for asylum seekers. [2439]

Mr. Bradley: We are committed to a wide ranging review of Social Security: our aim is to encourage independence and reduce poverty. The position of asylum seekers will be considered as part of this review.

Following the Home Secretary's declaration on 16 May 1997 of Zaire as a country of upheaval, a Zairean national who entered previously and applies for asylum within three months of the declaration being made, is eligible to claim income support, income based jobseeker's allowance, housing benefit and council tax benefit while his or her asylum application is considered by the Home Office.

Platform for Action

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will publish an annual Government report on the progress of the 1995 Platform for Action; and if she will make a statement. [3917]

Ms Ruddock: We will be publishing an annual Government report on the progress of the Platform for Action. The Platform for Action was the outcome document of the United Nations' 4th World Conference on Women. It covers matters of concern to women and girls in all areas of policy and has set the agenda for governments and non-governmental organisations as they work to promote equality between women and men. We are fully committed to its implementation.

Pensioners (Benefits)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available how much (a) income support, (b) housing benefit and (c) council tax relief has been claimed by men aged between 60 and 64 years. [3845]

Mr. Bradley: Modernising the Social Security system to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives is one of this Government's key priorities.

The available information is in the tables.

Mortgage Interest Payments

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to review the period between claims for payment of mortgage interest by recipients of income support and the first payments; and if she will make a statement. [3841]

Mr. Bradley: The Government is committed to reforming and modernising the welfare state to fulfil the objectives of promoting work incentives, reducing poverty and welfare dependency, and strengthening community and family life.

This will involve considering, with lenders and insurers, a range of measures to give more security to home-owners with a mortgage. We will keep detailed benefit rules under consideration as we develop our plans.

Young People

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the main changes in Social Security law that have affected the entitlement of (a) 16 to 17 year-olds and (b) 17 to 25-year-olds or their parents to benefit in the last five years. [4166]

Mr. Bradley: The main changes in the last five years affecting benefit entitlement for 16 to 17-year-olds and 17 to 25-year-olds were as follows:

For 16 to 25-year-olds

In Jobseeker's Allowance, which was introduced in October 1996, there is a common rule which ensures that all unemployed people aged 18 to 24 are treated the same, regardless of their contribution record. A person of this age who is entitled to Jobseeker's Allowance, whether contribution-based or income-based, will be paid at a lower rate than that for a person aged 25 years or over.

In Housing Benefit, the main change was the restriction of the amount of rent which can be used to calculate benefit entitlement. It limits the rent to the average cost of non-self-contained accommodation in the locality in which the claimant lives. This chance affects most claimants under 25 living in the private rented sector, and was introduced on 6 October 1996.

For families

From April 1997 (for Income Support, Jobseeker's Allowance, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit) and October 1997 (Family Credit and Disability Working Allowance), the date from which age-related increases for children aged 11 and 16 are paid has been moved from the birthday itself to the first Monday in September following the birthday. There is no longer an increase in the rate for young dependent people on reaching age 18.

In Family Credit, from July 1996, Family Credit awards terminate when a child leaves full-time education, but only in families where the child is the last remaining child in the family.

In April 1995, rules in Severe Disablement Allowance for claiming adult dependency increases and child dependency increases were aligned with Incapacity Benefit.

Other measures have been introduced in the last five years (for example Incapacity Benefit and Disability Living Allowance) which may have affected young people or their parents, but the measures have not been targeted at these groups particularly.

This Government's intention is to modernise the Social Security system so that it supports work, savings and honesty. One of our first steps is to focus on helping people off welfare and into work.

Low Pay

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time persons employed by her Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (iii) less than £3 an hour. [4199]

Mr. Field: The information requested is in the table.

	Full-time	Part-time
Less than £3.00 per hour	None	None
Less than £3.50 per hour	6,472	1,017
Less than £4.00 per hour	[1]10,392	[1]1,347

[1] Figures also include those staff paid at £3.50 per hour.

1. The information includes staff who are employed on a casual basis.

2. For the purposes of this table, the hourly rates quoted above are based on a 42 hours conditioned working week which includes payment for a lunch hour each working day (i.e., for 5 hours).

3. Figures are based on basic salary and exclude allowances.

4. All staff (excluding those employed on a casual basis) may elect to join the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme which is not based on employee contributions. Civil service pay rates have traditionally reflected the non-contributory nature of these pension arrangements.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the levels of accuracy currently achieved by the CSA; and if she will make a statement. [4631]

Mr. Bradley: We intend to look closely at all aspects of the Child Support Agency to ensure that it provides an efficient and effective service.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Ian Pearson, dated 24 June 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency accuracy levels.

The 1997–98 Secretary of State target set for the Agency relating to accuracy is for the cash value of all assessments checked in the year to be correct in at least 85% of cases.

Performance against this target is determined by examination of a statistically valid sample of maintenance assessments, which are checked to ensure that the cash value of the assessment (or change to the assessment) is correct within one penny. To satisfy the target 85% of all cases checked throughout the year must be correct to the last penny.

The accuracy of the cash value maintenance has improved over recent years for 79% reported for March 1996 to 87% reported for March 1997. Performance against the target in this financial year has been maintained at this level, with accuracy running at 86% in April and 88% in May.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of time from the issue of a maintenance inquiry form by the CSA to the issuing of the maintenance assessment. [4627]

Mr. Bradley: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide an efficient and effective service to all its clients throughout the child support assessment process.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Ian Pearson, dated 24 June 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the processing of applications for child support. I am afraid I cannot give you precise information in the format you have requested.

The Agency does not collect general information on average processing times, but measures performance against its Secretary of State target relating to the clearance of applications. In 1996–97, the target was to clear 60 per cent. of new maintenance applications within 26 weeks, with no more than 10 per cent. of outstanding applications to be over 52 weeks old. Over the full year, 54 per cent. of new maintenance applications were cleared within 26 weeks, and 12 per cent. of all applications were over 52 weeks old at 31 March 1997. Performance improved towards the end of the year, so that the in-month figure for clearances within 26 weeks stood at 60 per cent. in February and 63 per cent. in March.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many second tier reviews were conducted by the CSA in (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97; and what was the average length of time taken from receipt of request for review to notification of its outcome; [4629]

(2) what is the current backlog in second tier review work in the CSA. [4630]

Mr. Bradley: We expect the CSA to provide an efficient and effective service to all its clients. The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Ian Pearson, dated 24 June 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security concerning second tier reviews.

Details of clearances for the last three years are as follows:

1994–95: 28,272

1995–96: 26,955

1996–97: 36,339

The improved performance in 1996–97 is a direct result of the drive within the Agency to reduce the number of reviews outstanding. At the end of 1995–96, this stood at 11,189, but by 31 March 1997 had been reduced to 6,279. The numbers continue to fall, with 4,903 reviews outstanding at the end of May 1997.

The Agency does not collect information on average processing times. We do, however, have details of the age of the cases on hand, with cases over 26 weeks old considered to be in arrears. Our drive to reduce the number of reviews outstanding concentrated particularly on the clearance of these older cases, with the result that only 647 applications were over 26 weeks old at the end of the year, compared to 3,056 at the end of 1995–96. At 31 May, this had increased slightly to 699 cases.

I hope this is helpful.

Disability Living Allowance (Children)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what plans she has to review the exclusion of children under five years of age from the mobility component of disability living allowance; [4774]

(2) what is her Department's estimate of the annual cost of extending the mobility component of disability living allowance to children aged under five years of age. [4775]

Mr. Denham: We are planning to review provision for disabled people to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and provide work incentives. We will announce the scope for that review in due course. The estimated annual cost of extending the mobility component of disability living allowance to children under five years of age would be £40 million.

WALES

Minimum Wage

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time employees of his Department and its agencies are paid (i) less than £4 an hour, (ii) less than £3.50 an hour and (iii) less than £3 an hour. [4194]

Mr. Ron Davies: Full and part-time staff are paid on the same basis; the number of hours worked does not affect the hourly rate of pay.

On 31 March 1997, the number of permanent staff in Welsh Office and its Agency (Cadw) earning less than:

(i) £4 per hour was 128.

(ii) £3.50 per hour was nil.

(iii) £3 per hour was nil.

In addition some 180 casual staff were employed on 31 March 1997 as AA or equivalent. Many of these will be employed towards the bottom of the relevant pay scale which is equivalent to less than £4 per hour. Information about precise numbers can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Devolution

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends to produce a popular version of the proposed White Paper on devolution for Wales. [4298]

Mr. Ron Davies: We shall be producing a factual and informative leaflet in good time before the referendum.

Belmont Special School

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit Belmont special school, Buckley, Flintshire. [4456]

Mr. Hain: Neither I nor my right hon. Friend has any plans to visit the school. Subject to other commitments, we are happy to consider invitations to visit schools in Wales, including special schools.

State Schools

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the total value of balances held by state schools in Wales. [5067]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 23 June 1997]: According to section 122 outturn statements for 1995–96, the latest year for which this information is available, LEA maintained schools in Wales held balances of just under £50 million. This equates to an average balance of £25,500 per school. Grant-maintained schools in Wales had net current assets of £958,969, allocated across various heads including capital funds. This equates to an average balance—including capital funds—of £59,936.

The overall average balance for all schools in Wales is £25,780.

Sarn-y-Bryn Caled Road Junction

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 16 June, Official Report, column 62, if finance is available for the provision of a roundabout at the Sarn-y-Bryn Caled junction, Welshpool, in the current roads programme; and what is the expected completion date for the work on the roundabout. [4870]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 24 June 1997]: I am not able to confirm the finance available for the roads programme for 1998–99 until completion of our roads programme review due later this year. Once started, the anticipated contract duration for the redevelopment is six months.

Public Bodies

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the administrative and other running costs of each public body to which he makes appointments in rank order for the last year for which figures are available. [4536]

Mr. Ron Davies: The following tables set out the latest available information for those bodies to which the Secretary of State makes appointments, as listed in the annual publication, "Public Bodies", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Driving Offences

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action the Government are taking to ensure that non-British nationals committing driving offences in this country will be brought to justice in Britain. [4635]

Mr. Michael: Any person, whether or not a British national, who commits an offence of any kind in the United Kingdom and leaves the jurisdiction before being dealt with may be summonsed to return for trial. The summons may be served on the person out of the jurisdiction, though by virtue of section 2(3) of the Criminal Justice (International Co-operation) Act 1990, failure to appear in response to the summons is not punishable under United Kingdom law. In the case of a serious offence, it may be possible to seek the person's extradition to stand trial in the United Kingdom.

Immigration

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the procedures to be followed in respect of those primary purpose cases before tribunals withdrawn following the guidance given to the Chief Adjudicator on 6 May; and if he will indicate when guidance will be given on the case of Mrs. Sewarra (case number TH/4170/96. [5494]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Following the abolition of the primary purpose rule, Home Office officials are reviewing all outstanding appeals where primary purpose was one of the grounds for refusal to decide whether there is sufficient evidence to contest the appeal on any of the other grounds quoted in the refusal letter. If the refusal was based solely on primary purpose or if there is insufficient evidence to contest the other grounds, the entry clearance officer will be instructed to issue entry clearance and invite the appellant to withdraw the appeal. In all other cases, the appeal will be contested. Officials are keeping the Independent Appellate Authority, which is solely responsible for listing appeals, informed as this review proceeds. The review of some 1,500 outstanding appeals will be completed as soon as possible. I have written to the hon. Member on the case he raises.

Perjury

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the longest term of imprisonment imposed by the courts on an individual found guilty of perjury since 1979; [5501]

(2) how many persons have been prosecuted and found guilty of perjury in each year since 1979. [5502]

Mr. Michael: The longest term of imprisonment imposed at the Crown Court since 1979 for an offence of perjury is five years (given in 1987 and 1989).

Prosecution and conviction data are shown in the table:

Number of persons prosecuted at magistrates' courts and convicted [1] at all courts for offences of perjury [2], 1979–1995

[2] An offence under the Perjury Act 1911 and Criminal Justice Act 1925, Sec. 36, Criminal Justice Act 1967 Sec. 89, Mines and Quarries (Tips) Act 1969 Sec.12(2) (in part), Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 Sec. 106, Mental Health Act 1983 Sec. 126(4), County Courts Act 1984 Sec. 133, and Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 Sec. 75.

Surrey Police Force

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of policemen trained by the Surrey Police Force remain with the Surrey Police Force after five years' service; and what is the corresponding figure for the rest of England and Wales. [5457]

Mr. Michael: The information is not available. However, if the hon. member would like to write to me setting out his concerns in detail, I will reply as fully as I can.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority has for publishing further guidance notes. [5117]

Mr. Michael: In accordance with paragraph 21 of the criminal injuries compensation scheme, which came into effect on 1 April 1996, the Authority published at that time its guide to the operation of the scheme as a whole. It has supplemented that by issuing more specialised guidance on the assessment of loss of earnings and special expenses, compensation in fatal cases, the procedures applicable in cases of child abuse and the administration of awards to minors. The Authority has no immediate plans for further guidance, but is always ready to consider requests for such guidance.

Pornography

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next intends to meet the Internet Service Providers Association to discuss the issues of pornography on electronic networks. [4735]

Mr. Michael: I intend to meet the Chief Executive of Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) shortly. The IWF is an independent industry body set up on 23 September 1996 with the support of the two major Internet Service Providers Trade Associations (the Internet Service Providers Association and the London Internet Exchange (LINX)) to tackle the problems of illegal material (particularly child pornography) on the Internet.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the extent to which child pornography is being placed on the Internet by persons in the United Kingdom. [4736]

Mr. Michael: We are concerned about the presence of child pornography on the Internet and the relative ease of access to such material. With the Metropolitan Police and other interested parties, we are examining ways of controlling access to such material. The Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) was set up last year to tackle the problems of illegal material (particularly child pornography) on the Internet and established a hotline on 3 December so that users could report the present of child pornography in a newsgroup. Since then, IWF, have received 94 reports, covering 1,008 separate items relating to child pornography, of which 9, covering 71 items, refer to material apparently placed on the Internet by persons within the United Kingdom.

Bookmakers Committee

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reconstitute the Bookmakers Committee. [6135]

Mr. George Howarth: After careful consideration, we have decided to implement the proposals for reconstituting the Bookmakers Committee previously consulted on.

I have today made regulations under section 26 of the Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963 which will come into force on 24 July.

We consider that the new make-up of the Committee strikes a reasonable balance between the different bookmaking interests.

The Committee will continue to consist of 12 members. The main change is to give representation to a new body, the British Betting Office Association, which will be invited to appoint two members to the Committee.

The Betting Office Licensees Association (which previously appointed five members) is to appoint six members of the Committee, as a consequence of its merger with the National Sporting League (which previously appointed one member).

The National Association of Bookmakers is to appoint three members of the Committee (previously five): and the Scottish Starting Price (SP) Bookmakers Association will continue to appoint one member.

We will keep the position under review.

Fire Safety (HMOs)

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fires occurred in houses in multiple occupation in the years 1990 to 1996; and how many (a) deaths and (b) injuries resulted from these fires. [4732]

Mr. George Howarth: The available information on dwellings for 1990 to 1995 is given in the tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library. The data for 1994 and 1995 do not reliably identify houses in multiple occupation (HMOs) from other types of dwelling. A more detailed analysis of fires in multiple occupied dwellings in the United Kingdom was published in pages 30–33 of "Fire Statistics, United Kingdom, 1993", a copy of which is in the Library. The enforcement of fire safety precautions in HMOs is a policy responsibility of the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions. His Department is currently funding a research study looking in depth at the incidence and causes of fire death in HMOs. It is hoped to publish the report later this year.

Fire Services Act 1947

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to modify the Fire Services Act 1947; and if he will make a statement. [5143]

Mr. George Howarth: I emphasised the importance that the Government attach to seeking improvements in fire safety in the reply which I gave to the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) on 23 June, Official Report, column 360. We are also considering generally whether there is a need to update and amend existing fire service legislation.

Paul Malone

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will re-examine the case of Paul Malone; if he will make a statement on the reasons for the retirement of three police officers referred to by the Police Complaints Authority in their report; and when the

Cheshire Police Constabulary were first aware of the acts referred to in the Police Complaints Authority report relating to this case. [3512]

Mr. Michael: Any re-examination of a case in which it is alleged that there has been a miscarriage of justice is now a matter for the Criminal Cases Review Commission, whose powers to refer cases to the Court of Appeal are set out in the Criminal Appeal Act (1995).

I understand that the three police officers concerned retired between June and September 1995. One officer retired on ill health grounds, the other two took normal retirement after completing 30 years' service. The matters referred to in the Police Complaints Authority (PCA) statement came to light in an investigation supervised by the PCA which was completed in August 1994.

I will draw my hon. Friend's Question to the attention of the Criminal Cases Review Commission, and will pass the information provided to the Commission for their consideration.

Fines (Motorists)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what revenue was obtained by the Treasury from fines for (a) speeding offences and (b) other traffic offences in each of the last 10 years. [5159]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is not available.

However, information available to me suggests that the amounts shown in the following table were ordered to be paid in fines in England and Wales for speeding offences and other motoring offences during the years 1986 to 1995. (Not all fines will have been paid).

As the majority of motoring offences are currently dealt with by way of fixed penalty notices, figures of the number of notices are also included in the table. From 1 October 1986, the penalty for a non-endorsable offence was set at £12 and that for an endorsable offence at £24. These penalties were raised to £16 and £32 respectively on 1 April 1990. From 1 April 1992, the penalties were again raised to £40 for an endorsable offence and for illegal parking on a red route, £30 for illegal parking in London other than on a red route and £20 for other non-endorsable offences.

Penalty charge notices issued by Local Authorities from 1994 are excluded, as the revenue is not passed to the Treasury.

Test Purchasing (Decriminalisation)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to decriminalise test purchasing by under-age children on behalf of the police. [4886]

Mr. George Howarth: I have been asked to reply.

The Ministerial Group on Alcopops will be considering the role of test purchases in helping to enforce the law preventing the sale of certain goods to young people.

Wildlife and Countryside Act (Offences)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been for offences under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, for each police force area for each year since its implementation. [4624]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 24 June 1997]: The information on these offences, which involve offences against wild, captive and protected animals, birds and plants, is given in the table:

HOUSE OF COMMONS

EU Legislation

Sir Richard Body: To ask the President of the Council what percentage of Bills introduced into Parliament in (a) 1976, (b) 1986 and (c) 1996 had the European Union as their legislative source; and if she will take steps to introduce a physical distinction in the publication of such Bills in the future. [4466]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Very few Bills are introduced with the primary purpose of implementing European Community legislation, although on occasions Bills will include clauses the purpose of which is to implement European Community obligations. Detailed information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. I have no plans to introduce a physical distinction in the publication of such Bills.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Privy Council (Membership)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Council what powers she has to trigger the procedure for removing a person from membership of the Privy Council; and if she will make a statement. [5584]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The enforced removal of a Privy Counsellor from membership of the Council, which has not occurred since 1921, would be a matter for The Sovereign, acting on the advice of Ministers.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Perjury

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Attorney-General what are the procedures for bringing an action for perjury against a named individual. [5503]

The Attorney-General: The question of prosecution of any individual for perjury cannot be considered until there has been a criminal investigation. It is the function of the police to investigate alleged crime and the proper course for an hon. Member having evidence showing the commission of an offence would be to place that evidence in the hands of the police.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Signals Intelligence Staff

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for each member of each military alliance of which the United Kingdom is part whether signals intelligence staff are (a) civilians, (b) expected to be in membership of an independent national trade union and (c) able to take part in a national strike unrelated to their direct conditions of employment; and in each case whether there has been such a strike in the past 20 years. [3453]

Mr. Robin Cook: Most of our NATO partners employ civilians in their signals intelligence staff. In the majority of cases these civilians have the right voluntarily to join a national trade union and some have a legal right to take strike action. None, so far as we are aware, has ever taken strike action in the last twenty years.

It is our policy not to comment on the details of the signals intelligence arrangements of other countries.

British Council and World Service

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to increase his Department's resources dedicated to (a) the British Council and (b) the World Service. [5278]

Mr. Fatchett: We are examining how we deploy all our resources, including those dedicated to the British Council and the BBC World Service, as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review. We shall submit the Review's findings to the Cabinet's Committee.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the Special Advisers in his Department, the minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in his Department in the year up to 1 May. [5364]

Mr. Robin Cook: David Clark and Andrew Hood are currently employed as Special Advisers in my Department. They are employed under terms and conditions based on the Model Contract for Special Advisers, a copy of which has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

David Clark is advising me on European Affairs and Security Policy.

Andrew Hood is advising me on policy related to Africa, Middle East, the Americas, Asia, international trade policy, human rights, the global environment, the arms trade and the Commonwealth.

Both work in accordance with Schedule 1 (Part 1) of the Model Contract.

There were two Special Advisers in this Department in the year up to 1 May 1997.

TREASURY

Taxpayers

Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of total income tax yield was paid by (a) the bottom 10 per cent. of taxpayers, (b) the median 10 per cent. of taxpayers and (c) the top 10 per cent. of tax payers, in the last year for which figures are available. [3351]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for 1997–98 are given in the following table:

Group of taxpayers per cent.	Percentage of total income tax
Bottom 10	[1] —
45–55	6
Top 10	46

[1] Less than 0.5 per cent.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Norman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the estimated revenues from Capital Gains Tax in 1995–96; and how much of this is derived from gains realised on investments of less than 12 months' duration. [3703]

Dawn Primarolo: Receipts from capital gains tax were £796 million in 1995–96. It is not yet possible to estimate the proportion due to disposals of assets held for less than 12 months.

Income Tax

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total revenue of income tax in the top five percentiles of incomes in (i) 1978–79 and (ii) 1996–97. [3445]

Dawn Primarolo: Based on the estimated distribution of total incomes for taxpayers, the total income tax liability for the top five percentiles was £4.9 billion in 1978–79 and £25.1 billion in 1996–97.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of all adults in employment or self-employment pay (a) no income tax, (b) income tax at 20 per cent. only, (c) income tax at 20 per cent. and 23 per cent. only and (d) income tax at 40 per cent. [3354]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for 1997–98 are given in the table. The figures include all those with any employment or self-employment income.

Marginal rate of tax	Percentage of total
No tax liability	15
Lower rate	20
Basic rate	57
Higher rate	8
Total	100

The estimates are based on information from the 1994–95 Survey of Personal Incomes and population estimates from the Government Actuary's Department and are therefore provisional.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was in each of the last five financial years the amount of corporation tax paid as a proportion of companies' pre-tax profits. [3375]

Dawn Primarolo: United Kingdom taxes on company income as a percentage of trading income before dividends calculated from calendar year national accounting aggregates are as follows:

1992: 16.4

1993: 14.1

1994: 13.7

1995: 17.1

1996: 18.7.

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has met representatives of pension funds and charities to discuss the impact of changes in advance corporation tax. [3744]

Dawn Primarolo: No.

Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the rate of advance corporation tax on dividends. [3330]

Dawn Primarolo: The rate of advance corporation tax on dividends for the financial year 1997 is 20/80, as set out in the last Finance Act.

Mail Order

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the Inland Revenue's implementation of the VAT required for mail order trades; and if he will make a statement. [3551]

Dawn Primarolo: Members of the Mail Order Traders' Association (MOTA) and others have made representations to ministers about changes to VAT retail schemes announced in the last Budget by the previous Government and described in Customs and Excise Budget Notice 46/96 and in Press Notice 2 dated 26 November 1996.

MOTA members recently met senior Customs officials for further discussions. As a result, Customs announced in their Business Brief 10/97 a concession which reduces the cash flow impact on affected retailers.

Tax Policy

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the statement made in paragraph 6.73 in the Financial Statement and Budget report 1997–98 remains the objective upon which tax policy is based. [3374]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor of the Exchequer will announce the Government's tax objectives at the time of the Budget on 2 July 1997.

Companies (Self-assessment)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the timing of the commencement of self-assessment for companies. [3626]

Dawn Primarolo: For companies liable to corporation tax, the commencement of self-assessment is to be set by an appointed day, by Treasury Order. It has already been announced that the appointed day will not be before early 1999.

Value Added Tax

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the criteria his Department applies in respect of the operation of the Value Added Tax Act 1994, section 33. [4617]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 20 June 1997]: The chief criteria which apply to the operation of section 33 of the Value Added Tax Act 1994 are that VAT should not fall as a burden on local taxation, and that local authorities should not bear tax on activities they are specifically required by statute to undertake.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will undertake to review the decision to refuse the Scottish Environment Protection Agency an exemption in terms of the Value Added Tax Act 1994, section 33; and if he will make a statement. [4618]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 20 June 1997]: SEPA has no power to precept on local taxation, and therefore does not meet one of the main criteria for bodies relieved by section 33 of the Act. The VAT position of SEPA and similar bodies is taken into account when setting levels of public expenditure in Scotland.

Tax Co-ordination

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to encourage the co-ordination of tax assessment and tax collection; and if he will make a statement. [3441]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has now completed 4 years of its 10 year programme to restructure its local office network. The programme ends the distinction between separate "assessment" and "collection" offices by merging them to create new-style offices.

Securities and Investments Board (Annual Report)

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the annual report of the Securities and Investments Board to be published. [5943]

Mrs. Liddell: A copy of the Board's report, made in accordance with Section 117 of the Financial Services Act 1986, was laid before Parliament today. The report covers the period from 1 April 1996 to 31 March 1997. Copies are now available in the Library.

Income Tax (Pensioners)

Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what proportion of pensioners over 65 pay (a) no income tax, (b) income tax at 20 per cent. only, (c) income tax at 20 per cent. and 23 per cent. only and (d) income tax at 40 per cent; [3352]

(2) what proportion of all adults excluding those in full-time education pay (a) no income tax, (b) income tax at 20 per cent. only, (c) income tax at 20 per cent. and 23 per cent. only and (d) income tax at 40 per cent.; [3350]

(3) what proportion of non-pensioner adults excluding those in full-time education pay (a) no income tax, (b) income tax at 20 per cent. only, (c) income tax at 20 per cent. and 23 per cent. only and (d) income tax at 40 per cent. [3353]

Dawn Primarolo: Available information for 1997–98 is given in the table. Non-pensioner adults excludes those aged 65 or over and those aged under 16. It is not possible to identify taxpayers in full-time education.

	Percentage of total
Marginal rate of income tax	Non-pensioner adults (age 16 to 64)	Pensioner adults (age 65 or over)	All adults (aged 16 or over)
Not liable to income tax	37	67	43
Lower rate	15	19	16
Basic rate	42	13	36
Higher rate	6	1	5
Total	100	100	100

The estimates are based on information from the 1994–95 Survey of Personal Incomes and population estimates from the Government Actuary's Department and are therefore provisional.

Labour Force Survey

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce a monthly version of the Labour Force Survey. [5375]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 26 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the introduction of a monthly version of the Labour Force Survey (LFS).

I am responsible for deciding the form, coverage and timing of release of statistics issued by ONS, taking into account the views of customers. ONS consulted customers on the future presentation of labour market statistics; the consultation exercise was launched through an article in the Labour Market Trends published on 8 May. These proposals included the possibility of producing a monthly report from the LFS. Comments on the proposals should have been sent to ONS by 14 June.

The proposals set out for consultation reflect the House of Commons Employment Select Committee recommendation that more prominence should be given to the measure of unemployment which is based on the internationally agreed ILO definition.

ONS will publicly make available a response commanding wide support. The Government is committed to ensuring the widest possible acceptance of these statistics.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to change the method of calculation for the official unemployment figures. [4106]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Bob Blizzard, dated 26 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) to your recent question on what plans there are to change the method of calculating the official unemployment figures.

I am responsible for deciding the form, coverage and timing of release of statistics issued by ONS, taking into account the views of customers. ONS is presently consulting customers on the future presentation of labour market statistics; the consultation exercise was launched through an article in the Labour Market Trends published on 8 May. Comments on the proposals should be sent to ONS by 14 June.

The proposals set out for consultation reflect the House of Commons Employment Select Committee recommendation that more prominence should be given to the measure of unemployment which is based on the internationally agreed ILO definition.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Water Charges

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received regarding water charges for single people living alone; and if he will make a statement. [5092]

Angela Eagle: My Department has received a number of representations about discounts on water charges for single occupiers. This issue will be considered as part of the review of the water charging system which the Government announced at the recent Water Summit.

House Building

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many housing units were (a) built and (b) renovated in the year 1 April 1996 to 31 March 1997 by (i) local authorities, (ii) housing associations and (iii) local housing companies. [5065]

Mr. Raynsford: The latest available annual estimates of both house building and renovation activity by local authorities and housing associations in England are shown in the table below. Figures for housing association renovations for the March quarter of 1997 are not yet available.

There are no local housing companies registered with the Housing Corporation and so there is no information yet on their building activity.

England	1996
	Number of dwellings
House building (completions)
Local authorities	530
Housing associations	26,210
Renovations (work completed)
Local authorities[1]	329,500
Housing associations[2]	12,200

[1] Conversions plus improvements.
[2] Figures exclude hostels and shared accommodation.

Paper and Sewage Sludge

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with (a) the Environment Agency, (b) local government, (c) the Agricultural Development Advisory Service and (d) others regarding procedures for the disposal of (i) paper sludge and (ii) sewage sludge to land spraying; what changes he proposes to make in this respect; and if he will make a statement. [5090]

Angela Eagle: The previous Government set out its proposals relating to the disposal of paper sludge and sewage sludge in its response to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's Nineteenth Report on the Sustainable Use of Soil (CO428, January 1997). On paper sludge, the Water Research Centre and the Agricultural Development Advisory Service were commissioned to develop further the criteria that determine in what circumstances the spreading on land of those wastes exempted from waste management licensing will benefit agriculture or result in ecological improvement. The results of the study are currently being assessed by the Environment Agency which is expected to report in the near future. On sewage sludge, this Department, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Department of Health and the water industry have commissioned a review of the current controls on the use of sewage sludge as set out in The Sludge (Use in Agriculture) Regulations 1989 (as amended) and the associated Code of Practice. The review is expected to be published later in the year. Any proposals to amend the current controls will be subject to consultation.

Social Housing

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated regarding the relationship between the level of capital investment in social housing and the level of the housing benefit budget. [5294]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department has not commissioned any external studies to examine the relationship between levels of capital investment in social housing and the level of housing benefit.

However, it has constructed computer models for analysing the impact on public expenditure of different levels of local authority rents and social housing grant rates. These take account of impacts on housing benefit.

These models and related analysis will be reviewed and updated as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 11 June, Official Report, column 1143.

Green Belt

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of extension of green belt land. [5266]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government's green belt policy is set out in Planning Policy Guidance note (PPG)2. There are at present no plans to revise this guidance. The boundaries of the green belt are for local planning authorities to establish through their development plans.

Electricity Pylons

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for new planning controls on electricity pylons in rural areas. [5268]

Mr. Raynsford: Control over the erection of electricity pylons is exercised under section 37 of the Electricity Act 1989. The Government has no plans to revise the current regime, where all but the most minor overhead electricity line developments need consent from my right hon. Friend, the President of the Board of Trade. Such applications are subject to appropriate environmental assessment regulations, and account is taken of relevant policy guidance, including Planning Policy Guidance note (PPG)7 "The Countryside—Environmental Quality and Economic and Social Development".

Bird Habitat (Pennine Moors)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research has been conducted recently on the impact of agriculture and urban development on bird habitats of the West Pennine Moors. [5383]

Angela Eagle: I am not aware of any specific research on this subject which has been carried out in this area. However, a practical project run by the Standing Conference of South Pennine Authorities, due to be completed in March 1998, is aimed at developing a broad, integrated strategy for the sustainable use of the South Pennine Moors. That part of the project which relates to important bird habitats is part-funded by the European LIFE/Nature programme. Today I am announcing the clasification of the South Pennine Moors as a Special Protection Area under the EU Birds Directive.

National Parks

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has (a) to create new national parks and (b) to extend existing national parks. [5264]

Angela Eagle: The designation of new national parks in England is the responsibility of the Countryside Commission, subject to confirmation by the Secretary of State. Ministers will meet shortly with the Commission to discuss the potential for new national parks. I understand there are no plans at present to alter the boundaries of existing national parks.

Area Cost Adjustment

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to review the Area Cost Adjustment element of the revenue support grant formula. [5379]

Mr. Raynsford: The work of the Review of the Area Cost Adjustment during 1996 provided an examination of the issues, though not one which the Local Authority Associations wanted implemented for 1997–98 SSAs. The Department has recently commissioned research to examine some of the concerns of local government about the Review's proposals. It will report in July and we shall discuss with local government both the findings and the way forward on the Area Cost Adjustment.

Energy Efficiency

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what actions he is proposing to take with respect to the proportion of dwellings which are not physically capable of being made energy efficient at reasonable cost. [5152]

Mr. Raynsford: Housing authorities and other owners are responsible for determining the best course of action in respect of least energy efficient housing. This requires balanced judgements to be made about energy efficiency improvements having regard to costs and other physical and social factors. The English House Condition Survey indicated that for most dwellings, including many of those not capable of being brought up to current building regulation standards, improvement to a more moderate level of energy efficiency is likely to be the most cost effective course. Under my Department's Energy Efficiency Best Practice Programme guidance is given to housing professionals, housing authorities and others on cost effective energy efficiency measures that can be undertaken in a variety of housing situations.

Students (Council Tax)

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if his proposed review of the Council tax system will include the liability of students in full-time higher education who share houses with non-students. [5496]

Mr. Raynsford: The previous Government announced plans to amend the council tax liability rules to exclude students from joint and several liability for council tax. This remains the new Governments intention and we will make the necessary amendments as soon as we have an opportunity to amend primary legislation.

Homelessness Legislation

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what response he has received to the proposals for changing the homelessness legislation contained in the consultation paper that he issued on 23 May; and if he will make a statement. [5941]

Ms Armstrong: There have been about 200 responses to the consultation paper, the overwhelming majority of which unreservedly welcomed our proposals. I am today laying draft regulations that would add households owed a main homelessness duty to the groups of people to whom local authorities are required to give reasonable preference in their housing allocation schemes.

This is the first step in our plans to rebuild a proper safety net for families and vulnerable individuals who lose their homes through no fault of their own. It means that, in allocating housing, local authorities will be taking into account the experience of homelessness alongside other indicators of housing and social need.

While it is for each local authority to balance the priority for different groups of housing applicants, this measure gives authorities the potential for moving households accepted as homeless into permanent accommodation more quickly.

EU Environment Council

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of States for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Environment Council on 19 and 20 June. [6134]

Mr. Meacher: I represented the United Kingdom at the Environment Council which took place in Luxembourg on 19 and 20 June.

The Council reached a common position on two major directives which will reduce air pollution from vehicles. These two directives form part of the so-called "Auto-oil programme" and will set new fuel and car standards for 2000 and prospectively for 2005. The Council also reached political agreement on a directive to tackle the problems caused by the emission of volatile organic compounds from industrial and commercial processes. This directive aims to reduce emission levels by 50 per cent. and was agreed unanimously. It will now go forward for a common position once the opinion of the European Parliament has been given.

The Council further developed the Community's negotiating position for the preparatory meetings for the Third Conference of the Parties to the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change in Kyoto, Japan, in December this year. Following the decision at the March Environment Council on a target for 2010, the Council agreed that the EU should propose that developed countries should reduce emissions of the main greenhouse gases to at least 7.5 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2005. The Council also supported my call for action by the Commission to investigate and bring forward proposals for tackling the potential problems caused by self-chilling cans.

The Council also agreed that at 9th Meeting of the Parties to the Montreal Protocol in Montreal in September the European Community should propose that consumption of methyl bromide in developed countries should be reduced to 50 per cent. of 1991 levels by 2001 and phased out in 2005, with exemptions for critical uses. The present phase out date under the Protocol is 2010.

In the debate about the Strategy prepared by the Commission to reduce the problems of acid rain in the Community I made it clear the UK strongly supported action on this though more work was needed to clarify the benefits and costs—a view shared by the majority who spoke. I also supported the designation of the Baltic and North seas as areas where the emissions of Sulphur Dioxide by ships should be controlled; I also called for this control to be extended to the west of Britain. The Council expressed general support for the proposal for the Water Framework Directive, although greater definition of the objectives to be achieved remains a common priority for the further discussions to be held under the forthcoming Luxembourg Presidency.

Conclusions were also agreed on several issues relating to the EU position for the United Nations General Assembly Special Session (UNGASS) in New York. The Council also agreed resolutions on the drafting, implementation and enforcement of Community Environmental Law and on Environmental Agreements. The Presidency concluded that there was insufficient support by Member States for the proposal by the Commission for a Framework Agreement on Humane Trapping Standards (leghold traps) and therefore handed the dossier over to the Luxembourg Presidency.

New Building Projects

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what guidance his Department currently offers to (a) local authorities and (b) the Housing Corporation to ensure that they take into full account the environmental impact of new building projects; [4515]

(2) what guidance his Department currently offers to local authorities and other public transport authorities to ensure that they take into full account the environmental impact of new building projects; [4518]

(3) what guidance his Department currently offers to local police and fire authorities to ensure that they take into full account the environmental impact of new building projects. [4519]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 19 June 1997]: My Department has issued guidance to developers and local authorities on the requirement for formal environmental assessment for certain new building projects which are likely to have significant effect on the environment. Guidance has also been issued to developers regarding the energy efficiency of new and existing buildings, more environmentally sensitive construction methods and, through the Building Research Establishment, a range of other topics concerned with minimising the environmental impact of new buildings.

Test Purchasing (Under-age Children)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to decriminalise the test purchasing by under-age children on behalf of local authority trading standards departments. [4883]

Mr. George Howarth: I have been asked to reply.

The Ministerial Group on Alcopops will be considering the role of test purchases in helping to enforce the law preventing the sale of certain goods to young people.

Air Carriers

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has made to the United States Government to ensure that British air carriers have the right to purchase a higher share of a US carrier than is currently permitted. [4633]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None. I would expect the issue of investment limits to be part of any UK/US air services negotiations when resumed.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he will take to ensure that there is equal access to American routes for British air carriers in the event of a merger between American Airlines and British Airways. [4634]

Ms Jackson: The Government is considering its approach to the resumption of aviation negotiations with the US in the light of the proposed alliance between British Airways and American Airlines. I would expect access by UK air carriers to routes both within and beyond the US to be part of any such negotiations.

Heathrow and Gatwick Airports

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he is considering for relaxation of night restrictions at Heathrow and Gatwick in connection with the use of displaced thresholds. [5399]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The use of displaced thresholds has no bearing on the night restrictions, which will continue unchanged until October 1998. Proposals for the next night restrictions regime will be put to public consultation in due course.

Road Accidents (Fire Engines)

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many accidents involving fire engines there were in Avon and Somerset; how many of these resulted in fatalities; and how many fatalities occurred in each year from 1991 to 1995. [5166]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Fire engines are not identified explicitly on the STATS 19 form completed by the police for road injury accidents. However, through the vehicle registration mark, which is recorded, it is possible to trace the vehicle type of about 80 per cent. of motor vehicles involved in such accidents. From this information, the number of accidents involving fire engines and their consequent fatalities in Avon and Somerset from 1991 to 1995, are shown in the following table.

Accidents involving fire engines in Avon and Somerset, by severity: 1991–95

Accidents

M40 (Road Improvements)

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the timetable for the proposed improvements of the A43/M40/B430. [5292]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The A43/M40/B430 improvement scheme is part of the South Midlands Network project which was included in tranche 2 of the DBFO projects announced by the previous administration last year.

Tenders were invited on 4 March but tenderers have been advised to suspend work in view of the announcement of our intention to carry out a strategic review of the Trunk Roads. Some projects, including this one, will be the subject of an accelerated review which is expected to be completed in July. You will appreciate that I cannot say what the outcome will be for this scheme.

SCOTLAND

Drugs

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total amount (a) spent and (b) allocated by his Department on tackling problems relating to drugs in respect of (i) improving international co-operation to reduce supplies from abroad, (ii) increasing the effectiveness of police and Customs enforcement, (iii) maintaining effective deterrents and tight domestic controls, (iv) developing prevention publicity, education and community action and (v) improving treatment and rehabilitation, for (1) 1994, (2) 1995, (3) 1996 and (4) 1997. [4783]

Mr. Galbraith: Information on total Government and individual departments' expenditure on tackling drug misuse is not recorded on an annual basis. The most recently published estimates were contained in the report of the Ministerial Drugs Task Force, "Drugs in Scotland: Meeting the Challenge". This showed that an estimated £42 million of public expenditure was spent on drug-related action in Scotland in 1992–93. Updating this figure to take account of inflation and major new initiatives suggests spend of over £50 million in 1996–97 in my right hon. Friend's areas of responsibility.

To co-ordinate action against drugs, the Government will be appointing a "drugs czar", accountable to the Prime Minister and the Cabinet's coordinating committee on drug misuse, of which I am a member. These arrangements will run alongside action reflecting the particular circumstances of the position in Scotland.'

Speed Limits (Schools)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to facilitate the introduction of 20 mph speed limits in the streets around schools. [5396]

Mr. Chisholm: Most schools are sited on local roads and it is therefore for individual councils, as the roads authorities responsible for road safety and traffic management, to consider in the first instance the designation of 20 mph speed limits on these roads. The Scottish Office welcomes applications for 20 mph zones and Councils were invited last year to examine the scope for introducing more such zones in their areas.

Current criteria for 20 mph zones generally require the installation of engineering measures such as road humps. The Scottish Office Development Department is now considering the scope for a number of pilot projects which would relax these criteria with the aim of giving local authorities greater freedom to introduce 20 mph speed limits in residential areas and around schools.

Residential and Nursing Care

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will assess the advantages of encouraging the development of a single type of home providing both residential and nursing care for elderly people. [5398]

Mr. Galbraith: We are considering the implications of promoting the development of single care homes.

Arts Policy

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he plans to review policy on the arts; and if he will make a statement. [5343]

Mr. Galbriath: The Government keeps its policies on the arts, like its other priorities under constant review.

Water Industry

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress he has made in establishing a review of the Scottish water industry. [5872]

Mr. Dewar: In my Parliamentary Answer of 6 June I set out the steps I would take to fill the vacancies on the Boards of the Water Authorities. I also announced that I had asked my officials to conduct a review of the further steps I might take to strengthen local democratic control. The review will consider a wide range of options for the water authorities. It will also consider any possible implications for the Scottish Water and Sewerage Customers council.

My officials have now begun work on this review of the Scottish water industry. Through the review, they will seek a structure for the water industry that meets the Government's policy of returning the Water Authorities to local democratic control, while ensuring any solution is consistent with maintaining the essential continuity of water and sewerage services, facilitating investment, promoting efficiency, and complying, as appropriate, with the Nolan procedures for public appointments.

I have asked my officials to consult extensively with all interested parties. My officials will in particular keep the Water Authorities, the Scottish Water and Sewerage Customers Council and COSLA closely informed of progress during the review, and seek their views and advice at all appropriate points.

In addition, my officials will have regard to Government policy on the regulation of utilities, on financial accountability, and on public/private partnerships. They will take account of the need to meet statutory requirements and to secure customer service levels, and will consider international models for the structure of utility industries.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Millennium Celebrations

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the projects under consideration by his Department to commemorate the millennium. [5024]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Millennium Commission, which I chair, funds projects designed to mark the year 2000 and the beginning of the third millennium. Already over £1 billion of lottery money has been committed to over 100 projects on over 2000 sites across the country. By 31 December 2000, the Commission expects to have allocated £1.7 billion for its programme across the country.

This programme has three components:

The Capital Projects: £994 million has so far been allocated, on twelve landmark projects in the nine English regions and in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, as well as on smaller, more local projects. Landmark projects include setting up the University for the Highlands and Islands; the Eden project in Cornwall which will establish one of the world's largest glass houses for extraordinary plants; the International Centre for Life in Newcastle, introducing people to the science of genetics; the Lowry Centre at Salford's waterfront which will feature a centre for Virtual Reality; and the Millennium Point in Birmingham, which will be a centre for scientific and educational excellence.

The Millennium Awards: Over £200 million will be set aside to help tens of thousands of talented people fulfil personal goals which have a wider community benefit. These will include projects managed by the Prince's Trust, The Royal Society, Mind and CSV Scotland.

The Millennium Exhibition: this will be a place of excitement and of education, opening up a "window on the future", and it will be based at Greenwich. The Commission will provide up to £400 million net, with a further £50 million of cashflow support. The Exhibition site on the regenerated Greenwich peninsula will also become the hub of a technological and educational network providing a legacy for the whole nation.

There is a range of other activity being planned for the Millennium across the nation. My Department is responsible for a Millennium Co-ordinating Group, established as a forum for a wide variety of bodies with a part to play in events to mark the Millennium. I am attending the next meeting of this Group in the coming month, and will use that opportunity to develop the themes on which we want to focus. Out of this work will come proposals for national occasions, as well as arrangements for tracking and publicising the range of other events which will be organised by people around the country.

My Department is also recommending the calling of a one-off additional Bank Holiday to mark the Millennium, and will consult with relevant interest groups about a suitable date, which we hope will be 31 December 1999. Officials are also discussing with the Churches and representatives of other faiths the holding of a number of national services during the first weekend of the year 2000.

Today we are publishing new information about how the Exhibition will take shape. I am writing to all right hon. and hon. Members about this, with information about other Millennium projects, and have placed copies in the House Libraries.

Museums

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to publish the list of designated museums. [5127]

Mr. Fisher: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced the list of designated museums and galleries on 24 June. He also announced an increase in the maximum number of museums and galleries in England that can be designated from 30 to 50. Further applications will be invited by the Museums and Galleries Commission in due course. The list of 26 designated museums and galleries is as follows:

Beamish, the North of England Open Air Museum
Birmingham Museum Service
Bowes Museum
Brighton and Hove Art Gallery and Museums
Cambridge University
—Fitzwilliam Museum
—Cambridge University Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology

Works of Art

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will take steps to make available to art galleries in the regions works of art that are currently in storage in London galleries and museums. [5179]

Mr. Fisher: The Government is determined to widen access to this country's cultural heritage and I commend all those institutions—not just London museums and galleries—that already lend articles in their collections, arrange touring exhibitions, and give advice and guidance. These excellent practices are nevertheless at the discretion of each institution's trustees. The Government wishes to encourage those national museums and galleries which it funds to establish closer and more supportive relationships with other museums: lending items to them is one way this can be done. But not all museums and galleries have large holdings in storage: the National Gallery's collection, for instance, is virtually all on public display.

Alcohol (Television Advertising)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is his policy towards the advertising of (a) alcohol and (b) alcopops on television. [5323]

Mr. Fisher: All television advertising must comply with the Code of Advertising Standards and Practice issued by the Independent Television Commission. Under the code, advertising for alcoholic drinks must not be directed at people under 18 or use treatments likely to be of particular appeal to them. It must not feature persons who appear to be under 18, nor any personality who has a particular appeal to that age group. Alcohol advertising must not suggest that drinking is essential to social success or acceptance, or an essential attribute of masculinity.

The Ministerial group on Alcopops will consider all aspects of the sale and promotion of these products, including whether anything further needs to be done to regulate their advertising.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make his policy for applicants for silk who are turned down to be given reasons in writing for the decision. [4845]

Mr. Hoon: Applicants for silk are advised in writing of the outcome of their application, and unsuccessful applicants are given some statistical information to indicate the intensity of the competition. Unsuccessful applicants are able to meet with senior officials of the Judicial Appointments Group who are able to provide feedback on the degree of support that the individual has received and the overall tenor of the views collected in the consultation process. The Lord Chancellor has no present intention to replace this with written reasons for his decision.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Debt (Poor Countries)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is the Government's policy towards the proposals by Jubilee 2000 that the unpayable debts owed by highly indebted poor countries be remitted by 31 December 2000; and what plans the Government have to encourage international support for these proposals. [5462]

Clare Short: The Government shares many of the objectives of the Jubilee 2000 campaign, including the fundamental one of the eradication of poverty in developing countries. We believe that debt relief should accompany a wider commitment by debtors to create the conditions necessary for sustainable economic growth and lasting poverty reduction. The Chancellor of the Exchequer and I are pushing for full and rapid implementation of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative. We believe that much remains to be done and are pressing with urgency for the international community to provide further debt relief.

PRIME MINISTER

Policy Reviews

Mr. Luff: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list (a) the departmental policy reviews established by the Government and (b) the names of those individuals other than civil servants and ministers assisting those reviews (i) as chairman and (ii) in other capacities. [4002]

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Prime Minister how many policy reviews have been initiated since 2 May by his Government; and if he will list them by policy area. [5567]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Romsey (Mr. Colvin) on 16 June, Official Report, columns 27–28, which recorded the significant departmental policy reviews that we have announced.

As at 20 June, additional reviews that we have announced are:

A review of civil justice and legal aid

A review of non departmental public bodies with a view to reducing their number

A review of private finance machinery

A review of the existing code of practice on access to government information

A review of the roads programme

A review of health services in London.

We have announced the appointment of the following chairmen and members of reviews who are not civil servants or ministers:

Duncan Kenworthy, Managing Director, Toledo Pictures

A review of health services in London

Chairman:

Sir Leslie Turnberg, President of the Royal College of Physicians

Ms Francine Bates, Assistant Director, Carers National Association

Professor Ian Cameron, Provost and Vice-Chancellor of University of Wales, College of Medicine

Professor Brian Jarman, Professor of General Practice at Imperial College/St. Mary's

Ms Denise Platt, Head of Social Services, Local Government Association

Further non-civil service and non-ministerial chairmen and members of departmental policy reviews will be announced when appointments are made.

Cabinet Office (Cash Limits)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals he has to change the Cabinet Office (Security and Intelligence Services) cash limit for 1997–98. [5471]

The Prime Minister: The cash limit for Class XVIII, Vote II will be decreased by £225,000 from £713,532,000 to £713,307,000. The transfer is necessary to cover support services from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals he has to change the Cabinet Office: other services vote, cash limit or running costs limit for 1997–98. [5549]

The Prime Minister: The cash limit for Cabinet Office: other services (Class XVIII, Vote 1) will be reduced by £67,000 from £36,220,000 to £36,153,000 and the running costs limit will be reduced by £67,000 from £42,870,000 to £42,803,000.

This is to provide for the transfer of certain emergency planning functions from the Cabinet Office to the Home Office (Class VII, Vote I).

Interdepartmental Co-ordination

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Prime Minister (1) how Government policies affecting children will be co-ordinated across departments; and by whom; [5298]

(2) how Government policies affecting families will be co-ordinated across departments; and by whom. [5297]

The Prime Minister: Major policies issues affecting children and families are considered collectively in the relevant Cabinet Committees, notably the Ministerial Committee on Home and Social Affairs.

Amsterdam Summit

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to place in the Library a copy of the treaty agreed at the European summit at Amsterdam. [5188]

The Prime Minister: The provisional version of the Treaty of Amsterdam, prepared by the Dutch Presidency of the European Union on the basis of discussions at the Amsterdam European Council, was placed in the Libraries of the House on Friday 20 June.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 18 June, Official Report, column 327, concerning the proposals for the exchange rate mechanism set out in Annex II to the Presidency Conclusions at Amsterdam if, by resolution of the European Council to which Her Majesty's Government are a party, the United Kingdom has agreed to enter the exchange rate mechanism described in that resolution, even if the United Kingdom does not enter the EMU on 1 January 1999 under the Protocol to the Third Stage of the treaty of Maastricht. [5069]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 23 June 1997]: No, as I said in the House of Commons on 18 June, the hon. Member's interpretation of the Resolution is not correct. The new exchange rate mechanism will, like the existing mechanism, be established by an intergovernmental agreement, on a voluntary basis. The Resolution recognises this, stating explicitly that "participation in the exchange rate mechanism will be voluntary for member states outside the euro area." There is no Treaty obligation for Member States to put their currencies into an exchange rate mechanism.

Kenya

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister when he plans to visit Kenya. [4876]

The Prime Minister: I have no immediate plans to visit Kenya. However, I hope very much that the President of Kenya, His Excellency hon. Daniel arap Moi, will be able to come to Britain in October for the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting.

Roisin McAliskey

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will ask (a) the United Kingdom authorities and (b) the German embassy to review the article on page 4 of Tribune, a copy of which has been sent to him, with particular reference to the evidential issues raised therein. [5010]

The Prime Minister: No. The German request for Roisin McAliskey's extradition is currently before the United Kingdom courts. It is for them to consider whether she should be committed to await a decision on surrender by the Secretary of State for the Home Department, who retains discretion under the Extradition Act 1989 over the final decision on her return. Roisin McAliskey will have the opportunity to make representations to the Secretary of State against her return. As in all other extradition cases, it is for the courts of the requesting State to judge the evidence once an order for return has been made.

Ministerial Answers

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if guidance on procedure for Ministers gives advice or instructions on acknowledging and appropriately dealing with answers that miss the point or make unjustified allegations. [3926]

The Prime Minister: The resolution on Ministerial accountability adopted by the House on 19 March 1997 says: "It is of paramount importance that Ministers give accurate and truthful information to Parliament, correcting any inadvertent error at the earliest opportunity." I expect all members of the Government to act in accordance with the Resolution.

Task Forces and New Groups

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the membership of all the task forces and new groups that have been set up since 16 June; and who will be representing race and ethnic minority interests on those groups. [5374]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 June 1997]:

We have set up the following task forces and new groups since 16 June:

Task Force on Youth Justice

Chairman

Mr. Norman Warner, Senior Policy Adviser, Home Office

Mr. William Atkinson, Headmaster, Phoenix High School, Shepherds Bush

Mr. Jonathan Black, Magistrates Clerk, Hampshire

Ms Catherine Bowker, Youth Court Prosecutor, Brighton

Mr. Tony Butler, Chief Constable, Gloucestershire

Mr. Paul Cavadino, Penal Affairs Consortium

Ms Anne Fuller, Lay Magistrate, Inner London

Mr. Cedric Fullwood, Chief Probation Officer, Manchester

Mr. Ian Johnston, Assistant Commissioner, Metropolitan Police

Mr. David Norgrove, Marks and Spencer Plc

Ms Denise Platt, Local Government Association

Ms Teresa Reynolds, Victim Support

Ms Joan Webster, Chief Superintendent, Gwent

Mr. Geoffrey Wicks, Stipendiary Magistrate, Inner London

Mr. Andrew Williamson, Director of Social Services

Mr. John Lyon, Home Office

Mr. Tom Luce, Department of Health

Ms Jenny Rowe, Lord Chancellor's Department.

Independent advisory panel to review London's health services

Chairman

Sir Leslie Turnberg, President of the Royal College of Physicians

Francine Bates, Assistant Director, Carers National Association

Professor Ian Cameron, Provost and Vice-Chancellor of University of Wales, College of Medicine

Professor Brian Jarman, Professor of General Practice, Imperial College/St. Mary's

Ms Denise Platt, Head of Social Services, Local Government Association.

All public appointments are governed by the overriding principle of selection based on merit. Members of the task force and review groups have been selected in accordance with this principle and on the basis that their abilities, experience and qualities match the needs of the bodies in question. No individual has been appointed to represent a specific interest.

Minister without Portfolio

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Prime Minister how many (i) meetings and (ii) telephone conversations he has had since 2 May with the Minister without Portfolio. [5415]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 June 1997]: Several.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Prime Minister what responsibility the Minister without Portfolio has for (a) the Government's policy on freedom of information and (b) its policy towards the media. [5422]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 June 1997]: My hon. Friend contributes to collective consideration of issues relating to freedom of information, and is responsible for assisting me and other ministerial colleagues in implementing and presenting government policy.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Prime Minister what responsibility he has given to the Minister without Portfolio for the Government Information Service. [5423]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 June 1997]: My hon. Friend and other ministerial colleagues work closely with members of the Government Information Service on the presentation of Government policy.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Prime Minister which ministerial committees are attended by the Minister without Portfolio. [5425]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 June 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney (Mr. Rowlands) on 9 June, Official Report, columns 302–10.

Government Information Service

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on the practice of spin-doctoring by Government press officers; and what instructions he has issued in respect of the use of this practice. [5427]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 June 1997]: The work of the Government Information Service is governed by conventions published in its "Working Guide for Government Information Officers", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received in relation to Lockerbie from (a) Dr. Jim Swire of the British relatives, (b) Peter Anderson of Simpson Marwick and Company, acting on behalf of Pan Am and (c) David Fieldhouse, former police surgeon of Bradford. [5071]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 23 June 1997]: We have received representations from Dr. Swire and a number of other Lockerbie relatives, but none from Mr. Anderson and Dr. Fieldhouse.

Ministers and Special Advisers

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals he has to extend the scope of the interests which have to be declared by Government Ministers and their special advisers. [5418]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 June 1997]: Ministers and their special advisers are already under a comprehensive duty to ensure that no conflict arises, or appears to arise, between their public duties and any of their private interests.

Party Political Activities (Funding)

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Prime Minister what safeguards exist to ensure that campaign activity and propaganda on behalf of a political party, and persons appointed for those purposes, are not paid for from public funds. [5419]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 June 1997]: The rules on Ministerial conduct requires Ministers not to use public resources for party purposes. Civil servants are also under a duty under the terms of the Civil Service Code to ensure the proper, effective and efficient use of public money.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Low Pay

Mr. Winnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the setting up of the commission on low pay. [4089]

Mr. Ian McCartney: We are pressing ahead with the setting up of the Low Pay Commission. Professor George Bain was appointed on 2 June to chair the Commission and advertisements seeking suitable applicants for the Commissioners are appearing in the press this week. The Commission is expected to start work in the summer.

Mine Subsidence

Mr. Barron: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to receive the Coal Authority's second report on the administration of the coal mining subsidence damage repair and compensation scheme. [6057]

Mr. Battle: I have now received this report from the Coal Authority and have arranged for copies to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses today.

Post Office (External Financing Limit)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the external financing limit for the Post Office for 1997–98. [6056]

Mrs. Beckett: The negative external financing limit (EFL) for the Post Office for 1997–98 has been reduced from –£330 million to –£313 million. This reflects the fact that the Post Office over-achieved its EFL for 1996–97 by £17 million, and in accordance with the existing arrangements an over-achievement of up to £30 million of one year's EFL can be matched by a corresponding reduction in the following year's figure.

Computers (Millennium Compliance)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will issue guidelines to trading standards departments giving advice on dealing with personal computers which are not millennium-compliant; and if she will make a statement. [5372]

Mr. Battle: The Century Date Change is a particularly serious issue, but I do not believe that issuing specific advice to trading standards departments is necessary.

The DTI is already taking steps to ensure that businesses and the general public are aware of the problem which has been extensively covered in the media. DTI's Information Pack on the problem already sets out general advice and sources of help.

It is for a well informed, individual purchaser to decide for himself what he needs in his own particular case. As for any other hardware or software supply issue, the details of conformability and performance are best covered in a discussion or specification and agreed by commercial negotiation. The law already provides a remedy for the purchaser of defective goods under the Sale of Goods Act 1979 and for services under the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982, and I see no need for further measures.

Mr. Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to issue a list of millennium-compliant personal computers; and if she will make a statement. [5370]

Mr. Battle: The Century Date Change problem is a particularly serious issue, but I do not believe that to issue a list of millennium-compliant Personal Computers is the right way forward.

The IT supply industry are already well aware of the problem and many have declared the status of the products through both the media and their trade association, The Computing Services and Software Association, who maintain a "Directory of Organisations with Specialist Year 2000 Services and Products".

Key Escrow

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on key escrow. [5114]

Mr. Battle: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Croydon, South (Mr. Ottaway) on 18 June, Official Report, column 191.

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what use she plans to make of the Internet to make Government more open. [5099]

Mr. Battle: The Department of Trade and Industry has maintained an Internet presence since 1995 to provide a wide range of information about its activities, services and key contact points. The Department also has an Open Government page on the Internet informing the public of their rights of access under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information to information it holds. The Open Government page has a direct Email link to the DTI Open Government Enquiry Point. The Department is continually updating and expanding its Internet pages to make its activities and services more accessible to the public.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions she has had with the Internet Service Providers Association to encourage self-certification by content providers. [5086]

Mrs. Roche: My Department maintains frequent contact with the Internet Services Providers Association. The Department played a key role in the development and launch of a self-regulatory system for Internet content based on existing law, known as the Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) and continues to maintain contact with this organisation.

As part of its remit to help ensure that the Internet can be a safe place to work, learn and play, the Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) has convened an advisory board comprising representatives of content providers, children's charities, regulators from other media, ISPs and civil liberties groups, to propose a UK-focused system for rating Internet content. This system should be available within the next few months, and will help Internet users determine the nature of their and their children's experience of the Internet. IWF is also engaged in work with partners from Europe, North America and Australia with a view to creating a world forum for Internet content rating.

Arms (Manufacture and Sales)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has for changes in the regulation of companies manufacturing and selling arms. [982]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 22 May 1997]: On 21 May, Official Report, column 72, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs announced that we shall implement our manifesto commitment to ban the import, export, transfer and manufacture of anti-personnel mines. On 22 May, Official Report, column 135, my right hon. Friend also announced an urgent review of the detailed criteria used in considering licence applications for the export of conventional arms. We shall be considering how best to take forward our other export control commitments.

Nirex

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will place in the Library a copy of the Nirex Assessment report DSAT (96) N101 prepared by A. J. Baker and R. Cummings. [1788]

Mr. Battle: The Department has not seen the report and does not have a copy of it. We understand that it is one of a large number of Nirex internal working documents. Its availability is a matter for Nirex.

Research

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals she has for the funding of scientific and medical research. [1483]

Mr. Battle: The Government is committed to maintaining existing Departmental spending ceilings until March 1999, and priorities will continue to be reassessed within those ceilings. In the medium term, the overall level of funding of scientific and medical research will be reviewed as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review, announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary on 11 June, Official Report, columns 1143–44.

Gas Appliances

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the adequacy of arrangements to enforce the current regulations on the safety of gas appliances. [5435]

Mr. Battle: Safety of gas appliances is regulated by the Gas Appliances (Safety) Regulations 1995, S.I. number 1995/1629, which are made under the Consumer Protection Act 1987. Enforcement is the responsibility of weights and measures authorities in Great Britain and district councils in Northern Ireland. Local authorities determine from their own experience the effort required to effectively undertake their enforcement obligations. The powers that are in place are considered to be sufficient to enforce the current regulations, but we will of course keep them under review.

Seeboard

Mr. Burstow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of Seeboard's investment in its local distribution network and fault monitoring system with particular reference to the Sutton and Cheam area. [5389]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 25 June 1997]: The Engineering Inspectorate of the DTI carries out an inspection of each Public Electricity Supplier once a year, which includes a review of developments and new equipment applications in relation to maintaining compliance with the Electricity Supply Regulations 1988 as amended. An inspection of installations in the Sutton and Cheam area was conducted in 1992. I am not aware of any change in policy by Seeboard as to the means of satisfying its obligations to comply with the Electricity Supply Regulations 1988 as amended.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will seek a report from the chairman of Seeboard on the reasons for the interruptions of supply over the last six months in the Hurstcourt Road and Fairlands Avenue areas of the Sutton and Cheam parliamentary constituency. [5390]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 25 June 1997]: The Engineering Inspectorate of the DTI is aware of several unrelated failures in electricity supply this month in the Sutton and Cheam area, some of which have been due to damage to underground cables caused by other parties, and is investigating the circumstances with Seeboard. The local Office of Electricity Regulation is aware of recent events in the area.

HEALTH

Human Cloning

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he will take to ensure that human cloning will not be allowed to occur in the United Kingdom either directly or through research material obtained from other countries. [4141]

Ms Jowell: We regard the deliberate cloning of human individuals as ethically unacceptable. Under United Kingdom law, cloning of individual humans cannot take place whatever the origin of the material and whatever technique is used.

Research into some serious inherited illnesses in humans, such as some forms of encephalomyopathy, cardiovascular disease and type II diabetes, can take place using cloning techniques. However, where such research involves the use of human embryos it is strictly controlled under the terms of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 which would require a licence to be issued by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority.

Corticosteroids

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received in respect of the adverse affects of corticosteroids; what plans he has to hold a public inquiry into their handling and use; and if he will make a statement. [4172]

Mr. Milburn: Correspondence has been received from members of Group Action into Steroid Prescribing, a group of people who have suffered adverse effects associated with corticosteroid treatment.

Corticosteroids have been fully evaluated for quality, efficacy and safety by the United Kingdom Licensing Authority. The product information including patient leaflets describes the effects of these medicines. It is for prescribing doctors to decide on the risks and benefits of treating individual patients according to their clinical judgment. Ensuring that patients are appropriately informed about the possible effects of drug treatment is a matter of concern and practice in this area is currently under consideration.

Rothbury Community Hospital

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the review of the private finance initiative in the NHS will entail delays in the design and tender process for the Rothbury community hospital. [4239]

Mr. Milburn: The proposals for the redevelopment of hospital and community facilities in Rothbury are being considered in conjunction with a Private Finance Initiative scheme at Cheviot and Wansbeck NHS Trust involving the reorganisation of the trust's acute services. Under the review of PFI in the NHS all major acute hospital schemes currently testing for PFI will be prioritised. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Slough (Fiona Mactaggart) on 10 June 1997 at columns 427–28. In future all major acute capital projects—whether funded under the PFI or using public capital—will be prioritised in accordance with health service needs. These prioritisation exercises will not apply to small-scale acute schemes such as the project at Cheviot and Wansbeck NHS Trust and non-acute schemes such as that for Rothbury currently testing for PFI. Proposals for improving the procurement process under PFI for all types of schemes will be put forward in the near future.

Dental Services

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to which dental practices the £40,000 allocated to Berkshire Health Authority in 1996–97 to improve access to NHS dentistry was allocated, to what other purposes the money was allocated and what assessment he has made of the extent to which the disbursements met the criteria set out in the health authority's bid. [5073]

Mr. Milburn: Berkshire Health Authority was awarded £40,000 as extra funding under the National Health Service Dentistry Access Fund 1996–97. The funding is being used solely to meet the aims identified in the health authority's bid.

The practices receiving these funds are all based in the health authority area.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the North and Mid Hampshire Health Authority has allocated to dental practices the grant which it received from the National Health Service Dentistry Access Fund; and how it has been distributed. [5255]

Mr. Milburn: Yes. The funding is being used to meet the aims identified in the bid.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the £40,000 allocated to Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority for dental practices has been distributed; and to what extent this distribution has reflected the criteria set out in the bid. [5489]

Mr. Milburn: Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority was awarded £40,000 as extra funding under the National Health Service Dentistry Access Fund 1996–97. The bid from the health authority met the criteria which were set out in the directions sent to all health authorities.

Urban Food Growing Projects

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will establish a review into the public health implications of community-led urban food growing projects in deprived areas; and if he will make a statement. [4888]

Ms Jowell: In 1996, the National Food Alliance (NFA) and the Sustainable Agriculture Food and Environment (SAFE) Alliance published a report, Growing Food in Cities, which aimed to promote the benefits of urban agriculture in the United Kingdom. The report argued that increasing urban agriculture would yield a range of benefits including community development, economic development, education, environmental improvement, health, leisure and sustainable neighbourhoods.

The Government welcomes any initiatives such as local food growing projects which empower local communities and help them to address their own health needs. It recognises that in deprived urban areas in particular, food growing projects can make an important contribution to improving not only the food supply but also quality of life.

The Department is currently funding the National Food Alliance and the Health Education Authority to produce a database of projects which aim to assist people on low incomes to eat more healthily. The database has already been launched nationally and will be fully operational later this year.

Yellow Card System

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's latest estimate of the proportion of adverse reactions reported under the yellow card system. [4922]

Ms Jowell: The proportion of all adverse reactions reported under the yellow card system is not known, as there is no means of knowing the total number of adverse drug reactions.

Smoking

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he proposes to take to discourage smoking (a) generally and (b) with particular reference to under 20-year-olds. [4987]

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how he intends to achieve "The Health of the Nation" targets to reduce the prevalence of smoking among 11 to 15-year-olds. [5318]

Ms Jowell: The Government's strategy on smoking will be set out in detail in a White Paper later this year. This Paper will reflect the deliberations of the summit of national and international experts in the field of smoking reduction to be held on 14 July.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) of 10 June, Official Report, column 425, if he will make a statement on the number of 16 to 24-year-olds who smoke. [4986]

Ms Jowell: Smoking levels in this age group, particularly among young women, are a matter of serious concern. How best to influence the various age groups will be a topic for study at the summit of national and international experts in the field of smoking reduction to be held on 14 July.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he plans to increase awareness among the public of the dangers of passive smoking. [5085]

Ms Jowell: Reports published in this country by the Independent Scientific Committee on Smoking and Health (1988) and the Royal College of Physicians (1992) and by the United States Environmental Protection Agency (1993) have set out the health risks associated with passive smoking.

The Scientific Committee on Tobacco and Health has been asked by the Chief Medical Officer to review the latest evidence and its report is expected later this year.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the costs to the national health service of the use of tobacco. [5172]

Ms Jowell: Treatment costs to the National Health Service are not available on a year by year basis. Based on 1990 figures, the Health Education Authority's report "The Smoking Epidemic—A Prescription for Change", estimated that the annual cost to the NHS of treating smoking related diseases is £610 million.

Erb's Palsy and Brachial Plexus Injuries

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the merits of recording incidents of (a) Erb's palsy and (b) brachial plexus injuries. [5009]

Ms Jowell: Erb's palsy and brachial plexus injuries are, fortunately, rare occurrences. Most babies with Erb's palsy recover spontaneously within a few months. We will continue to support initiatives by the professional organisations which aim to minimise the risk of Erb's palsy and brachial plexus injuries. Professionals providing maternity care should monitor the incidence of such cases. The Government believes local monitoring is the best approach and the collection of information centrally would not assist in preventing occurrences.

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what use he plans to make of the Internet to make Government more open. [5102]

Ms Jowell: The Department continues to update and expand its web site. The site already includes extensive information about the Department's work and publications as well as a wide range of guidance for business on regulation. Some key publications, such as the NHS Performance Guide, the Chief Medical Officer's quarterly updates, and "The Health of the Nation" briefing pack, appear in full.

Development of the site is driven by the need of government to be more accessible and accountable, taking account of feedback from its users and of the principles set out in the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. Additions planned for coming months include the full text of departmental circulars (from 1 July), guidance on emergency planning, a wider range of official statistics, and the 1997 NHS Performance Guide. Statistics received from the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency show that weekly page accesses to the Department's site have increased from just under 2,000 in June 1995 to over 12,000 in June 1997. Managers of over 250 other sites have set up links to that of the Department of Health. The Department will continue to improve the organisation of the site and its coverage.

Special Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the special advisers in his Department, the minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in his Department in the year up to 1 May. [5351]

Mr. Dobson: The Department has currently appointed one paid special adviser, Mr. Joseph McCrea, who is responsible to me.

He is employed under terms and conditions based on the model contract for special advisers, copies of which have been placed in the Library. Mr. McCrea is advising me on all Departmental subjects in accordance with Schedule 1 (Part 1) of the model contract.

There were two special advisers employed during the year up to 1 May 1997.

Wharfedale General Hospital

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will examine the time so far taken to draw up plans for the redevelopment of Wharfedale General Hospital; and if he will ensure that the process is completed within a reasonable time scale. [5279]

Mr. Milburn: This is a matter for Leeds Health Authority and the United Leeds Teaching Hospitals National Health Service Trust in consultation with the National Health Service Executive which has asked the trust to submit a revised outline business case for consideration. This will give the opportunity for a fresh assessment of the choices for the proposed development.

Infertility

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research his Department is funding into the causes of and treatment for infertility; and if he will make a statement; [5387]

(2) what research his Department is funding into the causes of treatment for infertility; and if she will make a statement. [5387]

Ms Jowell: The main agency through which the Government supports medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC) which receives its grant-in-aid from my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. In 1995–96, the latest year for which figures are available, the Council spent some £2.4 million on research related to infertility and fertility in general in both males and females. Much of the research is carried out at the Council's Reproductive Biology Unit in Edinburgh.

In addition, there is also research within the National Health Service Executive. The Trent Research Scheme, run by Trent Regional Office of the NHS Executive, is funding two relevant studies. These are:

Psychological outcome and adjustment to parenthood in couples conceiving through IVF treatment (1 February 1997 to 31 January 1999; £23,690);

The incidence of sex chromosome aneuploidy in spermatozoa from men with semen parameters necessitating intracytoplasmic sperm injection (1 March 1997 to 28 February 1998; £26,000).

Obesity

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how he intends to achieve "The Health of the Nation" targets to reduce the percentage of men aged 16 to 64 years who are obese. [5319]

Ms Jowell: The Health Survey for England 1995 shows that the prevalence of obesity increased from 13 per cent. for men and 16 per cent. for women in 1993 to 15 per cent. and 18 per cent. respectively in 1995. Obesity is more common with increasing age up to 64 years in men and 74 years in women, and is more common in manual than non-manual social classes. Men in Social Class III (manual) and women in Social Class IV have the highest rates (17.6 per cent. and 24.1 per cent. respectively). Obesity is a long-term problem and needs a long-term strategy. We will continue to support the action on obesity and obesity-related illness which addresses:

(a) prevention of increasing fatness in the whole population

(b) the particular problems of high risk groups e.g. those already overweight

(c) treatment of those who are already obese.

Work initiated by the Nutrition Task Force and the Physical Activity Task Force is directed towards helping people to reduce the fat content of their diets and encourage physical activity.

The role of physical activity in helping to maintain a healthy weight is well recognised. The "Active for Life" campaign, which is funded by the Department and run by the Health Education Authority, promotes the value of increased physical activity. The campaign targeted people aged 16 to 74 in its first year and will continue to run to 1999. As part of this campaign we are also looking at physical activity and young people. To this end, an expert conference was convened last week to establish a consensus on the optimum levels of physical activity for school aged children and young people.

GP Fundholding

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the total financial surpluses currently held by GP fundholders. [5174]

Mr. Milburn: The total accumulated level of savings available to general practitioner fundholders as of April 1996 was £188 million.

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if GP fundholding receives the same degree of audit scrutiny as other elements of the NHS and public sector services. [5281]

Mr. Milburn: Like all other National Health Service bodies, general practitioner fundholders are under a statutory requirement to have their accounts audited annually by the Audit Commission. In addition, their accounts (as part of those of the local health authority) are open for scrutiny by the National Audit Office and by internal auditors of the local health authority. These are similar to the arrangements that apply elsewhere in the public sector.

Strategic Planning

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to review the current arrangements for strategic planning within the NHS. [5175]

Mr. Milburn: The arrangements for strategic planning in the National Health Service will be reviewed in the context of work on replacing the internal market.

NHS Trust Mergers

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to review the possibilities of mergers between adjacent NHS trusts. [5176]

Mr. Milburn: Any proposals to merge National Health Service trusts will be considered on their merits. Mergers must lead to improved services for patients.

Repetitive Strain Injury

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of repetitive strain injury were identified in England in (i) 1995 and (ii) 1996. [5303]

Ms Jowell: The Department of Health does not collect data on repetitive strain injuries (some of which are known as upper limb disorders). However, evidence from a survey on occupational ill health, carried out for the Health and Safety Executive as a supplement to the 1990 Labour Force Survey, suggests that in the year around 110,000 people in England and Wales believed that they had upper limb disorders caused by work. A new survey of work related illness was made in 1995–96 and the full results will be available early in 1998. Data are also available on some conditions which are prescribed under the Industrial Injuries Scheme. This is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

New Building Projects

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department currently offers NHS trusts and health authorities to ensure that they take into full account the environmental impact of new building projects. [4517]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 19 June 1997]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply the Minister for London and Construction, my hon. Friend the Member for Greenwich and Woolwich (Mr. Raynsford), gave him today.

Policy on environmental issues is the responsibility of the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, which produces guidance for local authorities to use when considering planning applications by NHS Trusts for new building projects. The Department of Health fully supports the Government's commitment to promoting policies to sustain the environment.

NHS Estates, an Executive Agency of the Department of Health, has issued "A strategic guide to environmental policy for General Managers and Chief Executives" and Health Facilities Note 11 "Environmental management in healthcare", with the aim of advising NHS trusts how to produce sound policies to reduce environmental damage. The Agency has also published reports on energy saving measures in hospitals.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Health and Social Services Staff

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) Roman Catholics and (b) Protestants are employed by (i) the Southern area health and social services board and (ii) the Armagh and Dungannon Health and Social Services Trust. [4268]

Mr. Worthington: The latest available information on numbers and religious composition of staff employed by the Southern Area Health and Social Services Board is contained in the Fair Employment Commission's Seventh Monitoring Report which was published in March 1997 and contains a summary of 1996 Monitoring Returns. That report indicated the position to be as follows:

	Number
Protestant	925
Roman Catholic	1,103
Non-determined	189
Total	2,217

There is no information available yet on the Armagh and Dungannon Health and Social Services Trust which came into operation on 1 April 1996.

Drugs

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the total amount (a) spent and (b) allocated by her Department on tackling problems relating to drugs in respect of (i) improving international co-operation to reduce supplies from abroad, (ii) increasing the effectiveness of police and Customs enforcement, (iii) maintaining effective deterrents and tight domestic controls, (iv) developing prevention publicity, education and community action and (v) improving treatment and rehabilitation, for (1) 1994, (2) 1995, (3) 1996 and (4) 1997. [4782]

Mr. Ingram: Information on total Government expenditure on tackling drug misuse in Northern Ireland is not recorded on an annual basis. Estimated expenditure for the 1993–94 financial year for Northern Ireland was published in May 1995 White Paper "Tackling Drugs Together" as part of the UK expenditure figure of £526 million. Figures for the calendar years 1994 and 1995 are not available.

The most recent available estimates for Northern Ireland were published on 18 March 1997 in the NI Affairs Committee Report: Illicit Drug Use in NI and refer to the 1995–96 financial year. They show that at least £7.17 million of expenditure in 1995–96 could be directly attributable to drug prevention and treatment programmes, public information campaigns and enforcement activities across the province. Similar costings were incurred for delivering these same services for 1996 and 1997.

However, in 1996 and in addition to the £7.17 million, an extra £0.5 million was secured for each of the next three years to develop a NI Drugs Campaign, which will be used to fund a broad range of drugs services including a public information campaign, educational training and materials for schools, drug handbooks for drug professionals, and a drugs research strategy, and to create four drugs co-ordination teams.

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what use she plans to make of the Internet to make government more open. [5096]

Mr. Murphy: Business Development Service (BDS) of the Department of Finance and Personnel provides an Internet publishing service for NI government information.

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland will use the BDS Web Publishing service to augment the significant base of information which already exists on the Northern Ireland Civil Service Web Server.

Under the Deregulation Initiative, more than 250 forms have been made available to the public for printing, completion and submission to NICS Departments and Agencies.

The NICS World Wide Web service holds over 12,000 pages of Government information on topics as diverse as updates in progress in the Northern Ireland Multi-Party talks to a database of commercial property valuations. Currently, the number of accesses per month to the NI Government Web Service exceeds 450,000.

BDS has recently established a secure connection that will facilitate Internet e-mail messaging to all NI public servants.

The Web information is accessible at: http://www.nics.gov.uk using any publicly available web browsing software.

Human Rights

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she expects to receive the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights' review of fair employment and equality; and if she will make a statement. [4421]

Marjorie Mowlam [holding answer 24 July 1997]: The Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights (SACHR) published its report today, copies have been placed in the Library. I am grateful to SACHR for producing this report. I shall study the recommendations with the greatest of care.

WALES

Council House Repairs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the average number of jobs created when a local authority modernises a council house; and if he will make a statement. [3151]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Speech Therapy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what assessment he has made of the coordination between the local education authority and health authority of speech therapy services for schoolchildren in Flintshire; [4457]

(2) if he will consult parents, teachers and governors concerning the future of speech therapy services in schools; and if he will make a statement; [4455]

(3) what is his policy on speech therapy in schools; [4453]

(4) what plans he has to improve speech therapy services to schoolchildren. [4454]

Mr. Hain: Health authorities are primarily responsible for providing speech therapy services, including services to children. If a health authority cannot provide speech therapy for a child whose statement of special educational needs identifies a need, the local education authority has to ensure the provision is made in view of its duty to maintain statements. Health authorities are statutorily required to comply with requests from LEAs unless the request is unreasonable and subject to sufficient resources. Welsh Office guidance to LEAs and health authorities has drawn attention to this duty. Copies of the guidance has been placed in the Library of the House.

The Welsh Office has introduced new measures to improve the recruitment of speech therapists. The Department has also introduced two new core indicators for health authorities which will help measure the service they provide for children with statements.

Neither my right hon. Friend nor I have made an assessment of co-ordination in Flintshire. I understand that representatives from six North Wales LEAs met the North Wales Health Authority recently to discuss the future planning of speech therapy services in the area.

We have no immediate plans to consult parents, teachers and governors. However, we shall be assessing the effectiveness of the initiatives over the coming months and reviewing the position more generally.

Smoke Detectors

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the local councils which (a) have and (b) have not installed smoke detectors in their housing stock. [4748]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Twenty-one local authorities in Wales have fitted, or are in the process of fitting, smoke detectors in all of their housing stock. Details are in the following table:

Installation of smoke detectors in local authority housing in Wales

Local authority	Smoke alarms in all stock	Type of alarm
Isle of Anglesey County Council	Yes	Mix of battery and mains
Blaenau Gwent County Borough Council	Yes	Battery
Bridgend County Borough Council	Yes	Battery
Caerphilly County Borough Council	Yes	Mains
City and County of Cardiff	Yes	Battery
Carmarthenshire County Council	Yes	Mix of battery and mains
Ceredigion County Council	Yes	Battery
Conwy County Borough Council	Yes	Battery
Denbighshire County Council	Yes	Mix of battery and mains
Flintshire County Council	Some (in accommodation for the elderly)	Mains
Gwynedd County Council	Yes	Mix of battery and mains

Installation of smoke detectors in local authority housing in Wales

Local authority	Smoke alarms in all stock	Type of alarm
Merthyr Tydfil County Borough Council	Yes	Battery

Vale of Glamorgan County Borough Council	Installation in all properties will be completed in 1998–99	Mains
Wrexham County Borough Council	Yes	Mix of battery and mains

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what use he plans to make of the Internet to make Government more open. [5097]

Mr. Ron Davies: My Department has maintained an Internet Site on the CCTA server since 1995 which at present contains hospital performance information. A pilot site for the Welsh Office Industry and Training Department was set up in 1995 and this contains mainly Industry related information.

My Department has recently completed a study of how it can make best use of the Internet to provide a wide range of information about its activities, services and regulatory guidance.

My Department is now implementing, with the CCTA, a new on-line Internet Communication System. This will enable us to quickly expand our current Internet presence to make Welsh Office information more accessible through electronic communication.

Agri-environment Programme

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to announce new proposals on the agri-environment programme in Wales. [5301]

Mr. Win Griffiths: My right hon. Friend hopes to make a statement on proposals for the future of the agri-environment schemes in Wales at the Royal Welsh Show.

Conservation (Cardigan Bay)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list his conservation objectives for the Cardigan Bay Special Area of Conservation. [4537]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The legislation requires the Countryside Council for Wales (CCW) to advise other relevant authorities as to the conservation objectives for the site. The CCW is in the process of preparing this advice, and discussions on the subject are taking place with the other relevant authorities. The process must be completed as soon as possible after the site is formally agreed between the European Commission and the UK Government. The relevant Directive requires this agreement to take place by June 1998.

Popular Schools Initiative

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his future plans for the Popular Schools Initiative in Wales. [5497]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend and I plan to honour commitments for the 23 projects successful under Phases 1 and 2 of the Popular Schools Initiative. There will, however, be no third phase.

University Hospital of Wales

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning car parking charges at the University Hospital of Wales, Cardiff; and what consultations he has had with the chairman of the University Hospital of Wales Healthcare NHS Trust concerning these charges. [5500]

Mr. Win Griffiths: One. Charges for car parking are a matter for the UHW Healthcare NHS Trust. The charges for the new multi-storey car park under construction will be capped for three years, and any subsequent rises will have to be in line with local parking rates and inflation.

DEFENCE

HMS Dreadnought

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information was provided by the manufacturers as to the maximum level of radiation workers could safely be exposed to when the Royal Navy took delivery of the nuclear reactor for HMS Dreadnought; and if such information is retained by the Royal Navy. [4788]

Mr. Spellar: The Royal Navy took delivery of HMS Dreadnought containing the first UK Submarine nuclear reactor in 1963. While manufacturers are not responsible for advising my Department on the levels to which its radiation workers might be exposed, radiation surveys by Vickers (VSEL), the ship builder, established that the radiation levels on HMS Dreadnought were within the limits specified, based upon the recommendations of the International Commission for Radiological Protection in being at the time. This information is held by VSEL but was and is available to the Royal Navy.

Armed Forces Parliamentary Scheme

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the sponsors of the Armed Forces Parliamentary Scheme and (b) their individual contributions since 1992. [5013]

Mr. Spellar: We are profoundly grateful to the sponsors of the Armed Forces Parliamentary Scheme, British Aerospace, Rolls-Royce and Vickers, which have since 1992 each contributed £14,250, and to Sir Neil Thorne for the very considerable moral and financial support he has lent the scheme since its inception in 1989.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Brian Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the AWE sites at Aldermaston and Burghfield to be licensed under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965. [6055]

Mr. Spellar: I am pleased to announce that the Chief Inspector of Nuclear Installations has granted a licence, effective from 1 July 1997, to the AWE management contractor Hunting-BRAE Ltd. to operate the AWE sites at Aldermaston and Burghfield. The two sites will thus be brought within the same regulatory regime as civil nuclear sites and will be regularly inspected by the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate. This will provide independent assurance that nuclear-related activities at AWE are carried out safely and pose no threat to the workforce, the public or the environment.

Eurofighters

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the statement by the Minister of State for Defence Procurement that the number of Eurofighters to be ordered will be included as an item for consideration by the Defence review represents Government policy. [5495]

Mr. Spellar: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made clear on 16 June, Official Report, column 81, it is our intention to order Eurofighter according to the conditions and numbers previously announced. We are committed to the purchase of 232 Eurofighters. Eurofighter might be a cost effective replacement for the Harrier GR7, although no decision on this needs to be taken yet. Decisions taken during the Defence Review could affect this.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

EU Agriculture Council

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Luxembourg on 23 and 25 June; and if he will make a statement. [5942]

Dr. John Cunningham: The Council reached agreement, Spain voting against, on a package of measures covering the CAP support prices and aids for the 1997–98 marketing year, the penalties to be applied when arable base areas are exceeded, and the rate of set-aside to apply to the 1998 crop.

On prices and aids, the agreement largely maintained the status quo, in advance of negotiations on reform of the major regimes, which are anticipated to start in the Autumn. However, monthly increments for cereals intervention and sugar storage refunds were cut by around 9 per cent. to reflect interest rate changes. The Council agreed to address the important question of over-compensation of arable farmers for past support price cuts in the context of the forthcoming discussions on reform of the arable regime.

In response to requests from me and several other Ministers, the Council agreed in principle that the set-aside rate for the 1998–99 marketing year should be maintained at 5 per cent. It invited the Commission to submit a proposal accordingly, as soon as possible. The proposal to amend the regulations concerning the arable penalties system was adopted with minor amendments—notably, to suspend the application of penalty set-aside for a further year—and requests from several Member States for measures which would have weakened or complicated the system were successfully resisted.

I argued for, and secured, a further commitment from the Commission to propose new measures to safeguard the welfare standards of breeding pigs without requiring them to be unloaded at staging points during journeys. This will help secure the high health status of these valuable animals when they are transported on long international journeys.

On BSE, I reported to the Council the measures I have recently announced to the House following SEAC's advice that the controls on specified bovine material should be extended to imports and that the UK should extend its controls on sheep and goat offal. In reply, Commissioner Fischler supported my call for a Community-wide solution to this problem and urged Member States to support the measures he has recently tabled on specified risk material.

The Council also unanimously endorsed an Italian application for approval of a state aid to agricultural co-operative members and adopted by qualified majority (Germany voting against) a Directive concerning maximum pesticide residue levels in food.

Pig Exports

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many pigs were exported for (a) breeding, (b) slaughter and (c) further fattening (i) during 1996 and (ii) to date in 1997; and if he will make a statement. [4867]

Mr. Rooker: Information on the numbers of pigs escorted in 1996 and 1997 can be obtained in the form requested only at disproportionate cost. Official Overseas Trade Statistics show that approximately 340,000 pigs were exported from the United Kingdom in 1996 and approximately 34,450 were exported up to the end of March 1997. More recent figures are not yet available. These figures remain provisional and subject to amendment.

Exotic Animals

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review the current regulations on the transportation of exotic animals; and if he will make a statement. [4607]

Mr. Morley: The welfare of animals during transport to, from, and within the EU is regulated by directive 91/628, as amended by directive 95/29. In Great Britain these provisions are implemented by the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997 which was made on 10 June 1997. These regulations were introduced after consultation with interested parties when the subject was reviewed.

Pesticides

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research or data his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the presence of pesticides currently banned in the United Kingdom as residues on imported food; and if he will make a statement. [5163]

Mr. Rooker: The Working Party on Pesticide Residues analyses 3,000 to 4,000 samples annually of a wide range of imported and UK-produced commodities. Each sample is analysed for up to 100 different pesticides, including those which have been banned in the UK. This monitoring programme cost £2 million in 1996–97. In recent years, although residues of banned pesticides have occasionally been detected, none has exceeded internationally agreed safety levels.

The full results of the Working Party's monitoring are published annually and the report for 1996 is expected to be published in September 1997.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his policy with regard to the release of brand names with the results of pesticide residue tests. [5164]

Mr. Rooker: The Working Party on Pesticide Residues undertakes a large surveillance programme and publishes the results in an annual report with includes details of the countries of origin of samples where this can be determined. More generally, I am currently reviewing ways to improve reporting the results of all surveys including the release of brand names. I intend to make a further statement in the near future.

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ensure that chemicals used to spray crops do not damage the environment. [5190]

Mr. Rooker: Only approved pesticides can be advertised, sold, supplied, stored or used. Applicants for approvals must show that their products pose no unacceptable risks to humans, animals or the environment before approval will be granted. The Registration Handbook outlines the comprehensive data which must be submitted in support of an application. These data are scrutinised by the independent experts of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides before a recommendation is made to Ministers in the five Government Departments responsible for pesticides.

All approved pesticide products are subject to routine review but may be reviewed at any time if any evidence emerges concerning their safety.

RSPCA Freedom Foods

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the RSPCA freedom foods initiative. [5184]

Mr. Morley: This Government wholeheartedly welcomes any positive contribution to the maintenance and improvement of welfare standards for farm animals. Detailed requirements of schemes such as the RSPCA's Freedom Foods are a matter for the organisations concerned.

Farm Animals (Cruelty)

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the number of prosecutions for cruelty to farm animals in each of the last five years; and if he will list the powers under which such prosecutions may be made. [5182]

Mr. Morley: The Reports of the Chief Veterinary Officer have recorded the following figures for prosecutions relating to the welfare of animals on farm in Great Britain in which the State Veterinary Service (SVS) has been involved:

1992: 120
1993: 111
1994: 112
1995: 127
1996: 105.

The figures are for prosecutions on which the State Veterinary Service has worked in liaison with the police, local authorities and other agencies.

The figures for 1992–94 are for successful prosecutions; those for 1995 and 1996 are for prosecutions initiated.

The relevant powers are contained in the Protection of Animals Act 1911, the Protection of Animals (Scotland) Act 1912, and the Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1968.

Food Labelling

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the steps he is taking to ensure clearer labelling on food. [5202]

Mr. Rooker: The Government believes that consumers have a right to receive information about the foods they buy and we are taking a number of steps to improve on that presently.

On mechanically recovered meat, we recently succeeded in getting the rest of Europe to agree that this should be separately and specifically declared on the label. We have also sought comments from interested parties on the operation of the nutrition labelling rules and invited suggestions for improvements to take forward in Brussels. Finally, we have recently announced our intention to press in Europe for all food to be labelled if they contain genetically modified material.

New York Dressed Poultry

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the health hazards posed by the sale of New York Dressed poultry, and the evidence on which his list is based. [5313]

Mr. Rooker: The Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food considered the risks posed by New York Dressed (NYD) poultry in its "Report on Poultry Meat" published in 1996. NYD birds are sold uneviscerated and with the head and feet attached. These birds present a particular hazard due to the risk of leakage of faeces and resulting contamination of the surface of the birds. If evisceration is carried out in the kitchen, there is also the risk of faeces or intestinal contents from ruptured intestines cross-contaminating other foods.

Prevention of Damage by Pests Act

Ms Walley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review the operation of the Prevention of Damage by Pests Act 1949. [5157]

Mr. Morley: The results of the 1993 National Rodent Survey did not provide evidence to suggest that a change in rodent control policies was needed. A further survey has been carried out, the results of which will be available later this year, and the situation will be reviewed in the light of the results of this survey.

Over 30 months Scheme

Mrs. Organ: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to alter the amount payable to farmers involved in the over 30 months cattle scheme to take account of fluctuation in the value of the green pound. [5341]

Mr. Rooker: None. The sterling value of payments made for cattle slaughtered under the over 30 months scheme still represents a good return in comparison with the market price of clean beef in the UK and cull cow prices in some other member states.

Quarantine Kennels

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he plans to publish the list of kennels that have agreed to comply with the code of practice on welfare standards. [5583]

Mr. Rooker: Information on the quarantine premises that comply with the voluntary code of practice for the welfare of dogs and cats in quarantine premises will be included in the literature sent out to prospective importers of pet dogs and cats after all the premises that have undertaken to comply with the code have been inspected by the State Veterinary Service. The majority of these inspections have been carried out.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review further the provision of care and welfare standards at quarantine kennels. [5582]

Mr. Rooker: The voluntary code of practice for the welfare of dogs and cats in quarantine premises was published in March 1995. It will be kept under review.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to commission a risk assessment and economic audit to determine the costs and benefits of quarantine and alternative systems. [5579]

Mr. Rooker: I shall consider whether a risk assessment and economic audit is appropriate as the review of the rabies quarantine regulations progresses.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many owners of quarantine kennels have (a) agreed to abide by the voluntary code of practice on welfare standards, (b) indicated they will not comply and (c) not yet responded. [5580]

Mr. Rooker: Seventy-three owners of quarantine premises have agreed to abide by the voluntary code of practice. Three have indicated that they do not wish to comply with the code at this stage and two have not yet responded to the invitation.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many quarantine kennels which have agreed to abide by the code of practice on welfare standards have been inspected by the State Veterinary Service. [5581]

Mr. Rooker: Sixty-three.

Multi-Annual Guidance Programme

Mr. Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a report on progress on implementing the MAGP III fishing industry provisions; and if he will make a statement. [4916]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 24 June 1997]: Fleet reduction targets under the third fisheries Multi-Annual Guidance Programme (MAGP III) relate to the period from 1 Janaury 1992 to 31 December 1996. The European Commission is still considering figures submitted by Member States in order to draw up a final assessment of what was achieved. The position as reported by the previous administration is set out in the table below.

Segment	MAGP III Objective (GRT)	Position at end 1996 (GRT)	Percentage reduction in GRT to meet Objective	MAGP III Objective (kW)	Position at end 1996 (kW)	Percentage reduction in kW to meet Objective

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Reading and Writing

16. Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the number of children who left primary school in 1996 able to read and write to their chronological age. [4107]

Mr. Byers: Fifty-eight per cent. of pupils reached level 4 and above—the level expected for 11-year-olds—in English in the 1996 national curriculum tests.

Welfare-to-work Task Force

17. Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the remit of the welfare-to-work task force. [4108]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The role of the task force is first, to ensure that the design of the new deal takes full account of the requirements of employers and the wider community, second, to harness the energy and commitment of all sections of society, and particularly the business community, behind the new deal, and finally, to keep the Government informed of the way the proposals are working on the ground and advise on the resolution of any problems which arise.

28. Jacqui Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the members of the welfare-to-work task force. [4120]

Mr. Smith: We have appointed Sir Peter Davis to lead the new deal advisory task force. The Government are now working with him to ensure that membership of the task force consists of people representing employers and other interests who are vital to the success of our initiative. The list will be made public in due course.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the remit of the welfare-to-work task force. [4115]

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the remit of the welfare-to-work task force. [4117]

Mr. Alan Howarth: One of our most urgent priorities is to help unemployed people move from welfare to work. We intend to work in partnership with the business community and other key interests to offer unemployed people help in returning to sustained employment. The aim of the new deal advisory task force, which is headed by Sir Peter Davis, will be to ensure that employers and other key sectors are committed to the success of the initiative. The role of the task force is threefold:

(a) to ensure that the design of the new deal takes full account of the requirements of employers and the wider community;

(b) to harness the energy and commitment of all sections of society, and particularly the business community, behind the new deal;

(c) to keep the Government informed of the way the proposals are working on the ground, and advise on the resolution of any problems which arise.

Higher Education (Access)

18. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has to improve access to higher education for young people from low-income families. [4109]

Dr. Howells: We are committed to widening opportunities for all individuals to fulfil their potential and we shall be considering very carefully what the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education has to say about improving the under-representation of lower socio-economic and certain other groups in higher education.

Key Stage 2

19. Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to modify the assessment tests at key stage 2. [4110]

Ms Estelle Morris: We are awaiting advice from the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority on the shape of the 1998 assessments before making decisions.

School Standards

20. Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his main policy priorities for raising standards in schools. [4111]

Mr. Byers: Raising standards in schools is a central priority of this Government. That is why we have set up the Standards and Effectiveness Unit. We have also set clear new national targets for higher standards of literacy and numeracy by the time children leave primary school age 11.

Early-years Development Plans

21. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of local authorities in preparing interim early-years development plans. [4112]

Ms Estelle Morris: Progress is very encouraging. A majority of local authorities have told us they intend to submit interim plans by the deadline of 1 July.

22. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the early-years development plans will cover early-years education and child care. [4113]

Ms Morris: Yes. We have made clear the need to integrate these services.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

26. Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the arrangements for providing and funding nursery education for four-year-olds following the abolition of the nursery voucher scheme. [4118]

32. Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for the replacement of the nursery voucher scheme; and what are the financial implications of these plans. [4124]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government's plans were set out in my right hon. Friend's reply to a question from the hon. Member for Barking (Ms Hodge) on 22 May, Official Report, column 128 and in the Department's letter of 22 May to Chief Education Officers, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

As early-years development plans take effect, nursery education places occupied by eligible four-year-olds will be funded through local education authorities from the resources previously available for vouchers.

Disability Discrimination Act

27. Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when his Department's review of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 will be completed. [4119]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Our manifesto commits us to supporting "comprehensive, enforceable civil rights" for disabled people. We are consulting interested parties on the best way to achieve this and we shall develop proposals in the light of our discussions.

An announcement about how we intend to proceed will be made after we have had an opportunity to consider the views put to us at these initial meetings.

University of Industry

30. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement about the role of his Department in the plans for a university of industry. [4122]

Dr. Howells: The Department is taking the lead in developing the framework for a university for industry.

We are taking urgent steps to bring together a range of interests from across and outside government to agree the way ahead on the university for industry's development. An announcement is expected very soon.

Cooking Skills

31. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will increase the priority accorded to cooking skills within the national curriculum; and if he will make a statement. [4123]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Secretary of State has agreed not to make any changes to the national curriculum before the year 2000. The new Qualifications and Curriculum Authority will be offering advice on any changes that might be made and he will consider the issue of cooking skills alongside that advice.

Long-term Unemployment

33. Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has to move long-term unemployed people from welfare into work. [4125]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Under our new deal for young unemployed people aged 18 to 24, we intend to offer opportunities to take jobs, and to gain relevant education, training and work experiencee. We also intend to offer employers an incentive of £75 per week to recruit people aged 25 or over unemployed for two years or more.

The Employment Service will work in partnership with the business community, voluntary organisations and other bodies to ensure the initiative is effective.

Child Care

29. Mr. Ivan Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to promote the integration of early-years education and child care. [4121]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made clear the importance we attach to the development of a coherent programme for the education and care of young children that, along with after school provision, helps parents who want to work juggle work and family life. We regard the integration of education and childcare as central to this. Good quality child care should be based on learning and child development, and should form part of a wider family learning programme. To achieve this local authorities will establish early-years forums to draw up early-years development plans which will show how these and other services for families can be brought together. Young children's services providing education and child care support, early-years development plans, after school homework clubs funded by the midweek lottery and the work already being delivered by the out of school child care Initiative, and meeting the needs of children, parents and employers, will form key elements of our overall approach.

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has to integrate early-years education with child care. [4431]

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made clear the importance we attach to the development of a coherent programme for the education and care of young children that, along with after school provision, helps parents who want to juggle work and family life. We regard the integration of education and child care as central to this.

Good quality child care should be based on learning and child development, and should form part of a wider family learning programme. To achieve this local authorities will establish early years forums to draw up early years development plans which will show how these and other services for families can be brought together. Young children's services providing education and child care support, early-years development plans, after school homework clubs funded by the midweek lottery and the work already being delivered by the out of school child care initiative, and meeting the needs of children, parents and employers, will form key elements of our overall approach.

International Labour Organisation Conference

34. Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the recent International Labour Organisation conference. [4126]

Mr. Andrew Smith: This year's International Labour conference was a successful event in which the UK played a positive and constructive part. When I addressed the conference, I set out the Government's commitment to the promotion of basic labour standards and our support for the ILO Director-General's vision of universal respect for fundamental human rights in the workplace. There was unanimous approval of my announcement concerning the restoration of trade union rights at GCHQ.

Literacy Summer Schools

35. Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools are participating in the pilot literacy summer schools. [4127]

Mr. Byers: I launched the initiative on 3 June with 29 schools and am delighted to say that this initiative has recently been expanded to a total of 50 schools.

Student Debts

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of higher education students who will be unable formally to graduate in 1997 from higher education institutes because of debts owed to those institutes; and if he will make a statement. [4114]

Dr. Howells: None. The information requested is not available centrally.

New Deal

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to announce details of his new deal for young people. [5186]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Details of the new deal for young people will be announced shortly.

Nursery Education

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what support will be available for parents of four-year-olds currently using private or voluntary sector providers where their local education authority does not have an approved interim early years development plan. [5197]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 24 June 1997]: Where a local education authority does not have an approved interim early-years development plan and parents currently using private or voluntary sector providers wish to continue doing so for the coming Autumn and Spring terms, then those parents will be entitled to certificates of eligibility. These certificates will cover fees up to £366 per term for up to five sessions of education per week each lasting at least two and a half hours.

Jobfinder's Grants

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many jobfinders' grants were paid in 1996–97; and at what cost. [5438]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Christopher Pond, dated 26 June 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about how many Jobfinder's Grants were paid in 1996–97; and at what cost. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

During 1996–97, 17,300 Grants were paid at a cost of £3.8 million.

I hope this is helpful.

Public Utilities

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much (a) British Telecom, (b) the water and sewerage companies, (c) the regional electricity companies, (d) the electricity generators, (e) British Gas, (f) BAA and (g) Railtrack received in funding for training from the Further Education Funding Council budgets in (i) 1995–96 and (ii) 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [5577]

Dr. Howells: This information is not centrally available.

Construction Industry

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans the Government have to review the role and function of the Construction Industry Training Board and the Engineering Construction Industry Training Board. [6136]

Dr. Howells: Against the background of the established practice of carrying out quinquennial policy and financial management reviews of non-departmental public bodies, my Department will conduct a thorough review of the Construction Industry Training Board and the Engineering Construction Industry Training Board during 1997–98.

The first stage of the review will have the following terms of reference:

1. To review the functions of the Boards, and the likely need in the future of these functions.

2. To consider whether some or all of the functions can be better performed through other means.

3. To review the efficiency and effectiveness of the Boards in carrying out their functions.
4. To consider the powers, terms of reference, constitutional status, membership and activities of the Boards.
5. To report the outcomes of the reviews by late September 1997.

The study is now underway and I would welcome comments form interested parties. Comments, which may be made public unless respondents specifically request otherwise, should be sent by 30 July 1997 to:

SOCIAL SECURITY

Poverty

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the methods by which Her Majesty's Government assesses the level of poverty existing in the United Kingdom. [867]

Mr. Bradley: The policies of the previous administration led to poverty and social division in our society. The Government is committed to mounting a concerted attack against the worklessness which is causing social and economic inequality, and welfare dependency.

Information on those with low incomes is available in the Government Statistical Service publication "Households Below Average Income". This annual report seeks to measure potential living standards derived from goods and services financed from disposable income. It provides a range of statistics monitoring the characteristics of people at various points in the income distribution, and describes how changes in income over time have affected particular groups. Complementary information is provided on possession of consumer durables and on household expenditure.

Households Below Average Income was last published in November 1996, and a copy is in the Library.

Child Care

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals she has to implement a national child care strategy; and if she will make a statement. [3055]

Ms Harman: I will be working closely with my colleague, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, whose Department has responsibility for developing and implementing a National Child Care Strategy. This Strategy will match provision to the requirements of the modern labour market and help parents, especially women, to balance family and working life. The availability of good quality and affordable child care not only benefits women, it has wide-ranging benefits for the whole community. Most important of all, it benefits children.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has already made clear the importance he attaches to the development of a coherent programme for the education and care of young children that, along with after school provision, helps parents who want to work. The integration of education and child care is central to this programme, ensuring that children as well as parents benefit from provision.

Local Exchange Trading Systems

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will review the role of LETS within areas of high unemployment. [4880]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Government believes that work is the best form of welfare for people of working age. Our Welfare to Work objectives are to provide work incentives, to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to strike a new balance between rights and responsibilities. A programme of monitoring and evaluation is under way to enable us to ensure that Jobseeker's Allowance contributes to achieving our objectives.

In addition to this major evaluation exercise, we shall also keep the individual benefit rules, including the treatment of the Local Exchange Trading Systems (LETS), under active consideration as we develop our plans.

Social Fund (Appeals)

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will reform the administration of the Social Fund to enhance the rights of appeal given to claimants. [5498]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Social Fund is made up of two parts—the regulated and discretionary schemes. The regulated scheme is based on rules of entitlement. Payments are not cash limited and are subject to the appeal procedures relevant to all regulated Social Security benefits.

Decisions on discretionary Social Fund payments are made from a cash-limited budget. These payments are subject to a special review procedure specifically designed to suit the cash limited and discretionary nature of the scheme. Applicants who are dissatisfied with the discretionary decision already have access to immediate redress locally, and a further right of review by the Independent Review Service if they are still dissatisfied.

The Social Fund review process provides a comprehensive system of redress which is quick, fair and reasonable. It is well suited to a cash-limited discretionary scheme. We have no plans to integrate it into the Social Security appeals system.

Child Support Agency

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what proportion of cases being dealt with by the CSA, the parent with care of the child is not receiving benefit, described under section 6 of the Child Support Act 1991 (a) in total, (b) by region and (c) by county. [4381]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We believe that all children are entitled to the support of both parents wherever they may live. Children should be supported by the taxpayer only when their parents are unable to do so. The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Ms Sally Keeble, dated 25 June 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the proportion of CSA cases where the parent/person with care is not in receipt of benefit as described under section 6 of the Child Support Act 1991.

At 28 February 1997, of the 579,180 live and assessed cases recorded on the Child Support Computer System, 11% of parents/persons with care were not in receipt of income support or other prescribed benefits. The table attached shows a breakdown by region, a breakdown by county is not available.

I hope this is helpful.

Parent/Person with care not in receipt of Income Support or other prescribed benefits

Live and assessed caseload—28 February 1997

	Number of cases	Not in receipt of IS/FamC/DWA

Regional totals do not sum to the Great Britain total as some postcode data are sufficient to allow a regional breakdown.
We do not record the above statistics at levels lower than by region.

Family Credit

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action her Department is taking to reduce the backlog of claims for family credit. [3947]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The efficient administration of family credit is central to the Department's measures to help people move from welfare into work. We will streamline services to provide better, simpler and more efficient services to clients. The administration of family credit is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Heppell, dated 25 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what action the Department is taking to reduce the backlog of claims for Family Credit (FC).

The workload forecast for 1997/98 is that 1.7 million FC claims will be received, which equates to an average of over 32,000 claims weekly. Additionally, renewal claims peak in April and October so it is not unusual for the FC Unit to have approximately 65,000 claims at various stages of assessment at any given date. FC Unit Managers prepare for such peak periods by implementing various short term measures, which include the redeployment of staff and the use of overtime.

These measures were used to ensure less than 46,000 claims were awaiting processing at the end of March. The FC Unit were therefore in a position to handle the higher number of claims expected in April. The total number of claims received in April was 174,686. The Unit's effective management of the workload ensured that the temporary backlog in April was reduced to less than 57,000 claims outstanding, as at 16 June.

The Benefits Agency aims to clear all claims accurately and on time. Details of the clearance targets for claims, the actual achievement to the end of 1996/97 and the achievement to the end of May 1997 are shown in the attached Annex.

I hope that this reply assures you of the efforts being made by staff and Management within the FC Unit to ensure that any claims awaiting a decision are kept to a minimum at all times.

Family credit targets

Percentage

Target	Secretary of State clearance 90 per cent. of Faster Claims in 5 days	Management primary clearance 60 per cent. of claims in 13 days	Management secondary clearance 95 per cent. of claims in 42 days
1996–97 achievement	91.9	76.3	98.9
1997–98 achievement to end of May	89.7	72.0	99.1

Figures are provisional and subject to change.
The Faster Claims target relates to newly employed and first time applicants, many of whom have been in receipt of income support or job seekers allowance.
The Management targets relate to all claims.

Benefits Agency Medical Services

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the average annual income of a medical practitioner employed by the Benefits Agency Medical Services on (a) a full-time and (b) a part-time basis; and if he will make a statement; [4428]

(2) how many medical practitioners employed by the Benefits Agency Medical Services have voluntarily resigned from their posts in each of the past three years; what assessment he has made of the reasons for such resignations; and if he will make a statement; [4429]

(3) how many medical practitioners currently employed by the Benefits Agency Medical Services have worked on a sessional basis as members of disability appeals tribunals in (a) Strathclyde, (b) Scotland and (c) England and Wales in each of the past three years; of those employed how many work wholly or mainly on disability living allowance claims; and if she will make a statement. [4430]

Mr. Field: Modernising the Social Security system is a key priority of the Government. We will streamline services to provide better, simpler more efficient services to clients. I wish no discourtesy to the hon. Gentleman but the administration of the Benefits Agency Medical Services is a matter for Peter Mathison, its Chief Executive. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Norman A. Godman, dated 25 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about medical practitioners employed by the Benefits Agency Medical Services (BAMS).

The average annual income for a medical practitioner in full time employment with BAMS is currently £42,159. For medical practitioners in part-time employment, the figure is £26,767.

The number of staff who have resigned during the past three years and the reason for their resignation is shown at Annex 1.

The number of medical practitioners currently employed by BAMS, who have also worked on a sessional basis as members of Disability Appeal Tribunals (DATs), is not available for 1994/95 or 1995/96. Details for 1996/97 are shown at Annex 2.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Special Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the special advisers in her Department, the Minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in her Department in the year up to 1 May. [5360]

Ms Harman: Two special advisers, John McTernan and Liz Kendall, are employed in this Department under terms and conditions based on the model contract for special advisers, a copy of which is available in the Library. Both are responsible to me as Secretary of State for Social Security and they advise me on the full range of my ministerial duties in accordance with Schedule 1 (Part 1) of the Model Contract.

One special adviser was employed in the Department in the year to 1 May.

Widowers' Benefits

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to introduce widowers' benefits on the same basis as widows' benefits. [4812]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, West (Mr. Gorrie) on 23 June, Official Report, column 413.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 27 June 1997

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Privy Council Members

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Council what criteria are used to select individuals for membership of the Privy Council. [5621]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Appointment to the Privy Council is an exercise of the prerogative. Appointments are made by Her Majesty The Queen on the advice of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister. A range of factors are taken into account. Those appointed mostly comprise Ministers, other Parliamentarians and members of the judiciary.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people aged 17 to 25 years are claiming the jobseeker's allowance in Portsmouth; and what this figure is as a percentage of all those in the age group. [4741]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 27 June 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how many people aged 17 to 25 years are claiming the Jobseeker's Allowance in Portsmouth and what this figure is as a percentage of all those in the age group.

The numbers of claimants are collated by two age groupings: 17 to 24 and 25 to 29 year olds. The table below show the number of claimants at the April 1997 count.

In the Parliamentary Constituency of Portsmouth South, the numbers were:

Claimants	Male	Female	Total
Aged 17–24	771	288	1,059
Aged 25–29	608	133	741

In the Parliamentary Constituency of Portsmouth North, the numbers were:

Claimants	Male	Female	Total
Aged 17–24	572	193	765
Aged 25–29	344	79	423

In the Local Authority Area of Portsmouth the numbers were:

Claimants	Male	Female	Total
Aged 17–24	1,255	450	1,705
Aged 25–29	901	201	1,102

Unfortunately, a percentage of 17–24 year unemployed claimants as a proportion of the entire workforce in that age group cannot be given, due to the age criteria used to compile the Population Census survey. However, I give below figures of all young people by available age group:

Portsmouth South—Workforce

Age group	Male	Female	Total
16–17	862	808	1,670
18–19	1,414	1,169	2,583
20–24	4,816	4,604	9,420
25–29	4,933	4,558	9,491

Portsmouth North—Workforce

Age group	Male	Female	Total
16–17	1,348	1,246	2,594
18–19	1,402	1,359	2,761
20–24	3,793	3,825	7,618
25–29	4,224	4,479	8,703

Employment Service

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will place in the Library a copy of the documentation which has been issued to the staff of the Employment Service relating to the measures that they should take to encourage the long-term unemployed to opt for Government training programmes. [5388]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Brian H. Donohoe, dated 27 June 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the documentation issued to Employment Service staff relating to the measures they should take to encourage the long term unemployed to opt for government training programmes. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Guidance on all aspects of dealing with jobseekers following the introduction of the Jobseeker's Allowance was issued to Employment Service staff in October 1997 and amendments issued when appropriate. Copies of the guides are held in the Library.

It may be helpful if I explain that, in addition to regular fortnightly reviews, Employment Service advisers interview all jobseekers at six monthly intervals to review their situation, their work goals and the steps they have been taking to find work. As part of this they assess each jobseeker's needs, identify any barriers to employment and consider what options are available to help them back into work. Advice is tailored to meet an individual's needs and could include information about jobs; employment programmes such as Jobclub; and training opportunities, such as Training for Work.

In addition to the advice and information provided during advisory interviews and at fortnightly reviews, information about a range of opportunities is available in the "Just the Job" leaflet which is held in all Jobcentres.

I hope this is helpful.

School Meals

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average charge per pupil for school meals in the last year for which figures are available. [5439]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department does not collect this information centrally.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Visas

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for changes in the procedure for applying for a visitor's visa; and when he plans to introduce an appeal procedure. [5093]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Our manifesto commits us to providing a streamlined system of appeals for visitors denied a visa. We are examining the options for doing this.

Police and Security (Indonesia)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will identify by name, rank and number those Indonesian military, security, police and paramilitary police personnel invited by the (a) Home Office and (b) the Association of Chief Police Officers to attend the International Police and Security Expo 97. [5699]

Mr. Michael: Neither the Home Office nor the Association of Chief Police Officers is aware of any invitation being issued to Indonesian personnel to attend the International Police and Security Expo 97.

Alcopops

Ms Gisela Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received concerning alcopops. [5615]

Mr. George Howarth: As Chairman of the Ministerial Group on Alcopops, I have received letters from and am holding meetings with the licensed trade and other interested organisations about underage drinking, industry self-regulation and options for Government action. I expect to make an announcement in July.

WALES

Welsh Office Overseas Trade Services

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assistance the Welsh Office Overseas Trade Services section has given to the individual companies who are exhibitors at the International Police and Security Expo 97. [5698]

Mr. Hain: The Department is not aware of the companies who are exhibiting at this exhibition. Assistance has not been given in respect of this particular event.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will ensure that assistance from the Welsh Office Overseas Trade Services section is not provided for the sale of military, security and police equipment to overseas regimes which do not respect the human rights of their citizens. [5695]

Mr. Hain: The Government will not permit the export of arms and related equipment to regimes which it is thought will use them for internal repression. That commitment is reflected in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry's decisions on individual export licence applications.

The Welsh Office's Overseas Trade Services section has no role in the consideration of export licence applications.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment the Welsh Office Overseas Trade Services section has given to the organisers of the International Police and Security Expo 97. [5697]

Mr. Hain: None.

Fibre-optic Cabling

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with (a) the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency and (b) the chairman of the Development Board for Rural Wales, with regard to the strategy each is adopting for the fibre-optic cabling of Wales; what assistance he has made of the compatibility of the strategies of the two bodies; and if he will make a statement. [5819]

Mr. Hain: Neither I nor my right hon. Friend have as yet met the Chairman of the Welsh Development Agency or the Chairman of the Development Board for Rural Wales to discuss the specific issues referred to.

Both bodies are however working alongside the Department in an effort to ensure that all areas of Wales have access to modern telecommunications infrastructure.

The hon. Member raised the issue of broadband telecommunications in Wales during the adjournment debate on 18 June 1997, and I undertook to write to him fully on the matter. I shall be doing so shortly and will arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to ensure that the establishment of fibre-optic cable links with Ireland gives rise to similar links to north-west Wales; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy for extending cable links to the rural areas of Wales. [5818]

Mr. Hain: I am concerned to ensure that all areas of Wales benefit from a good telecommunications infrastructure. However, the question of individual links is a matter for the telecommunications companies concerned.

I will write to the hon. Member on this matter and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Llanelli/Dinefwr NHS Trust

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to fill the vacancies on the board of the Llanelli/Dinefwr NHS Trust. [5645]

Mr. Win Griffiths: My right hon. Friend has issued invitations to serve on the board to those concerned.

Hospital Trusts

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the names of the members of the steering group which is to be established to advise on the reconfiguration of the hospital trusts in Wales. [5646]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I have not made a final decision on the individuals who will comprise the steering group but, when the decision has been made, I will publish their names.

Freight Facilities Grant

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the amounts and the recipients of grants awarded in Wales under the Freight Facilities Grant scheme. [5623]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is given in the following table:

Transport Grant

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends to announce the outcome of the recent review of the Transport Grant arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [6278]

Mr. Hain: I have considered the advice contained in the joint Welsh Office/Welsh Local Government Association working party report into the Transport Grant arrangements and I have introduced two changes for the 1998–99 settlement, for which bids have been invited today:

- support will be reduced, from a rate of 100 per cent., to 80 per cent. for cost increases incurred once a scheme has been accepted for a start of works;
- integrated transport package schemes costing over £1 million, will be eligible for support.

I believe it is essential to obtain the best value from the Transport Grant resources made available. While I accept it is difficult to predict the costs of major construction projects with complete accuracy, I am concerned by the rate at which local authority Transport Grant schemes have increased in cost in recent years compared with our own Trunk Road projects. The generous grant arrangements do not help in this respect. My proposals will provide a strong incentive for authorities to control costs, ensuring both the best possible use of available resources and cost-effective solutions to transport problems. This in turn will help release resources to help tackle the growing number of local authority projects awaiting support.

Transport Grant will continue to be available at a rate of 100 per cent. (50 per cent. grant and 50 per cent. supplementary credit approvals) up to the estimated project cost accepted at start of works. Therefore, schemes whose costs do not increase during construction will continue to receive full support, as will projects which have previously been accepted for a start of works, which are not subject to the new arrangements. I recognise that it is sometimes necessary or sensible to modify a scheme once construction has started. I do not intend to penalise authorities in these instances and, provided such changes are agreed with the Welsh Office in advance, any cost implications will also be exempt from the reduced rate of support.

In reaching this decision, I have been mindful of the strong local authority opposition to earlier proposals to reduce the overall rate of Transport Grant support to 90 per cent. I accept their views that this would impose too great a burden on them and lead to the demise of many worthwhile schemes. I am sure that my proposals offer a reasonable compromise that will achieve my overall aim.

My decision to introduce package funding in Wales reflects the Government's policy to achieve a balanced and integrated transport system in Wales. We have too long relied on the private car and while this still has a very important role to play, we need to invest in less environmentally damaging solutions. Extending Transport Grant support in this way provides a mechanism for local authorities to look at combinations of public transport and other alternative measures to alleviate transport problems in specific areas. As well as public transport, I will expect authorities to explore the possibilities of traffic management proposals and provision for cyclists and pedestrians. These arrangements will subsume the existing Bus Priority scheme.

The existing £5 million qualifying threshold for major road schemes will remain. I will also consider bids for major (over £5 million) public transport projects under Section 56 of the Transport Act 1968.

The working party also reported on a possible reduction in the duration of Transport Grant support. I accept their views that any move in this direction would discourage early scheme development work and encourage early settlement of contractors' and land compensation claims without necessarily obtaining the best value for money. I have not therefore made any changes to these arrangements.

HEALTH

Elderly People (Hospital Admissions)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the United Kingdom aged over 60 years have been admitted to hospital for one or more nights in each of the last three years. [5479]

Mr. Boateng: The information available is for the number of hospital spells for people age 60 and over in England. Information relating to Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland, respectively.

Number of hospital spells by duration of stay: age group—over 60 years

Heart Transplants

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many heart transplants were carried out in United Kingdom NHS hospitals on United Kingdom residents in the latest year for which figures are available; how many hospitals are approved for carrying out heart transplant operations; and when and by what means the last new heart transplant centre was approved. [5839]

Mr. Boateng: 278 heart-only transplants (out of a total of 437 cardiothoracic transplants, including heart, lung and heart/lung operations) were carried out, on United Kingdom residents in United Kingdom National Health Service hospitals, during 1996.

Eight hospitals in England are designated, by the National Specialist Commissioning Advisory Group, to carry out cardiothoracic transplant operations:

Harefield Hospital NHS Trust, Middlesex (in conjunction with the Royal Brompton, London)
Papworth Hospital NHS Trust, Cambridge
Northern General Hospital NHS Trust, Sheffield
South Manchester University Hospitals NHS Trust
Great Ormond Street Hospital for Children NHS Trust, London
St. George's Healthcare Trust, London
Freeman Group of Hospitals, Newcastle-upon-Tyne
University Hospital Birmingham NHS Trust.

Under the arrangements which apply in Scotland, Glasgow Royal Infirmary is approved to undertake heart transplants.

The last new heart transplant unit to be designated was the University Hospital, Birmingham, NHS Trust, with effect from April 1992. A bid from the unit was considered by the Supra Regional Services Advisory Group. After due consideration, the Advisory Group recommended to the then Secretary of State that the Unit should be included in the designation arrangements for cardiothoracic transplantation. In reaching this decision, availability of organs, geographical spread of transplant units and availability of suitable clinical expertise would have been taken into account.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for the past five years as a whole, the regions in which the heart transplant patients operated on in each of the United Kingdom approved NHS heart transplant centres resided. [5838]

Mr. Boateng: The information available is provided in the attached table. The table, taken from information in the Supra Regional Services Advisory Group Annual Reports, shows the number of finished consultant episodes for assessment and transplantation and therefore add up to a number significantly greater than the number of transplants carried out in the period.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Salaried Solicitors

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he is considering for ending the present legal aid system and replacing it by a network of salaried solicitors. [5620]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has appointed Sir Peter Middleton to undertake a review of civil justice and legal aid. A preliminary report is expected at the end of September. Any decisions on the future of legal aid will have to await the outcome of that review.

Access to the Law

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make it his policy to ensure that no citizen is deterred from having access to the law because of their financial circumstances. [5618]

Mr. Hoon: The Government's aim is to allow proper access to the law by reducing the price of civil litigation and its attendant delays and complexity. That is why the Lord Chancellor has asked Sir Peter Middleton to review civil justice and legal aid. We shall be able to look again at the policy on publicly funded access to the law in the light of that review.

Collateral Benefit and Fatal Accident Damages

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Law Commission plans to publish its consultation papers on (a) collateral benefit in personal injury claims and (b) fatal accident damages. [5118]

Mr. Hoon: The Law Commission hopes that publication of these two consultation papers will take place later this year.

Psychiatric Injury

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Law Commission report on psychiatric injury, responding to consultation paper 137, will be published. [5120]

Mr. Hoon: The Law Commission hopes that publication of the report on Liability for Psychiatric Illness, following consultation paper 137, will take place later this year.

Personal Injury Actions

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many personal injury actions were commenced in (a) the County Courts and (b) the High Court in (i) the last three months of 1996 and (ii) the first three months of 1997. [5115]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Andrew Dismore, dated 27 June 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of personal injury cases commenced in the county courts and the High Court.

Detailed figures for personal injury actions issued are not kept centrally in the form requested and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However, estimated figures, based on sample data, are shown below for the whole of 1996:

	Number
Writs and originating summonses (issued in the Royal Courts of Justice):	1,543
Summonses issued in the county courts.	253,500

No data is yet available for 1997.

Aggravated Damages

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Law Commission report on aggravated damages, responding to consultation paper 132, will be published. [5119]

Mr. Hoon: The Law Commission hopes that publication of the report on Aggravated, Exemplary and Restitutionary Damages, following consultation paper 132, will take place later this year.

PRIME MINISTER

Minister Without Portfolio

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Prime Minister what access (a) the Minister without Portfolio and (b) his personal staff have to information obtained by the security services. [5414]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 June 1997]: As with other Ministers, such access as is authorised under the relevant legislation and as is necessary for the performance of their duties.

OSCE (Parliamentary Delegation)

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Prime Minister if he will announce the membership of the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the OSCE. [6145]

The Prime Minister: I have appointed 13 representatives from the Parliament of the United Kingdom to act as the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the OSCE. The next meeting of the Assembly will take place in Warsaw from 5 to 8 July. The delegation will consist of eight Members of the Labour Party, three Members of the Conservative Party and two Members of the Liberal Democrat Party. I have also appointed a number of substitute delegates.

The appointment of Conservative and Liberal Democrat Party representatives and substitutes have been made on the basis of nominations by the parties concerned.

Representatives from the Government Benches will be:

The hon. Member for Swansea, East (Mr. Anderson), who will act as leader; the hon. Members for Stockton, North (Mr. Cook), for Tooting (Mr. Cox), for Birmingham, Hodge Hill (Mr. Davis), for Walsall, South (Mr. George), for Thurrock (Mr. Mackinlay) and for Dundee, West (Mr. Ross) and Baroness Ramsay of Cartvale.

Representatives from the Conservative Party will be:

The right hon. Members for East Devon (Sir Peter Emery) and for Wealden (Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith) and Viscount Montgomery of Alamein.

Representatives from the Liberal Democrat Party will be:

The hon. Members for Somerton and Frome (Mr. Heath) and for Richmond Park (Ms Tonge).

The following substitutes have been appointed to act as necessary on behalf of the delegates:

From the Government benches—the hon. Members for Cynon Valley (Ms Clwyd), for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen) and for Newcastle under Lyme (Mrs. Golding).

From the Opposition benches—the right hon. the Lord Jopling and the hon. and learned Member for North-East Fife (Mr. Campbell).

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Attorney-General what discussions have taken place in the past year in the North Atlantic Council on the International Court of Justice's advisory opinions of 8 July 1996 on the legality of nuclear weapons. [4912]

Mr. Fatchett: I have been asked to reply.

The advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the legality of nuclear weapons has been discussed in NATO, in particular by the Staff Group of the Nuclear Planning Group. NATO allies agree that the Alliance's strategy of war prevention, including its nuclear component, is fully compatible with the United Nations Charter and international law.

CABINET OFFICE

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will list the meetings he held with (a) ministerial colleagues and (b) others on each day from 16 June to 20 June. [5619]

Mr. Mandelson: I have nothing to add to the replies I have already given the hon. Member.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what use he plans to make of the Internet to make Government more open. [5103]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This Department will continue to develop its programme of Internet publishing to facilitate the wider dissemination of Foreign and Commonwealth Office news and information material, in line with the Open Government Code of Practice. This includes guidance on how to complain for those dissatisfied with Consular Services provided at British Embassies, High Commissions or consulates overseas.

It is planned to establish websites for the following forthcoming international meetings which the UK will host: the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting, the EU Presidency, the Asia-Europe Meeting and the "Summit of the 8".

For an account of "FCO On-Line" (http://www.fco.gov.uk/), the world-wide web service of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the then Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the previous right hon. Member for Richmond and Barnes on 11 March 1997, Official Report, columns 151–52.

Some British missions overseas also maintain Internet websites and for a list of these I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs gave in another place on 3 June 1997, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 19–20.

Special Operations Executive

Mr. Andy King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to release more records of the wartime Special Operations Executive. [6218]

Mr. Robin Cook: The next batch of SOE records for release, covering the Balkans, will be the largest so far. They have been transferred to the Public Record Office, and will be opened on 1 July 1997. Further SOE records will be released in due course.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Airline Merger

Miss McIntosh: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she will take to ensure that the proposed merger between British Airways and American Airlines will not prove to have anti-competitive consequences. [4632]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 26 June 1997]: The UK competition authorities are currently considering the proposed alliance between British Airways and American Airlines, in consultation with the European Commission. It is not the practice of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade to comment publicly on the timing or substance of competition cases in which she will be responsible for making a decision.

Military Equipment Sales (Indonesia)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what military equipment is being sold to Indonesia by British defence companies; and which companies are making such sales. [1975]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 16 June 1997]: Statistics are available in the House of Commons Library which list by destination and by category the number of export licences issued. The latest date for which these are currently available is 30 June 1996. The following table is extracted from these statistics and relates to export licences issued for military goods to Indonesia from 1995 to June 1996. They are listed by the Export of Goods (Control) Order category for the main goods on the export licence:

1995		1st half 1996
ML1–3	ML11–18	ML2–2	ML13–2
ML2–2	ML13–3	ML5–1	ML14–2
ML3–3	ML14–8	ML6–3	ML15–4
ML4–1	ML15–9	ML7–2	ML24–2
ML5–7	ML24–1	ML10–18	PL5006–1
ML6–14	PL5006–7	ML11–6	PL5017–2
ML10–9	PL5027–4

Export licences issued do not necessarily equate to actual sales; the Licensing Authority does not receive information on goods shipped. Any more detailed information on the licences themselves could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Licensing Authority does not have information on non-licensable equipment which may be intended for use by military entities.

The Foreign Secretary announced in Parliament on 22 May Official Report, column 135, that the Government will not permit the sale of arms to regimes that might use them for internal repression or international aggression. Whilst we support a strong UK defence industry, such support must go hand in hand with ensuring that exports are properly regulated.

Ministers have therefore initiated an urgent joint FCO/DTI review of the criteria used in considering licence applications for the export of conventional arms to all countries, including of course, Indonesia. The new criteria will be made available to the House of Commons when the review is complete.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which British banks were granted export credit guarantee cover to finance British companies supplying military, security and police equipment or services to Indonesia since 1988; and if she will list (i) the amount of export credit guarantees provided in each case (ii) the services and equipment covered and (iii) for which countries the exports were destined. [3382]

Mrs. Roche: ECGD's current exposure on defence contracts with Indonesia (including police requirements) is in excess of £1 billion. A larger number of contracts are being supported involving a number of UK manufacturers and financing banks. As mentioned in ECGD's Annual Report and Trade Accounts, ECGD supported business included sale of Hawk Aircraft and the Scorpion Family of vehicles. Other supported business included Armoured Personnel Carriers, Forensic Laboratory Equipment and Aircraft Simulators.

ECGD is constrained by legal commitments not to give details of contract, without consulting the companies concerned. In view of the large number of banks and contracts involved, disproportionate costs would be involved in such a consultative exercise.

On 22 May, Official Report, column 135, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs announced that the Government will not permit the sale of arms to regimes that might use them for internal repression or international aggression. Whilst we support a strong UK defence industry, such support must go hand in hand with ensuring that exports are properly regulated.

Ministers have therefore initiated an urgent joint FCO/DTI review of the criteria used in considering licence applications for the export of conventional arms to all countries, including of course, Indonesia. The new criteria will be made available to the House when the review is complete.

IDEX 97

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many British companies have been given public funds to attend IDEX 97; and if she will list the companies indicating the amount of the funding each received. [3699]

Mrs. Roche: The latest IDEX Exhibition took place in Abu Dhabi, 16–20 March 1997. The DTI provided support for UK firms to exhibit in the form of grants towards the cost of participation. Support totalling £380,000 was provided via the Defence Manufacturers Association to 48 companies exhibiting at this event. A further 15 companies were part of the UK group but either did not apply for or were ineligible for grant. A list of UK companies participating is being placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

TREASURY

Jobs

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to Treasury press release 60/97 of 4 June 1997, what is his definition of a real and lasting job. [3357]

Mrs. Liddell: The Chancellor of the Exchequer's "Getting Europe to Work" initiative (announced in Treasury Press release 60/97) is about promoting job creation and social cohesion in Europe. It focuses on the need for a skilled, trained and adaptable labour force and a flexible labour market, underpinned by minimum standards of fairness and decency including a national minimum wage. The Government is committed to introduce programmes to help young people and the long-term unemployed move from welfare and into work.

These policies are aimed at creating and underpinning real and lasting jobs. They therefore mark a break from past cycles of unemployment followed by places on dead-end schemes and brief periods of unskilled temporary work which did nothing to enhance people's long term employment prospects or reduce their dependence on welfare.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the special advisers in his Department, the Minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in his Department in the year up to 1 May. [5348]

Mrs. Liddell: Four paid Special Advisers have been appointed in the following capacities:

Ed Balls: Chancellor's Economic Adviser

Charlie Whelan: Chancellor's Press Adviser

Ed Miliband: Special Adviser to the Chief Secretary

Andrew Maugham: Special Adviser to the Chief Secretary.

They are employed under terms and conditions based on the model contract for Special Advisers, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. They advise, in accordance with Schedule 1 (part 1) of the model contract, on the full range of subjects dealt with by the Treasury. Their principal areas of responsibility are as follows:

Ed Balls: Public expenditure; growth; windfall levy; EU and European Monetary Union; international economic issues; welfare to work; debt management issues; low pay.

Ed Miliband: Welfare to work; public expenditure; low pay; taxation; industry; devolution; financial services; briefing on the economy; women's issues.

Andrew Maugham: Public expenditure (including comprehensive spending reviews); financial services; value for money in the public services; public sector pay; export credit; public/private partnerships; accounting issues.

Charlie Whelan: Presentation of Treasury policies in all areas.

In the year to 1 May 1997, three Special Advisers were employed in the Treasury. Their dates of employment during that period were: 1 May 1996 to 1 May 1997; 9 May 1996 to 24 April 1997 and 13 May 1996 to 1 May 1997.

Euro Coins

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to the United Kingdom of minting coins for the euro if the United Kingdom adopts the single currency according to the specifications currently before the European Council. [5394]

Mrs. Liddell: The Chancellor has not made any estimate of the cost of producing euro coins if the United Kingdom were to adopt the single currency. The costs would depend on detailed specifications of the coins beyond the scope of the proposal from the European Commission.

Unemployment

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what targets he has for the reduction of unemployment (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) in England and (c) in London. [4116]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 26 June 1997]: Our policies aim to secure the goal of high and stable levels of employment. With this in mind, we will be announcing in the Budget details of our proposals to help young and long-term unemployed people move from welfare to work. We have not, however, set targets for the reduction of unemployment at either the national or local levels.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons aged under 25 years are registered unemployed in the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland. [5560]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Dr. Ashok Kumar, dated 27 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on how many persons under 25 years are registered unemployed in the Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland parliamentary constituency

The data you have requested can only be derived from the monthly count of people claiming unemployment-related benefits (i.e. Unemployment Benefit and Income Support which were replaced by Jobseeker's Allowance in October 1996, or National Insurance credits). Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign on the designated day are counted.

In April 1997, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 937 claimants aged 18 to 24 years in the constituency of Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland parliamentary constituency.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made as to whether the unemployment figures published by his Department accurately reflect the number of people unemployed. [5490]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Sir Richard Body, dated 27 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on whether the unemployment figures accurately reflect the number of people unemployed.

I am responsible for deciding the form, coverage and timing of release of statistics issued by ONS, taking into account the views of customers. ONS consulted customers on the future presentation of labour market statistics; the consultation exercise was launched through an article in the Labour Market Trends published on 8 May. These proposals included the possibility of producing a monthly report from the LFS. Comments on the proposals should have been sent to ONS by 14 June.

The proposals set out for consultation reflect the House of Commons Employment Select Committee recommendation that more prominence should be given to the measure of unemployment which is based on the internationally agreed ILO definition.

ONS will publicly make available a response commanding wide support. The Government is committed to ensuring the widest possible acceptable of these statistics.

Home Births

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of babies were born at home in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995 and (iii) 1996. [5275]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Ronnie Fearn, dated 27 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your recent parliamentary question on the proportion of live births at home.

The percentages of live births occurring at home for the countries and years requested are shown below

	1994	1995	1996
England	1.8	1.9	2.1
Scotland[1]	0.7	0.9	0.8
Wales	1.9	2.1	2.1

[1] All livebirths outside hospital.

Low Pay

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people earn less than £3.50 per hour in the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland. [5561]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Dr. Ashok Kumar, dated 27 June 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on earnings in the Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland parliamentary constituency.

The latest information, from the New Earnings Survey (NES) April 1996, precedes the creation of Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland parliamentary constituency. Data for the parliamentary constituencies before they were redefined prior to the last General Election are given below:

Employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey pay-period was not affected by absence NES, April 1996

Percentage of employees with hourly earnings (excluding overtime) less than £3.50

	Langbaurgh	Middlesbrough	Redcar
Full-time	10.9	7.5	4.7
Part-time	27.8	33.0	38.5
All	14.6	15.6	10.3

The Finance Bill

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to publish the Finance Bill; and when he will make notes on the Bill's clauses available to hon. Members. [3506]

Mr. Gordon Brown [pursuant to his reply, 11 June 1997, c. 448]: The Finance Bill will be published by The Stationery Office on Tuesday 8 July. Explanatory Notes on the Bill's clauses will be placed in the Vote Office and the Libraries of the House that day. Copies of the Bill will be available to Members from the Vote Office at the conclusion of the Budget debate on Monday 7 July.

DEFENCE

Married Quarters

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was paid in fees to National Westminster Markets Ltd. for preparing and completing the asset sale of the Ministry of Defence married quarters to Nomura Investment Bank. [4042]

Mr. Spellar: I am currently considering our policy of withholding the information requested under exemption 7 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information and hope to reach a decision shortly.

Nuclear Weapons (Costs)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the proportion of the defence budget for (i) each of the last 10 years and (ii) the current year spent on (a) capital spending and (b) running costs for nuclear weapons. [4755]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 23 June 1997]: Polaris and Trident capital and running costs for years 1987–88 to 1996–97 as a percentage of the defence budget are as follows:

	Capital costs	Running costs
1987–88	3	2
1988–89	4	1

	Capital costs	Running costs
1989–90	4	1
1990–91	4	1
1991–92	5	1
1992–93	4	1
1993–94	4	1
1994–95	3	1
1995–96	2	1
1996–97	2	1

The estimate for 1997–98 for capital costs represents 1 per cent. of the 1997–98 defence budget. No consolidated estimate of Polaris and Trident running costs for 1997–98 is yet available. The costs of the WE177 free-fall nuclear bomb which will go out of service by 31 March 1998 and the Lance nuclear artillery system which was withdrawn from service in 1992–93 are not recorded separately. However, records show that there has been no major capital expenditure on WE177 in the last four years.

SCOTLAND

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what use he plans to make of the Internet to make Government more open. [5101]

Mr. Dewar: The Scottish Office already makes use of the Internet to publish electronically information about its work. An updated Web site is being developed to replace the current version, which has been available since August 1995. The updated site will provide further information about the business of the Department, including named contacts; full text of Departmental publications, including press releases, consultation papers and statistical bulletins; national and Departmental Charter standards and information about performance against these; information about Departmental complaints procedures; and regulatory forms and guidance.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Home Affairs and Devolution will launch a separate Scottish Devolution Web site in Edinburgh on 30 June. This will provide details of the Government's proposals for a Scottish Parliament including access to Ministerial speeches, details of meetings and Parliamentary proceedings.

In addition, the Scottish Office is examining the delivery of further services electronically where that will deliver better quality or efficiency.

Health Service (Administration)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list for each national health service trust operating in Scotland the names of the (a) chief executive, (b) chairman, (c) executive directors and (d) non-executive directors indicating the correspondence address for the trust; [5126]

(2) if he will list for each health board in Scotland the names of the board (a) general manager, (b) chairman, (c) executive directors and (d) non-executive directors indicating the correspondence address for the health board. [5128]

Mr. Galbraith: The information sought is lengthy and I will write to the honourable Member. These details will take account of appointments I have announced which will be effective from 1 July. A copy of this information will be placed in the Library.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the special advisers in his Department, the Minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in his Department in the year up to 1 May. [5366]

Mr. Dewar: My Department employs two Special Advisers, Ms Wendy Alexander and Mr. Murray Elder. Both are responsible to me. They are employed under the terms and conditions based on the model contract for Special Advisers, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Both advise on the wide range of issues dealt with by my Department in accordance with Schedule 1 (Part 1) of the Model Contract. Mr. Elder advises specifically on education and industry matters and with issues relating to agriculture, the environment and fisheries. Ms Alexander advises on health and the Arts, local government, housing and transport. In addition, both deal with matters relating to Home Affairs and Devolution.

Two Special Advisers were employed by my Department in the year up to 1 May 1997.

Fox and Mink Factory Farms

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many fox and mink factory farms there are in Scotland by county. [5557]

Mr. Chisholm: There are no fox or mink farms in operation in Scotland.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce his proposals for the dates, times, venues and membership for meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee during the current parliamentary session; if he will list the proposed dates, times, venues and membership; and if he will make a statement on the role of the Scottish Grand Committee. [2586]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 10 June 1997]: The Scottish Grand Committee is a forum for all Scottish Constituency MPs to consider and debate issues of relevance to Scotland. I intend that this continue. It is proposed that eight meetings will take place in 1997–98 on the basis of four subjects to be chosen by the Government for debate and two each to be debated on Liberal Democrat and the Scottish National Party subjects.

I will announce the provisional timetable for Scottish Grand Committee meetings to the House in due course.

Natural Heritage Designations Review

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the outcome of the natural heritage designations review discussion paper. [3823]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 23 June 1997]: We have received almost 80 responses to the discussion paper published last year following the Review of Natural Heritage Designations. Many of these responses are of considerable length and include detailed comments on the issues raised in the discussion paper. We are currently giving careful consideration to all the points made by respondents before taking decisions on the need for changes to the present system of land-based natural heritage designations in use in Scotland.

Drugs

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by type of drug the number of persons for each police authority (a) cautioned, (b) proceeded against in a magistrates court and (c) tried at the Crown court for possession of a proscribed drug in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995 and (iii) the last 12 month period for which figures are available. [4791]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 19 June 1997]: Formal police cautions are not used in Scotland. Details of the number of persons proceeded against in all courts and the number proceeded against in solemn courts for possession of a controlled drug in 1994 and 1995 by type of drug and police force area are given in the tables below. Information is not available on the number of trials for persons proceeded against in solemn courts. Data for 1996 will not be available until the late autumn.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Green Belt Policy

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement regarding his Department's policy towards building on land designated as Green Belt. [5606]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 22 May 1997, Official Report, column 152.

Biotech Companies (Liquid Waste)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with the Advisory Committee for Genetic Modification about its consideration of allowing direct discharge of untreated liquid wastes from biotech companies into the environment. [5647]

Angela Eagle: The Health and Safety Commission's Advisory Committee on Genetic Modification (ACGM) is currently considering, in consultation with interested bodies, the matter of direct discharge of those untreated liquid wastes which are judged, on the basis of thorough risk assessment, not to pose a risk of harm to the environment. This matter is covered by the Genetically Modified Organisms (Contained Use) Regulations 1992, as amended in 1996. The Health and Safety Executive enforces these Regulations and will consider ACGM's advice before agreeing with the relevant Departments (so far as matters relate to the environment) the best way to proceed.

Water Companies (Investment)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the proportion of water service companies' total capital investment in (a) water leakage reduction, (b) renewal of mains water supply pipes, (c) sewage treatment and (d) replacement of public sewers in each of the past three years. [5154]

Angela Eagle: Information on total capital expenditure in sewage treatment and maintenance of mains water supply pipes and public sewers, generally referred to as maintenance of underground assets, is published in summary in OFWAT's annual reports on the "Financial Performance and Capital Investment of the Water Companies in England and Wales". Copies of these reports are available in the Library.

Specific figures for expenditure on leakage reduction are not available, as spending on leakage is allocated across a number of expenditure headings in the water companies' July Returns to OFWAT. These returns give details of the companies' regulated activities, service to customers and expenditure on both capital investment and operating costs in the previous year. Copies of these returns are available in the Library.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what investment was made by Severn Trent plc in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995 and (iii) 1996 in (a) replacement and renewal of main water supply pipes and (b) replacement and renewal of public sewers. [5153]

Angela Eagle: Information on individual water companies' investment in the maintenance of water supply pipes and public sewers, generally referred to as maintenance of underground assets, is published in OFWAT's annual reports on the "Financial Performance and Capital Investment of the Water Companies in England and Wales". Copies of these reports are available in the Library.

Council Tax

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to make changes to council tax band differentials. [5282]

Mr. Raynsford: The question of whether any changes should be made to the ratios between council tax bands is one that the Government will wish to discuss with the Local Government Association and others before reaching a view.

Water Charges

Mr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to reduce the variation in charges levied for water supply by different water supply companies, with special reference to variations within the same geographical areas. [5267]

Angela Eagle: Water charges levied by individual water companies are a matter for the Director General of Water Services, who is responsible for setting price limits for water and sewerage services.

The Director General is currently conducting a periodic review of price limits which will set the framework for charges from 1 April 2000.

Light Pollution

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy in respect of light pollution in rural areas. [5302]

Angela Eagle: The Government believes that the intrusiveness of lighting in rural areas should be kept to a minimum and that problems that may arise from artificial lighting are most appropriately dealt with by raising public awareness and by providing guidance on how these prolems might be mitigated.

These issues and the wider ranging concerns of light pollution are now being considered by my officials.

Radioactive Contamination

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he received from his French counterpart in respect of the level of radioactive contamination recently discovered in the English Channel off Cap de la Hague; and what plans he has to communicate with the Channel Islands states authorities over the environmental threat posed by the radioactive discharges. [5338]

Angela Eagle: No recent representation has been received from the French authorities in respect of radioactivity in the English Channel.

Monitoring carried out by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in the English Channel shows that the contamination of marine foodstuffs and environmental indicator materials attributable to discharges of radioactivity from the Cap de la Hague reprocessing plant is of negligible radiological significance.

Officials of United Kingdom Departments meet representatives of the Channel Islands states on a regular basis to discuss matters of common interest.

Water Meters

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps are being taken to monitor the impact of the introduction of pre-payment water meters. [5380]

Angela Eagle: The Director General of Water Services informs me that OFWAT is actively monitoring the use of pre-payment water units.

The legality of the installation of these units is to be the subject of a forthcoming judicial review and their use will be considered as part of the Government's review of the system of water charges, which we announced at the Water Summit on 19 May. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside on 25 June 1997, Official Report, column 514, on the commencement of the review.

Train Operating Companies

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much was paid by OPRAF in 1996–97 to each of the train operating companies under its performance regime; and how much those train operating companies paid to Railtrack under the access contract performance regime indicating separately (a) supplementary access charges and (b) performance payments. [4581]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The payments to and from train operating companies under the performance regime in franchise agreements are a matter for the Franchising Director. I understand that he will publish these details in his Annual Report in the coming weeks. Payments under the incentive schemes which operate between Railtrack and the train operating companies are commercially confidential to the companies concerned.

Aircraft Departure Slots

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on BAA's policy in respect of aircraft queuing for take-off in order to maximise the number of departure slots. [5400]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The determination of departure slots at the UK's major airports is a matter for Airport Co-ordination Ltd. (ACL), in conjunction with BAA and National Air Traffic Services Ltd. ACL is wholly owned by 10 UK airlines. There is no policy on aircraft queuing to maximise the number of departure slots.

Coastguard

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many coastguard watch assistants originally recruited for (a) operational and (b) administrative duties are currently employed within HM Coastguard; [5597]

(2) how many Coastguard watch assistants are earning less than (a) £6,000 and (b) £7,000 per annum; [5598]

(3) how many staff were employed in Coastguard Agency HQ for each of the last three years; [5599]

(4) if he will list for each of the last five years Coastguard staff serving in the grades (i) regional controller, (ii) deputy regional controller, (iii) district controller/officer, (iv) station officer and (v) coastguard officer excluding those employed at Coastguard HQ. [5600]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Coastguard Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 27 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about staff levels and earnings in the Coastguard Agency.

PQ 5597

Of the initial Coastguard Watch Assistants recruited (174 operations and 34 administration), 150 operations and 30 administration remain in post.

PQ 5598

(a) No Coastguard Watch Assistants earn under £6,000 per annum (pro rata).

(b) Currently 113 Coastguard Watch Assistants (79 full and 34 part time) earn less than £7,000 (pro rata). They all currently earn £6,928.00 per annum with a pay award pending which will be backdated to April 1997.

Manchester Airport

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he has received an application for a grant for rail freight to the construction site of runway two at Manchester Airport; and if he will make a statement. [5455]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We announced the award of almost £2.2 million in freight facilities grant on 23 June. The grant will lead to construction of a new temporary connection to the Manchester Airport Branch railway line so that the 1.4 million tonnes of limestone needed for the second runway can be carried by rail rather than by road, thereby avoiding 70,000 lorry journeys between the Peak District and Manchester.

The grant underlines the Government's commitment to getting freight off the road and onto the railway. It is good news for the rail industry and good news for the environment.

Cycling

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will encourage rail operators to sign the voluntary code of practice relating to the promotion of cycling. [5806]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I was delighted to have the opportunity to encourage operators to adopt the voluntary code of practice, Providing for Cyclists, when I spoke at the ceremony to announce it. The code is fully consistent with the Government's desire to see proper facilities for cyclists who wish to use the railway. We are currently reviewing the Franchising Director's Objectives, Instructions and Guidance and, as part of our review, we will be considering whether the Franchising Director should take further action to encourage increased provision for the carriage of cycles on trains.

Train Services (South-West)

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what plans he has to review levels of train services to Penzance; [5485]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact on local businesses of the recent reductions in the train service between Plymouth and Penzance; [5487]

(3) what plans he has to ensure that the level of rail service in the south west is sufficient to promote economic development in the region. [5486]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Franchising Director specifies minimum levels of service through the Passenger Service Requirement (PSR) which is incorporated in franchise agreements with train operating companies. Services operated over and above those required in the passenger service requirement are a commercial matter for the franchisee. There are no plans to review the PSRs relating to train services to Penzance.

There has been no reduction either in the PSRs or in Summer 1997 timetables for services between Plymouth and Penzance. On the contrary, South Wales and West has introduced a new daily service between Manchester and Penzance with effect from the summer timetable, and Great Western has introduced a number of new services on Sundays between Paddington and Penzance. There have been some operational problems in recent months which have affected service performance. The Government has made no assessment of the impact of local business of the recent operational problems in the south-west.

The Franchising Director closely monitors service performance and operators are penalised for cancellations and delays. Passengers are entitled to compensation for services which are below specified standards under the terms of franchise operators' Passenger's Charters. The Government wants to see greater use of the railway, higher levels of investment in the rail network, proper enforcement of train operators' services commitments and all the benefits of having a national railway network.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Jet Ski Safety

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has for new measures to improve jet ski safety. [5459]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have been asked to reply.

Local authorities already have powers to make byelaws to regulate seaside pleasure boats for the prevention of danger, obstruction or annoyance to persons bathing in the sea or using the seashore.

In addition, the Coastguard Agency promotes the safe use of recreation craft through national campaigns, like the primary schools sea safety campaign and local accident prevention projects. The Sea Safety Liaison Group set up by the RNLI, with the Coastguard Agency and other bodies, also promotes this work. The Agency has also launched a consultative document, "Non-legislative measures for the improved safety of non-regulated pleasure vessels", to promote debate and draw together views from a wide range of authorities, organisations and bodies about the ways in which incidents can be reduced. So far the Coastguard Agency has received over 20 responses which are currently being analysed.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 296

SESSION 1997–98

16th June—27th June 1997

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments [illegible] under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
